ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, JANUARY 5, 1880.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Dec. 15; Madras and Allahabad, Dec. 13; Calcutta, Dec. 12.

THE reports on the season and crops for the week ending Dec. 2, 1879, are :—Slight rain fell in most of the districts of the Madras Presidency. In Bombay, the North Western Provinces and Oudh, the Central Provinces, and the Punjab, unusually cold weather has caused some slight damage to crops. The cold is also noticeable in Bengal, Central India, and Rajputana. Rain is wanted in Orissa, and the crops on high unirrigated lands in Cuttack have begun to suffer. On the whole the prospects of the winter harvest are good, while the spring crops also promise very well. Fever is still prevalent, except in Madras, British Burma, and Assam.

THE health reports for the same week are as follow :—Bombay: Fever abating in Gujerat; prevalent in Hyderabad, Sind, and Kanara. Bengal: Cholera severe in cyclone districts of Chittagong; some cholera and small-pox also reported in places; fever still prevalent in parts of Orissa and some other places. North West Provinces and Oudh: Health improving and fever abating. Punjaub: Delhi and Hissar, fever decreasing; prevalent in Jullundur, Lahore, and Rawul Pindi. Central Provinces : Fever continues in Hoshangabad. British Burma: General health good. Assam: Healthy. Rajputana: Malarious fever very prevalent in Serohi; elsewhere fever abating.

THE following telegrams have been sent to us from the India-office for publication :—

"FROM THE VICEROY, DEC. 30.—Bright reports Norman attacked at Gandamak yesterday by Azmatullah Khan and Lughman Chiefs, with about 2,000 followers; enemy driven off. Our loss, Lieutenant Wright, R.A., and one man killed, one man wounded. Norman advances to-day to reoccupy Seh Baba and Lataband. Roberts telegraphs, Cabul, 27th.—Baker marched for Kohistan with 1,700 infantry, Guides cavalry, and four guns. All walled enclosures around Sherpur are being levelled, and position otherwise strengthened. Mahomed Jan has taken Musa Khan to Wardak. Country round Cabul rapidly quieting down."

"FROM VICEROY, JAN. 1. 1880.—News from Roberts to 30th reports Baker returning from Kohistan, having reached and destroyed Mir Batcha's fort without opposition. Several headmen of Kohistan and Logar have sent to ask if they may come in. "Enemy's losses estimated at nearly 3,000. Seh Baba and Lataband being reoccupied. Weather fine, but very cold. Telegraph restored between Peizeran and Jagdalak."

"FROM VICEROY, JAN. 2.—Roberts reports, 31st, headmen of Kohistan villages and districts revisited by General Baker have come in. Squadron 12th Bengal Cavalry reached Lataband 29th. Country quiet. Communications restored. People returning to Cabul in numbers, and supplies coming in."

THE telegrams received this morning from Calcutta contain only the following items of interest :—

"On the 29th ult, Azmatullah Khan, Mahomed Hussein, late Governor of Jellalabad, and other Lughman chiefs, with about 2,000 men, attacked Colonel Norman at Jagdalak. The enemy were driven off. Our loss was Lieut. Wright, of the Royal Artillery, and one man killed and one man wounded. The State prisoners Yahiya Khan and Zaharia Khan have been removed from Lahore. Their destination is unknown, but it will probably be somewhere down the couutry.

"At a State banquet given on New Year's Day to commemorate the proclamation of the Imperial title the Viceroy made a long speech, in which he reviewed last year's events. The year, he said, had given to India, on her most exposed frontier, an established military line of defence, which he trusted she would never surrender, for its value had been severely tested and clearly recognised. After alluding to the irreparable national loss sustained by the death of Sir Louis Cavagnari, he went on to speak of the recent crisis at Cabul. The anxiety felt here and at home was, he admitted, natural, but was not altogether reasonable. The Indian Government had been charged with want of foresight in not doubling the strength of Sir Frederick Roberts's force, but they would have wanted even sight had they done anything so unwise. Such an error would have quadrupled all the difficulties and delays in reaching Cabul, and would have left the troops there exposed to infinitely greater perils. He had been favoured by the Duke of Wellington with a memorandum written by the late Duke on the conditions of Afghan warfare. What had impressed him most in that paper was the supreme importance attached by its experienced and illustrious writer to the fact that the numbers of a force operating in Afghanistan must always be strictly limited in exact relations to the carefully ascertained means and conditions of supply. Sir F. Roberts had succeeded in collecting supplies sufficient to place his entire force beyond the risk of danger—an achievement which marked his military capacity even more unmistakably than did his victories in the field. That skilful general well knew wherein his real strength lay, and neither he nor his garrison ever felt the slightest anxiety. Every telegram and every letter received from its officers breathed the same proud, but not irrational, confidence which finally justified the dauntless action of its commander when, disdaining to remain any longer on the defensive, he issued forth without awaiting reinforcements, and completely defeated and dispersed an enormous force by which he was surrounded. The new year, his Excellency went on to say, opens under happier auspices and with more hopeful auguries than the old; but our soldiers' work in Afghanistan is not yet over, nor could it be relinquished or relaxed till its object was completely attained. That object was not the acquisition of territory, but the firm establishment of durable foundations for the future peace of India, and solid, self-acting guarantees for the future good behaviour of India's Afghan neighbours. The power of this empire must be sensibly felt and adequately recognised by those on whose lasting appreciation of it its peaceful maintenance depended. Not till then could we sheath the sword or hang up the shield. But it would not be sufficient for the Afghans to recognise the power of the empire; it would be a longer, more difficult, and more trying, but not, he hoped, an impossible undertaking to ensure their eventual recognition also of its justice and generosity. The old year's task of retribution was over, and in Afghanistan our new year's task would, he trusted, be mainly one of reassurance and reconciliation."

From Candahar we hear that Fazullah Khan, the leader of the Herati troops, escaped after their defeat to Ghorian, where he is collecting a force to attack the Cabulis, who are virtually besieged in Herat. The country people are said to be bitterly excited and to attack them whenever they venture out in small parties. Fifty men of the regular cavalry, who had gone out to forage, were killed to a man by the villagers. Ayoob Khan seems to have first incited the Heratis to attack the Cabulis, and then taken part with them when the Heratis were getting the worst of it. He is a mere puppet in the hands of Abdullah Khan and the leaders of the troops. On hearing of the abandonment of Ayoob's projected march on Candahar, Sirdar Mir Afzul Khan left Farah and went to Lash Juwain with his family, intending to take refuge in Persia. The fort of Farah is now abandoned. The famine is very severe in Seistan, and the people are said to be selling their children to obtain food. The great bund across the Helmand, the destruction of which by a flood last winter caused the loss of the crops, is being repaired by the new Persian governor, who replaced the Ameer of Ghayn some months ago. He is said to be conciliating the people on both sides of the frontier.

THE Daily News correspondent at Cabul telegraphs that the military commission has reassembled to try the prisoners. Ten were hanged on Dec. 30. One is said to have killed Mr. Jenkyns, the secretary of the Embassy. The Lahore correspondent of the same paper says that the total killed in the recent fighting was ninety, including twenty officers; the wounded 280. The bodies of Capt. Spens, of the 72nd, and Capt. Hardy, of the Artillery, and Lieut. Forbes, of the 14th Bengal Cavalry, have been recovered.

THE Queen has telegraphed to Lady Roberts, who resides at Hampton-court Palace, her congratulations upon the recent victories of her son, Lieut. General Sir Frederick Roberts, at Cabul.

THE Invalide Russe of Wednesday last publishes a telegram from Tashkend reporting the arrival there on Nov. 25 of the Afghan sirdars Neik Mahomet Khan, brother to the late Shere Ali, and his cousin, the Ulema Hussein Khan, accompanied by a suite of eight persons. They fled from Cabul after the fighting which preceded General Roberts' entry into the city and solicited Russian hospitality. Another despatch of Dec. 14 states that the Afghan sirdar Abderahman Khan, who obtained leave to visit his relatives in Fergana, has fled from that province. These retreats are a natural sequel to the correspondence, the existence of which, as detected in Cabul, is elsewhere asserted. Like the presentation piece of plate, the Russian letters will presently become British property.

ON hearing of the Queen's recent indisposition the Maharaja of Benares caused telegraphic inquiries to be made which elicited a telegraphic reply from the Prince of Wales—"Queen quite well."

THE Times of India deprecates a ..y exhibition of ill-timed leniency in dealing with De Sa, the Eurasian, who recently attempted Lord Lytton's life. Our contemporary points out that the position of the Viceroy in India, where he stands as the symbol of our rule among an alien population abounding in fanatics, is very different to that of the Queen-Empress at home, and while her Majesty only gained a fresh claim to the affection of her people by the mercy she has extended from time to time to the weak-headed people who have attempted her life, the same clemency on the part of the Viceroy would be regarded as weakness. The punishment must be of such a nature as to best prove to all India the enormity of the attempt.

THERE is only one feeling of thankfulness throughout India that Lord Lytton has escaped a danger to which the rulers of great empires are, with all our growing civilisation, being more and more subjected. Lord Lytton has always mixed frankly with the crowd wherever his lot has been cast, and, though we would not have him forego this important cause of popularity, it now behoves those about him to see that he is properly protected. He is, of course, in no more danger than before this ludicrous attempt, but the ease with which De Sa might have effected his purpose calls the attention of the public to an actual peril.

THE Vienna correspondent of the Observer states that an expedition against Merv has been decided upon, to take place in the course of next spring. General Kauffman will command the expedition, which will be accompanied by the Emir of Bokhara and the Khan of Khiva.

THE Golos, referring to the flight of Abdul Rahman Khan, lays the blame on English policy, which, by destroying the power of Shere Ali, revived the old state of anarchy and gave room for the pretensions of various claimants. Russia, the Golos says, could not forcibly restrain her guest, who came voluntarily and lived so long peaceably on Russian soil.

IN an eloquent and forcible address to the young Rajput nobles at the Mayo College, Lord Lytton drew a parallel between the great Rajput class and the great English houses founded by our northern ancestors. "Both of them owe to the same characteristics the positions they have made, and still maintain, for themselves in the political hierarchy of an ancient race. Those characteristics are energy, fearlessness, the love of heathful exercise, an instinctive aptitude for active life, an instinctive scorn of all unmanly ease." His Excellency referred to Col. Walker's report, which pointed out that what was then most needed for the education of India's young rulers and nobles was an Indian Eton, and added, "Well, young gentlemen, that need is now supplied. Ajmere is India's Eton, and you are India's Eton boys."

IT it officially notified that, with the sanction of her Majesty's Government, as many of the retirements under the provisions of Government General Order No. 1 of Jan. 1, 1879, as remain unallotted on Dec. 31, 1879, will be held available for officers of all three presidencies up to March 31, 1880. This offer is restricted to officers who are qualified under Clause II. of the Government General Orders of Jan. 1, 1877, and who may have completed twenty-eight years' service on or before Dec. 31, 1879. Applications will be disposed of by the Government of India according to priority of proposed dates of retirement, preference being given, if necessary, to the senior applicant, should there be more than one for retirement on the same day. Officers of the Madras and Bombay armies should submit their applications in the usual manner to their respective Governments for communication to the Government of India.

THE army commission report was signed, the Allahabad paper believes, shortly before Sir Ashley Eden left Simla. Nothing will probably be definitely known of its recommendations until they have been considered by the authorities at home, but there appears to be a general belief in well-informed quarters that these include the retention of the post of Military Member of Council, or Minister for War; the abolition of the Madras and Bombay separate commands; the partition of all India into four large military divisions, each under a lieutenant general—viz., one for Bengal and the North West Provinces with headquarters at Allahabad or Lucknow; another for the Punjab, headquarters Rawul Pindi; a third for Bombay, including Sind, headquarters Puna; and a fourth for Madras, with Burma, headquarters Bangalore.

A CURIOUS charge of defamation has been brought against the Times of India by a Parsee undergraduate of Cambridge, who considers himself to be pointed at in a parody of the Heathen Chinee as having been not quite successful at Cambridge. The magistrate who tried the case ventured to be astonished at such lines appearing in a grave paper. Eventually the feelings of the complainant were soothed by an assurance that the editor was ignorant even of his existence, and the obnoxious headnote was formally withdrawn, solvuntur risu tabulæ.

THE results of Archdeacon Baly's inquiries as to the educational position of the Eurasian population have been made known to the Government without waiting on the report of his two fellow commissioners. He recommends training colleges in Bengal, extension of the free schools at Allahabad and Lahore, the imposition of a local rate, and compulsory education. Madras, Bombay, and British Burma have not been included in his inquiry. The archidiaconal functions in India will include a thorough visitation of the various stations in the Bengal Presidency. The local governments are asked to consult educational officers, railway managers, and catholic prelates on the same subject.

THE returns of the trade and navigation for British India for the first seven months of the current financial year, as compared with those for the corresponding period of last year, show that the value of merchandise imported was Rs.21,27,41,912, as against Rs.21,88,38,892, and that of merchandise exported Rs.35,18,03,577, as against Rs.32,84,03,692. The value of treasure imported was Rs.5,93,28,285, as against Rs.3,21,50,848, and that of treasure exported Rs.1,36,75,288, as against Rs.1,52,70,594. The gross amount of import duty collected was Rs.2,28,63,396, as against Rs.2,39,99,911, and of export duty Rs.27,62,794, as against Rs.26,57,162.

IN the first ten months of the bygone year the value of gold imported into India was Rs.1,25,25,918, and of that exported Rs.1,24,04,186; whilst the value of silver imported was Rs.7,74,15,154, and of that exported Rs.1,70,78,115. This leaves a balance of both metals, in favour of imports, of Rs.6,04,58,771.

THE assay value of silver coins and bullion received at the Indian mints during the first ten months of the bygone year was Rs.7,36,76,878, of which Rs.1,25,48,092 was received in Calcutta, and Rs 6,11,28,786 in Bombay. During the same period the amount coined and examined was Rs.7,53,17,521, of which Rs.1,31,25,711 was at Calcutta, and Rs.6,21,91,810 at Bombay.

ON Oct. 31 the whole amount of currency notes in circulation is given at Rs.13,58,91,970, against which the State held in coin Rs.6,54,85,489 in bullion Rs.1,16,29,095, and in Government paper, Rs.5,99,97,256.

THE proposal recently made by his Excellency Sir F. Haines that officers of the British service employed in the Garrison Instruction Staff should be permitted to retain their appointments for five years, whether the regiments to which they belong continue to remain in India or not, and that officers of the Garrison Instruction Staff, whether belonging to the British or Indian service, should vacate their appointments if proceeding on furlough on medical certificate out of India for more than six months, has received the sanction of Lord Cranbrook as Secretary of State for India and the Duke of Cambridge as Commander in Chief.

IN a farewell general order, eulogising General Sir Peter Lumsden, the Commander in Chief sketches the character of that distinguished officer. He is described as an accomplished soldier, of discretion and judgment, sagacious in council and fertile in resource, straightforward and honest in purpose, uniformly kindly in demeanour, and strictly impartial. His Excellency considers that the genius of Sir Peter Lumsden goes far to explain the excellent manner in which he himself has administered military affairs during the late war, and feels quite sure that in all praises he bestows on Sir Peter "he is joined by the assenting voice of the army in all its branches and departments." The Pioneer feels that it must be a comfort to the army, not being able to give utterance to its own feelings on the subject, to find the Commander in Chief thus accurately interpreting its sentiments.

A VERY useful map, giving a bird's-eye view of Sherpur Camp and neighbourhood from the hills to the north, has been issued by the Intelligence Branch of the Quartermaster General's office. The view includes the names and positions of fourteen villages and some rivers in the vicinity of Cabul.

THE railway administration has sustained a great loss in Egypt in the death of its president, General Marriott, C.S.I., who was buried on Dec. 18 at Cairo with military honours and in the presence of all the leading functionaries of Egypt and a vast crowd of private friends. His name will be familiar to all Anglo-Indians. He fulfilled various offices in India, and was for many years military secretary to the Government of the Bombay Presidency. In Egypt he won the respect and esteem of Europeans and Egyptians alike; both in private life as a man of high culture, a keen sense of honour, and a very kindly nature; and in public life, as a man of broad views and of a definite policy as regards the railways, which time, he always maintained, would be sure to prove the true one for Egypt. It is said that no successor will be appointed to the vacancy, the salary of which is £3,000 a-year.

THE Government of India has decided that warrant and non-commissioned officers and privates are to be considered eligible for examination in the degrees of honour in the native languages in the same manner as they are for the high proficiency tests, receiving the usual rewards.

THE Broad Arrow says that the practical abolition of the dua administrative system of the Army Medical Staff in India will date from Jan. 1. Orders have been issued for some of the executive officers of the "Imperial" Department to place themselves under the orders of the surgeons-general of the Indian medical services, and in the same way surgeons-major and surgeons of the latter will, in some of the circles, be at the disposal of administrative officers, who report direct to Sir William Muir. The dual set of principal medical officers will thus be gradually abolished, and the two services amalgamated, to the great advantage, not only of the Indian treasury, but of the public service.

THE ATTACK ON KONOMA.—NAGA HILLS.

THE terrace was carried along the entire front. In its centre there was a square tower some fifteen feet high, which afforded an excellent vantage-ground to our marksmen from which to direct their fire on the fortification still before us. Each terrace formed a separate fortification defensible from either side. The whole place was a series of forts within forts, and small towers and barricades and all manner of defences. Before us, on the right, lay a wall of stone and wood about twelve feet high; on the left was a portion of the hill cut almost straight down with a stone wall some six feet high on the top, and stone barricades wherever the ascent was practicable. The whole was surmounted by a palisade. Through the loop-holes of these fortifications the Nagas directed a steady fire upon us whenever we showed a face. But now we were in comparative safety, for, as their defences were meant to meet an attack from either side, we found ourselves in possession of a line of stone walls from behind which we could fire from in safety. For some time a brisk exchange of rifle shots was maintained, but the enemy showed no signs of submission or retreat. Meanwhile, the general, who was on the hills on our right with the guns, seeing that the enemy did not evacuate the village, hastened down and brought up the guns to our assistance. About 3.30 we got one position at a distance of about fifty yards from the citadel. The gun escort and the skirmishers of the 44th, who had been protecting them during the day, were also a most welcome reinforcement. After the guns had fired a few rounds of case shot and shell into the citadel the advance was sounded. The men, headed by all the officers of the 44th who were present, and by Major Cock, the deputy assistant adjutant general, dashed out from behind their cover with a shout, and tried to effect an entry, but in vain. They were met by a well-directed fire of musketry at all points from the loopholes and by a shower of rocks, stones, spears, and darts of all kinds. Two or three men were killed and several wounded in this charge. The general, seeing the futility of the attempt, sounded the retreat, so such of the men as escaped quickly rushed back into cover. The smallness of the number killed and wounded in this charge, considering the number of missiles directed against them, was due to the fact that as soon as they reached the foot of the enemy's barricades our men were in comparative shelter, for there was no flank fire covering the front of the position. Once more the guns opened fire, and shot and shell were poured in through the woodwork forming the parapet of the barricades as fast as the guns could be loaded; but Lieut. Mansel had to announce that his ammunition was expended, and there was no chance of getting a fresh supply for two days. By this time it was near five o'clock p.m. We had been fighting since ten a.m. Everyone was tired out. Still, if possible, Konoma was to be taken, so the general ordered a fresh charge. It was explained to the men that the place must be taken before night, so a rapid survey was taken of the walls in front, and the weakest-looking points selected by different parties. Col. Nuttall and some men made a sortie towards the left, and Major Cock and Lieuts. Forbes and Ridgeway towards the centre, Major Walker and Lieut. Boileau to the right. The men rushed with the greatest resolution against the walls and barricades and tried to help each other over. Col. Nuttall found the point which he tried on the left perfectly unassailable, so he remained close under the wall with his men. In the centre attack Major Cock and Lieuts. Ridgeway and Forbes fell, the former mortally wounded in the chest, the two latter dangerously injured. Lieut. Ridgeway was shot through the shoulder by an Enfield bullet, and Lieut. Forbes speared most severely by a javelin which was hurled into the air and fell into his back. The subadar major of the regiment was shot dead, and about six sepoys killed and several wounded. One man, who was pushed up the barricade by his friends behind, was dragged over and killed. Seeing the absolute hopelessness of their attack and that three of their officers were carried back wounded, the men had no alternative but to hasten back into cover. By this time it was almost quite dark. So, through downright fatigue and the uselessness of further efforts from the same point of attack, we had to desist from hostilities. We had done all that we could do, stormed the position three times, sixteen men were killed, and thirty wounded out of our small force; still the enemy remained in possession of their strongest fort, the citadel of the place. After the action some Hindustani and Assamese Nagas began to address us from behind their walls. They said they had killed two of the sahibs to-day, and that they would kill the remainder to-morrow. They also said, "We won't waste any more powder on you to-night. We will reserve it for to-morrow, and then we will attack you and kill you all." But about eight o'clock there was almost a complete silence. At nine the wooden parapet of the citadel and the houses in the upper part of the village were in flames. We found next morning that the whole place had been evacuated in the night, so we quietly took possession of it, and thus did we become masters of Konoma. —Pioneer.

IMPORTATION OF ARMS, &C.—A return has been published of arms and ammunition imported into the ports of British Burma during the months of July, August, and September last. Government imported into Rangoon 219,600cwt. of cartridges and 9,375lb. of gunpowder. "Private parties" as they are called officially, only imported into Rangoon, during the same period, 6,925lb. of gunpowder, 3,400 cartridges, and 30,000 cartridge cases.—Pioneer.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE NATIONAL INDIAN ASSOCIATION.*

WE are reminded by the opening notice in the January number of the Journal that the association has entered on its tenth year. That there is no flagging in the pursuit of the objects proposed to to be attained the pages before us bear ample testimony. No one can read the simple but earnest exposition of the endeavour made to extend an interest in Indian topics, as well as to co-operate in works of educational improvement, and "to promote goodwill between English and Indians," without wishing that the coming year may witness a large increase of power and success to cheer the indefatigable labourers. The contents of this month's number include a thoughtful and suggestive paper on the forthcoming census, and the contrasts which will be brought out strongly by the survey of the Indian and English populations. A clever sketch, entitled a "Great Indian Street," presents graphic pictures of the Bombay community. The exercitations on British rule in India do not strike us as particularly profitable, but it is doubtless useful that an arena be given for such harmless polemics. To our thinking the most valuable contribution is the account of the life and manner of the Kunbis, which has been extracted from a report made to his Highness the Nizam's Government. A touching tribute of Sanskrit song paid to the memory of Mr. Woodrow by Raja Surendro M. Tagore, and presented in an English form by Mrs. Nesfield, finds an appropriate place in the records of the association, witnessing at once to the spread of education and the growth of warm attachments between Englishmen and their Indian fellow-subjects, engendered by co-operation in the great work of social improvement.

ARCHÆOLOGY.*

THE first number of "The Antiquary," a magazine "devoted to the study of the past," gives good ground for expecting a prosperous future. Mr. Walford is known as one of the foremost among the "gleaners after Time," and varied contributions given in this, or promised in the next, number attest the strength of the corps of fellow-workers who support him. We note with much interest a communication by Mr. Borlase, who describes the discovery of an "Indian Money-cowrie" discovered in a British barrow a few miles from the Land's-End. Mr. Borlase desires to know of any parallel instance of Eastern objects occurring in our British tombs, and pertinently asks—"Is archæology at last coming to the assistance of philology in throwing light on our Aryan origin?" The contribution as yet, of a cowrie, is small and will be perhaps classed with the jade axes. The "Antiquary Exchange" offers special facilities for mutual barter or transfer of antiquarian objects among collectors, as the pages of the magazine does for the exchange of facts or opinions. We must say a word in praise of the publisher's part in the furnishing forth of the "Antiquary," whose appearance is, as it should be, old-fashioned, but most substantial and well lettered.

We have received the quarterly issue of the "American Antiquarian," published at Chicago, an excellent aid to all concerned in the elucidation of the antiquities of what Western conceit is apt to call the New World. The number before us is the first of the second year, and the learned editor informs us that much new material has accumulated, especially on the mound builders, the Indian languages, and the religious traditions and customs of the native races. Students of the correlation of the Mongolian races of Asia and America, as well as the instructive study of the comparative cultus of the so-called aboriginal races, will find valuable information in the pages edited by Dr. Peet.

CORRESPONDENCE.

FAMINES IN INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—It is time that the House of Commons should investigate the causes of recent famines in India. If it can be proved that these famines have been intensified, if not caused, by the blunders of British statesmen in India, it is desirable that the public voice in England should protest against the continuance of an Administration which would perpetuate these errors. Of late years two great impediments have been placed in the way of supplying food to the various provinces of the British Empire inhabited by 240 millions of human beings. 1. Large tracts of the most fertile land have been devoted to the cultivation of products which cannot be used as food. For instance, opium cannot be used as food, and a vast area of the best land in the Gangetic valley is devoted to the cultivation of opium. The influence and power of the British Government is exerted to maintain and extend the production of opium to the exclusion of corn cultivation. The peasantry are bribed to convert arable land into poppy land by the offer of advances in hard rupees. In other parts of India private speculators lend money to the peasants in order to induce them to cultivate cotton, indigo, jute, oilseeds, and sugar, to the exclusion of corn crops. A statement should be placed before Parliament showing the area of excellent land in each district cultivated for produce useless as food, and displaying the power which both Government and speculators and usurers exert to prevent these lands from being sown with corn. The peasantry who are employed in the servitude of growing opium and cotton crops must be fed. To feed them it is necessary that there should be good roads and water communication, and that there should be granaries at convenient distances. Now the second great impediment to which I allude has taken place in India since 1868 owing to the blundering measures of the Government. There has been a terrible check given to the formation of granaries. Capitalists will not establish large granaries unless they be secure of protection, and unless there exist good roads to and from the places where grain is to be stored. Now it is just in those places where the British Government gives protection, and to which it has made good roads, that grain cannot be stored. It does not pay to store grain in expectation of future famines if the owner of the grain is liable to be plundered by municipal chupprassies. It does not pay to store grain in towns afflicted with the octroi tax. It does not pay to prepay even 3 per cent. on the value of corn when years may elapse before the merchant can sell at a profit. I beg to call your attention to Sir John Strachey's speech published in page 21 of the Allahabad Pioneer Mail of the 29th ult., in which the Finance Minister for India confesses that during the past eleven years the power of the Executive Government has been insufficient to check foolish taxation by municipalities so called:—

"The Government of India having, as I have said, not succeeded in its efforts to reform all this by executive orders, has come to the conclusion that the only certain remedy is to be found in legislation which will place on all local authorities obligations impossible to be disregarded; which will prevent these duties operating as transit duties or interfering with the general interests of trade; and which will guard against collision with imperial taxation or with the general principles of our commercial policy."

But Sir John Strachey is, notwithstanding, a strenuous advocate for an octroi tax on grain and other articles of consumption, and, as long as the Government of India tolerates and admires this octroi, the storage of grain for future famines, becomes impossible, and the peasantry, who are forced to cultivate opium, cotton, indigo, &c., must, with their families every now and then die of starvation. No doubt there are considerable stores of grain in many villages not yet afflicted with octroi, but the Indian farmers and cultivators are usually very ignorant of the fluctuations in prices of corn, and are apt to sell when food is comparatively cheap to speculators who engross and monopolise the markets in times of scarcity and famine.—Your obedient servant,

Dec. 29, 1879. T.

THE LATE MAJOR HAY.

AMONG the deaths recorded last month was that of Major W. E. Hay, retired H.M. Indian Army, of whose career a correspondent has furnished us with some particulars. The only son of the late James Hay, Esq., of Collie Forest, Devon, and his wife, Lady Mary, youngest daughter of George, eighth Earl of Dalhousie, he entered the service in 1821, joining the Bengal European Regiment now known as 101st Royal Bengal Fusiliers. He was subsequently appointed brigade major of Agra, and in the Afghan campaign of 1839-41 commanded a Goorkha regiment raised for the service of Shah Shuja. In 1844 failing health obliged him to retire from actice service. He spent some time in South Africa, and made an unrivalled collection of the fauna of that country; subsequently resided at Marhobra, in the Himalaya, and at a later period was appointed assistant commissioner in Kulu. During his residence in the mountain region he devoted himself to ornithological and entomological pursuits. He was also made an honorary fellow of the Zoological Society in recognition of his unique presentation of the only specimen of the kyang, or wild ass, which has been brought alive to England. After his return to England, in 1859, Major Hay was well known for his interest in scientific pursuits, including, besides, numismatology. After a long illness, borne with characteristic patience, he died at Upper Norwood on December 12, and was interred in the family burying-ground at Cockpen, near Dalhousie Castle.

THE Englishman learns that Mr. C. D. Field, judge of Burdwan, is to be appointed a member of the Bengal Legislative Council, for the purpose of bringing in the proposed bill to amend the Rent Law in Bengal.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

COUNCIL BILLS.

THE continued large weekly drawings of Council bills would seem to imply either that Government had but little faith in the continuance of the improved rate of exchange, or that the payments in England were to be made to exceed the amount anticipated for the year. We were told in the budget that it was proposed to draw only the equivalent of £15,000,000 during the financial year on account of the unfavourable rate of exchange, though £16,500,000 were needed to reimburse the Home Treasury for the expenses there. As Government had on Nov. 1 drawn sufficient to give them in London £8,111,284, and have drawn 120 lakhs since, it is evident that they need tender for only £308,000 per week to make up the amount estimated in the budget. In case the present unexpected rate of exchange induces Government to draw the whole £16,500,000, they will need to tender £387,000 per week; of course in this case they will not need to make use of the sterling credit voted during the last sitting of Parliament. If they confine themselves to the £15,000,000 and exchange is maintained at its present rate, there will be a saving of something over a crore of rupees from the estimated loss by exchange of Rs.3,95,20,000. If, however, they draw to the extent of £16,500,000, the loss, if the present rate of exchange continues, will be Rs.3,18,12,000; still three-quarters of a crore less than the estimate. It will be seen that Sir John Strachey will have a pleasanter duty in preparing this year's budget than last. Not only is exchange better, and promises to continue so, but there is a gain of about sixty-five lakhs in opium, and the loss in import duties, from the extension of the limit of free cotton goods and reduction of valuations, will probably be considerably less than was anticipated. For the first six months of the financial year the total revenue from customs, excluding salt, is only Rs.3,90,000 less than last year, though there was an anticipated loss for the year of Rs.19,20,000. The import duty on cotton goods, on which the anticipated loss was fifteen lakhs for the year, shows for the six months a loss of only Rs.2,90,000. It is clear, therefore, that, had it not been for the second edition of the Afghan War, Government would have been in a very strong position as to its finances, and even now, with the restriction of loans for public works recommended by the Parliamentary Committee and confirmed by the Secretary of State, the position of Government paper is strong. With prudent financial management Indian Four per Cents. ought soon to be at par again. It is satisfactory to note that the foreign trade of the country has increased, if not improved in the shape of profits, since the beginning of the financial year as compared with 1878. The total value of imports and exports of merchandise amounts for the six months ending Sept. 30 last to Rs.47,82,00,000, against Rs.45,72,00,000 in 1878; while the combined value of merchandise and treasure amounted to Rs.54,08,00,000, against Rs.49,69,00,000 for 1878. With large crops now ripening for export and signs of improved trade at home we hope that the result of the coming season may be to show not only a large increase of business done, but one profitable to the mercantile community; it is quite time that the tide should turn.—Times of India.

THE OPIUM TRADE OF INDIA.

SOME portions of the English Press are again endeavouring to raise a cry against the opium trade of India. We are told for the hundredth, if not the thousandth, time that the late Emperor of China, in a moment of spasmodic virtue, grandiloquently said, "My people may be weak enough to use the poison, but it shall never be said that the State derived a revenue from what is the source of so much misery and vice." It would perhaps be well if the English newspapers who pin their faith to this epigram would look at home and remember that the very same doctrine applies to the liquor traffic of Britain. We are the last people in the world to defend a trade that can in any way be described as nefarious, but we cannot shut our eyes to the fact that the opium trade provides six-and-a-quarter millions sterling to the Indian Budget, and we feel bound to ask those who object to the trade how they propose to find the money they are so eager to take from us. It must be remembered that we did not invent the system. We found it here at a time when we were obliged to keep things much as we found them, and until a better mode of finding revenue be pointed out, we are afraid we must stick to the old sources. In spite of Exeter-hall orators and philanthropic friends, we certainly cannot afford to do without that one-seventh portion of our total income which opium brings in. We certainly cannot force upwards of six millions sterling of additional imposts upon a people already highly taxed—either for scientific frontier or anything else, however desirable. Such would be scientific effrontery with a vengeance. The simple fact is that, as matters go at present, we can literally do nothing but continue to send as much opium to China as the Chinamen are willing to pay for, and to derive as much pecuniary profit as possible from the transaction. The speeches and writings of those who advocate the immediate abolition of the traffic show that the authors can hardly have studied the question in detail. There are, as is well known in this country, two sources of opium supply. In British India, or virtually in Bengal, the Government monopolises the growth, manufacture, and sale of opium. A certain amount of land is set aside, the cultivator is entitled to advances of money to meet his requirements, and he knows that the drug will be purchaed in its raw state at the fixed rate of five rupees a seer. It is then made up into balls and packed in chests, weighing about seventy seers each. These are sold by auction. The annual number of chests sold for the last ten years averages about 46,000, and the average price per chest may be taken at Rs.1,400 Each chest has cost the Government about Rs.400, so that the profit may be estimated at £100 a chest, and the nett revenue, leaving a margin for current expenses, at four millions sterling. In the Native States the system is entirely different. The opium grown there is known as Malwa opium, for at Malwa all the returns eventually come under the direct supervision of the opium department. By far the greater part of it, however, is grown in the territories of the Maharajas Holkar and Scindia, and other chiefs in Central India. It is estimated that the cultivation of opium has more than doubled the land revenue of the two Maharajas just mentioned. They impose a heavy duty upon its cultivation. Not only that, but they find it a very profitable product, for they are, to a very great extent, the landowners of their territories, and it is found that land, which under wheat and other grains bring in srom twelve annas to two rupees per beegah, is worth, when irrigated for opium, from five to thirty rupees per beegah. It should not be forgotten, too, that opium is the proper rotary crop for Indian corn; and demands, moreover, a system of irrigation which cannot fail to have excellent results in the future. The opium when prepared is then sent to a port for shipment, and is subjected to a duty of Rs.600 a chest. It appears, therefore, that the profit on Government-grown opium is £100 a chest, while on native grown opium it is only £60 a chest; but in the former case the cost of collection amounts to two millions sterling, while with regard to Malwa opium our cost of collection is only Rs.14,580, and the total revenue from opium is, as we have said, six-and-a-quarter millions sterling. If, therefore, the Indian Government were to regard those who desire the abolition of the traffic, they would only have to find that vast amount elsewhere; they would not only have to deprive the Bengal growers and manufacturers of their profit, and their own collecting staff of some two millions sterling of wages per annum, but, unless they were prepared to ruin the principal native States they would have to compensate the chief and people of the Malwa Union to the extent of four or five millions of pounds per annum. The philanthropic world may grumble if it will, but India and its natives have certainly reason to be thankful for the benefits which the cultivation of opium confers upon them. We are inclined, too, to believe that the injurious effects of opium on the Chinese are much exaggerated. The Chinese are as good colonists, as hard workers, as regular livers as any of the world's citizens. There are, of course, unfortunate exceptions, but so there are among the spirit-drinkers of England and the absinthe drinkers in France. Every nation has its peculiar vices. We, English, were able to say a few years ago that we drank ourselves out of the Alabama difficulty; while on the other hand we can point to the Rajpoots and Sikhs who, as good men as any in this country, are yet descended from a long line of opium eaters.—Madras Times.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

H.M. INDIAN MARINE.—Mr. J. A. Bolton, who has lately retired on a pension of five shillings a day from H.M.'s Indian Marine, after a service of twenty-one years, was entertained at dinner and presented with a silver cup by the commander, officers. and engineers of the Indian Government troopship Tenasserim (of which he had been chief engineer), on Nov. 26. Mr. Bolton carries into private life the good wishes and esteem of all who know him.—Englishman.

ARMY REMOUNTS AND HARNESS FACTORY.—General Sir Edwin Johnson, military member of council, on his way from Simla. inspected the army remount depot at Saharanpur and the harness and saddlery factory at Kanhpur. General Johnson's chief object in visiting the remount depot was to inspect the country bred stock, of which a small number, some 200, have been purchased by Col. Smith, the superintendent of the depot, for the mounted branches of the British service. General Johnson satisfied himself that the efforts which, for the past few years, have been made by the State for improving the breed of horses in this country, by the importation yearly of thirty to fifty thoroughbreds and Norfolk trotters for gratuitous use in the horse breeding districts, are fully justified. The country bred remounts purchased by Col. Smith, and now in the Saharanpur depot, are, with very few exceptions, sound, strong, handsome animals, thoroughly fit for the several branches of the service—artillery, medium cavalry, or hussars—to which a large proportion of them have been already allotted. The prospect is most encouraging, and there is good reason for anticipating that in a short time the local supply of sound, hardy, acclimatised horses will be more than sufficient to meet all the demands of the State, at a far less cost than is now incurred, with a certainty that they will be at hand when wanted, and with this further advantage that their price will go to the Indian agriculturist, instead of being, as now, sent out of the country. The great difficulty now experienced in getting from England good boots in sufficient quantities for the use of the British troops serving in this country has led the Military Depastment to consider whether the want cannot be adequately met locally by an extension of the important Government raddlery and harness factory at Kanhpur. Sir Edwin Johnson visited that establishment, therefore, to see how far it was possible to give effect to this measure, and he expressed himself satisfied that the scheme is feasible. Col. Stewart, R.A., of the Ordnance Department, to whose zeal and energy the credit of the admirably organised and conducted harness factory is mainly due, has shown that harness, saddlery, and, indeed, almost every article of leather military equipment, equal, and in some respects superior, to English, can be, and for some time past has been, turned out in India. At present, only a portion of the troops are thus supplied, but both the labour and the materials for all the work required by the Indian army are at hand and readily obtainable. All that is needed is an extension of the present establishment. There is ample space for more than is likely to be required, and, though the complete supply of boots to the army would necessitate the present tannery being trebled in size, no difficulty would be found in doing this. By thus making India independent of England for much of its military equipment it is certain that there would be a considerable financial gain to the Indian Government, while, again, as in the case of the country-bred remounts, the money would remain to fructify in India instead of being sent at heavy loss to England.—Englishman.

MORE COALFIELDS.—If Lord Tweeddale's company, instead of proposing to work the non-existent coalfields of the Punjab, would undertake to open out those of Palamow, Sirgujah, and South Rewah, the advantage to the railways of Northern India would be immense, and the speculation would doubtless be a paying one, provided the company were prepared to sink a sufficient amount of capital at starting. The coalfields of South Rewah and Sirgujah are nearly equal in area to all the others known in India, but they have not yet been properly surveyed. They are known, however, to contain thick seams of good coal in many places, and they will doubtless be opened out some day. North east of the Sirgujah area, and separated from it by some forty or fifty miles of crystalline rock, is the coalfield of Daltonganj in the Palamow district, two hundred square miles in area, and containing at least one seam of good coal five or six feet thick. Some years ago an attempt was made to work this coal and send it down to Patna by the River Sone; but, owing to the difficulty of transporting it from the mines to the river, it was unable to compete with the coal brought by the East India Railway from Karharbari. It has now been proposed, as we remarked a few days ago, to extend the Patna-Gya Railway through this coalfield; and that of southern Sirgujah towards Belaspur and Nagpur in the Central Provinces. By doing so a way would be opened for the distribution of the coal of these fields towards both north and south. If the home Government had not foolishly insisted on the curtailment of public works in this country at a time when money might have been borrowed on easy terms, either this railway extension or the proposed connecting link between Nagpur and Calcutta through Hazaribagh might have been taken in hand ere now. The latter line, which is sure to be constructed as soon as an active public works policy is again adopted, will open up the southern part of the Sirgujah basin and several minor coalfields on the Hazaribagh plateau, but would not touch that of Daltonganj, which is nearest of all to the places where coal is required. To tap this, either the Gya extension or a short line down to the Sone should be constructed. If the latter plan were adopted the new Sone Canals in the Shahabad district might be used for bringing down to the Ganges the coal intended to be sent up-country. This plan would doubtless be cheaper than sending the coal by rail round by Gya and Patna, and transferring it from narrow into broad gauge wagons at the latter station.—Pioneer.

FEMALE EDUCATION.—It is gratifying to see the wholesome emulation which the success of Miss Chundra Mukhi Bose and Miss Kadumbini Bose at the University Entrance Examination has excited. In Bengal several institutions are sending up girls for the entrance. We hear that there are two ladies going up from Bombay and two from Hyderabad. A college for the higher education of our ladies has now become an absolute necessity. Miss Chundra Mukhi is this time going up from the First Arts.—Brahmo Public Opinion.

OPIUM SALE.—The following is the result of the opium sale held at the Government sale room, No. 2, Bankshall-street, on the 3rd December, 1879:—Behar, 2,500 chests; proceeds, 30,22,000; Benares, 2,500 chests; proceeds, 28,83,375.—Englishman.

NORTHERN ARAKAN.—The resolution of the Chief Commissioner of Burma on the administration of the Hill Tracts of Northern Arakan goes far to confirm the old saying that happy is a country which has no history. Under the able administration of Major W. G. Hughes, for two years in succession, there have been no raids within our boundary, and our relations with the transfrontier tribes have continued satisfactory. The only exception was the estrangement of the Baukyee Chief, Leipboh, which was unavoidable, and it may reasonably be hoped that it will not prove of long duration. It is satisfactory to find that the Khongsow tribe, though requiring continual watching, have not been guilty of any active aggression. The durbar held at Dalekmay in February last was an event of some importance in the history of the district; and the periodical repetition of such meetings will, no doubt, prove of assistance in that general pacification of the hill tribes which is the primary object of our administration to secure. The number of houses having been carefully enumerated, and five souls being taken as the number of residents in each house, the estimated population is now 18,329, as compared with 13,161 in 1877-78. It is reasonable to suppose that, with the introduction of peace and good order, the population of the hills is increasing; but, under the present system of enumeration, no certain conclusions can be arrived at on this point. Some explanation seems to be required as to how the numbers given for the male and female population, respectively, have been arrived at under the system of calculation at present employed. There has again been an increase in the revenue derived from the Hill Tracts. The increase is mainly due to the more careful enumeration of the houses upon which tribute is assessed. The trade returns show an increase of both exports and imports—the value of the exports having advanced from Rs.95,939 to Rs.1,42,689, and that of the imports from Rs.1,55,144 to Rs.2,36,432. The principal imports are silk and cotton goods and paddy; and the principal exports are tobacco, sessamum, timber, and ivory. It is impossible to say how far the apparent increase of trade is real, or how far it may be merely due to more accurate registration. Important improvements in the communications of the district have been made by the establishment of weekly steamboat communication with Akyab, and of the patrol between Kolawah and Police Tye in the Chittagong Hill Tracts. Taken as a whole, the report appears to indicate an increasing prosperity among the hill tribes, and an administration advancing in regularity and efficiency.—Englishman.

MEETINGS OF COMPANIES.—At the general meeting of the Great Eastern Hotel Company, held November 29, an interim dividend of 2 per cent. or Rs.5 per share for the six months ended Auguast 31 was declared.—At an extraordinary meeting of the Bengal Bonded Warehouse Association, held December 1, the following gentlemen were elected directors:—John Morrison, A. B. Sutherland, and Babou Tareingchurn Bhose.—At the general meeting of the Bowreah Cotton Mills, held December 2, the report showed a loss of Rs.78,845. After a prolonged discussion the chairman undertook to draw up a scheme to raise money for new machinery, for which, according to the manager, Rs.50,000 would be required.—Englishman.

OPIUM SMUGGLING IN BURMA.—Large quantities of opium are constantly being smuggled into Burma from the Madras coast, and some of the methods employed by the smugglers are probably unknown to their Indian brethren. The excise report of British Burma for the past year mentions the following clever devices that have been discovered by the excise officers:—"Opium was found in one case placed between slices of sheepskin cut in the shape and size of salt fish, amongst which it was distributed in the basket. In another instance it was found in a bamboo basket which had double sides. In a third, as a ball of hooka mixture (goorakoo) shaped like a Dutch cheese (the sides of which were hollow and filled with opium), and placed alongside three cheeses. In a fourth, a cocoanut shell was found filled with opium. In a fifth, a Madrassee ghee-bottle was detected filled with ghee in the centre, with opium in the hollow side, and the ghee leaking freely from the neck of the bottle."—Pioneer.

THE KANGRA VALLEY.—A correspondent, writing from the Kangra Valley on the 2nd instant, gives the following items of news:—"There was a tolerably thick flight of locusts at Palampore on Nov. 27, going southwards between that place and Bhawarna. The Tehsildar of Palampore, Akbar Khan, has been sentenced for embezzlement to seven years' imprisonment and a fine of Rs.1,000. No reliable news has transpired about the Hamipore sub-treasury defalcation." A letter from Dharmsala says:—"On Friday, Nov. 28, a Goorkha shot the thannadar in the hand, killed a ghirth cultivator, and wounded sundry other people; the cause being the suspected unfaithfulness of his wife. The license tax on tea planters in the Kangra Valley has been repealed, and the monies paid on this account have been refunded, it having been decided that tea planters are agriculturists pur et simple."—Ibid.

bringing into greater prominence the position of that city as the great emporium of commerce for Northern India. As pointed out by the officiating magistrate in his opening address, it is only since the mutiny, and especially since the American war, that Cawnpore has asserted itself as the great collecting and exporting centre anywhere out of Bombay or Calcutta. Its previous history as a frontier cantonment and the sad memories of the mutiny are forgotten in the constant toil of a business life; all interest centres in the large market known as Collectorgunge (built consule Halsey), where after harvest time produce-laden carts throng every available inch of ground, and are visited regularly by numbers of European as well as native merchants on the look out for a "transaction."—Ibid.

THE MAYO COLLEGE.—During his recent tour the Viceroy attended the distribution of prizes, at the Mayo College, Ajmere. The Indian Eton, as Lord Mayo intended this institution to be, presents a striking addition to the picturesque features of the capital of Ajmere. Besides the house of the principal, Captain W. Loch, there are some eight or nine handsome stone buildings where the pupils from the different Rajputana States are lodged. Ajmere itself, Udaipur, Johdpur, Bikanir, Jaipur, Alwar, Bhartpur, Tonk, Jhalawar, and Kota are each represented, and a college is being constructed from the designs of Major Mant, R.E., at the expense of the British Government, in which white marble is the principal material employed. This building will be a worthy monument of the noble Viceroy, to whose warm interest in the welfare of the princes and chiefs of Rajputana the establishment of the institution is due. His Excellency, in his address to the students, said :—

"I must congratulate you on the beautiful buildings already completed by the chief States of Rajputana, and the noble edifice now in process of completion by the Government of India. Still more encouraging is the large number of leading Rajpoot families represented on this occasion by you, the pupils of the college, amongst whom I am glad to welcome the young chief, Jhallawar, and the brother of my friend, the Maharaja of Jodhpur, whose welcome and honoured presence here today attests his enlightened sympathy and personal interest in the success of the college. The total number of admissions to it has risen, I am informed, to 61, and of this number 38 are now actually on the rolls, of whom 35, as we have just heard, have competed for the prizes I am about to distribute. In the promotion of this, as indeed of all other enterprises conducive to the interests of Rajputana, the great ruling Houses of Marwar, Jeypur, and Jodhpur, have taken a leading and enlightened part. I trust that their example will encourage the young Maharana of Oodeypur to send more pupils to the college. I regret that from the Haroali States none have yet been received ; but I observe with pleasure that the Maharao of Kota has decided on building a house here; and the Nawah of Tonk has already built one, which is now occupied by the sons of his Highness's Chief Minister. The Maharao, Rajah of Ulwar, has testified his gratitude to the institution at which he was educated by the munificent present of Rs. 10,000 for the erection of a pair of gates ; while by the handsome gifts made to this college by the Maharaja of Jeypur, his Highness has worthily maintained the high reputation of his illustrious family for enlightment and attachment to the cause of intellectual culture. I have also this moment been informed that the Rao of Masuda has given Rs.200 to be distributed as prizes to the students of this college, this being his third similar liberal donation."—Ibid.

CALCUTTA FREIGHT MARKET.—The disengaged tonnage in port at date of mail was 4,810 tons. The market closed firm at the following rates:—London via Canal: Rice, £3 17s. 6d.; jute, £4 5s.; hides, tea, &c., £4 10s. Via Cape: Saltpetre, £2 10s.; wheat, £3; jute, £4 5s.; light, £3 15s. A NEW LINE OF STEAMERS.—A new line of steamers has been formed in Calcutta under the designation of the Asiatic Steamship Company. At present the fleet comprises four steamers—namely, the Maharaja, Maharanee, Shah Jean, and Shahazada. The steamers of the company ply between Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, calling at Negapatam and Colombo. The Shah Jean left the roads the other day for Calcutta via the North Coast. In a few months two or three other steamers for this company will, it is said, arrive from England.—Times of India.

THE NAGA OUTBREAK.—A special telegram from Golaghat, dated Dec. 3, states that the village of Jotsoma, consisting of 900 houses, the inhabitants of which were implicated in the recent outrage, was destroyed on Nov. 27. The place had been completely wrecked by the Nagas, the majority of whom had joined the Konoma men. The enemy are retreating up the Barrail range, 8,000ft. and 9,000ft. elevation, and will probably soon exhaust their food supplies. It is impossible to overrate the importance of the effect of the capture of the stronghold of Konoma on the surrounding country and on the good effects it has also had on all the other tribes. Information obtained from friendly Nagas—so called—gives the admitted loss of Nagas on Nov. 22 at about eighty killed and wounded. On Nov. 27 a party of the 44th Regiment from Suchema met a body of the enemy; the enemy lost several men killed, no casualties on our side. On Nov. 28 reports from Konoma state that an ambuscade was prepared for the party going for water. Two men of the 44th were killed and two badly wounded.—Bombay Gazette.

THE OOTACAMUND LAWRENCE ASYLUMS.—The report on the Ootacamund Lawrence Asylums shows that the year 1878-79 opened with 318 boys and 59 girls and closed with 321 boys and 59 girls, exclusive of day-scholars, whose number is not stated. During the year sixty-five boys and ten girls left the asylums. Of the boys six enlisted, fourteen obtained employment in the Government Telegraph Department, ten were apprenticed to the Lawrence Asylum Press, and one to a boot and shoemaker; the remaining thirty-four were removed by their relatives. Of the girls, two married, one entered service, one died, and seven were removed by their friends. Forty-two boys above the age of sixteen were employed in the telegraph class, tailoring, carpentry, &c. Twenty-five of these were provided for, and there remained on March 31, 1879, seventeen boys over the age of sixteen. Eighty-four boys under sixteen were under training in telegraphy, carpentry, tailoring, &c. The general health of both boys and girls was good. Both boys and girls attained high positions in the Peter Cator examinations. The Government are not disposed to substitute Tamil for Hindustani, and doubt whether it would be more of a success than Hindustani, which is more widely useful and easier to learn colloquially. The suggestion that the pupil teachers should be called monitors will be considered by the committee. Finance.—There are some discrepancies between the figures adopted in the report and those given by the auditor of the accounts, who shows the opening balance in the male branch on April 1, 1878, at Rs.4,508-15-2, while the report gives it at Rs 5 208-15-2. Again, the aggregate charges to this branch are shown by the auditor at Rs.93,438-9-8, including advance to farm, whereas the report gives it at Rs.93.838-9-8. There are differences also in the figures under the female branch. The differences in both cases can no doubt be satisfactorily explained. Taking the figures in the report the receipts including balance brought over, aggregated for the male branch Rs.103,041-14-6, and the charges Rs.93,838-9-8, leaving a balance in favour of Rs.9,203-4-10, against Rs.5,208, the opening balance. Compared with the accounts for 1877-78 the receipts were less by Rs.27,890 and the expenditure by Rs.31,785. The average charge for each boy is given at Rs.268, against Rs.297 in 1877-78. In the female branch the receipts aggregate Rs.30,403-4-6, and the charges Rs.23,211-12-10, leaving an available balance of Rs.7,191, against Rs.9,265, the opening balance. The receipts were better than in 1877-78 by Rs.3,513, and the expenditure greater by Rs.5,587. The average charge per girl was Rs.309,3-10, against Rs.260 in 1877-78. The variations under each head of charge are explained in the report, which is generally satisfactory.—Madras Athenæum.

THE LATE MRS. GAJAPATHI RAO.—We lately announced the death of Mrs. Gapajathi Rao, the wife of the Honourable G. N. Gajapathi Rao, which happened at Waltair on the night of Nov. 15. Mrs. Gajapathi Rao possessed rare accomplishments, being educated under experienced European governesses and well versed in almost every one of the fine arts and well read in literature. She was introduced to Madras society by the Lady Anna Gore Langton and Mrs. Carmichael, and was a universal favourite among her friends and acquaintances; her amiability and her kindly disposition were of a kind seldom met with. It is worthy of remark that the deceased lady was the first native lady in the Madras Presidency who mixed in European society. The example she set is worthy of imitation by other native ladies. The death of Mrs. Gajapathi Rao has cast quite a gloom over the station. Much sympathy is felt for the worthy and Honourable G. N. Gajapathi Rao by all classes of the community.—Madras Times.

Colombo export trade piece goods to the coast, and one which is likely to interfere with the development of that trade. Under the recently modified tariff on the import of cotton goods into India, all cloths manufactured from yarns having a count known as thirties and under are admitted free of duty. In order to secure this immunity on such goods sold in the Colombo market for export and transhipment to the coast it is usual to give the buyer the maker's certificate as to the account of the yarns from which it is made, together with a sample of the cloth. It appears that at Tuticorin there is no custom house official qualified to examine the sample, and the importer has therefore the option of waiting until the sample can be forwarded to the customs authorities at Madras for report before he can pass the goods, or to pay the amount of import duty, on the understanding that it shall be refunded on receipt of the reply from Madras. In either case a loss is caused in time or interest on the amount of the duty. It certainly seems hard that this should be caused by the inability of the Tuticorin officials to act in the matter on their own responsibility. We believe the Madras authorities have been addressed on the subject.—Bombay Gazette.

THE NELAMBUR TEAK FORESTS.—The Scottish Arboricultural Society has awarded to Mr. Ferguson, who has been so long in charge of these forests, a gold medal for the best essay on the "Forests and Jungles of India." Among the few works undertaken by Government which have turned out a thorough financial success, not one can be placed before the Nelambur teak forests. Those who have had to do with the Forest Department, including Dr. Cleghorn, who got it into good working order, have not failed to record their appreciation of Mr. Ferguson's services. Colonel Beddome, too, thus speaks of that gentleman in his last report to Government:—"I cannot close this report without testifying to the unremitting care and attention that Mr. Ferguson has given to these plantations during the last sixteen years, and I do not think they would be in the fine condition they now are unless we had had the advantage of his practical knowledge of pruning, thinning, &c. Mr. Ferguson's health has been much broken by the fever contracted at Nullicottah, and he proposes retiring shortly, and he is afraid his health will not allow him to pursue his profession in England, and he is no longer young. I trust that the Secretary of State may be asked to consider his claim to pension as a special case, for I think that he should receive one of £250 per annum." Mr. Ferguson has lived out in the jungles during the whole course of his service, and has most thoroughly earned the pension recommended by Colonel Beddome. The award of the medal mentioned above is another proof that he knows his business thoroughly.—Madras Times.

THE RAMPA REBELLION.—A correspondent informs the Madras papers that it is likely to take some months more for either the police or the military to capture Laman Dora, the notorious rebel leader, as the recent attempt to seize him has met with disappointment, while at the same time the rebels did not fail to inflict a loss on the attacking party. A subadar, with a small party of the 10th N.I., attacked Chendriah, and drove him from the village of Donalunka near Palim, capturing six unimportant prisoners, &c., and releasing Raneelunka, a man whom the rebels retained for sacrifice. Major Prendergast and Mr. Sweet, of the police, met the subadar and his party returning, and again pressed them on back to the village, but found it occupied; the rebels firing on them from thick jungles, killing one lascar. Fresh troops were sent in pursuit, but when they reached the village of Donalunka the rebels fled from it during the night previous. It is reported that valuable assistance will be obtained through Annal Reddi and Jampa Pandaya. On information being received that a party of the rebels was at Luchonda a party of the 5th Regiment N.I., under the command of a native officer, was despatched from Chodaveram, and found the rebels at Luchonda, who took up a position on a hill. The enemy opened fire upon the force; the fire was returned and the hill charged, when the rebels dispersed and fled. It is also reported that some rebels under the leadership of Madakum and Chinnaya robbed some men conveying rice for sale to Koyar market, and fired upon a small party of police who were bringing in some money. Lieut. Kenny, with the 27th Rifles, attacked Chendriah's party at Chinnorpollum between Yellaishiver and Aditayala, and the rebels escaped into dense jungles. Another correspondent writes: "Intelligence having been received that a gang of rebels were near Palkajeri, a party of our troops was sent to punish them before they could inflict any injury on any of the neighbouring villages. No information of the whereabouts of the notorious leader of the Rampa riot, Chendriah, was procurable, although our troops have been out on different sides to watch his movements." The latest news obtained, which was subsequently confirmed, was to the effect that Chendriah was near Kota with a party of rebels. A party from Kota was sent against him.—Madras Times.

THE MILLOWNERS AND THE FACTORY ACT.—At the annual meeting of members of the Bombay Millowners' Association the report of the committee for the year ending Oct. 31, 1879, was adopted and ordered to be printed for general information. The report stated that, until the new Factory Bill for India issues from the select committee, it would be premature to discuss the details of it. In regard to the principle of the bill, however, the committee have already forwarded a protest to the select committee, for they say they believe that "the measure is wholly uncalled for; and that, however desirable such legislation may be in England, the circumstances and peculiarities of India furnish no analogy for the introduction of such a measure into India, while the restrictions sought to be imposed will be a grievous hardship to the workpeople and an injury to the manufacturing interests of the country." It was stated that the association intends to forward a memorial to the Supreme Legislative Council against the proposed legislation when the bill is out. The Hon. Morarjee Goculdas and two or three other members, in the remarks they made at the meeting, upheld the action of the committee in this matter. It was a subject of regret to some of the speakers that the resolution passed at the last annual general meeting to close the mills every Saturday and Sunday from Feb. 15 to April 19, with the view of checking the great accumulation of stock during a period of depression, had been allowed to fall through. Mr. Dinshaw Manockjee Petit, the chairman, explained that, as it was found absolutely necessary, in accordance with the wishes of the workpeople themselves, to close the mills on the days of certain native festivals, they could not be closed on Sundays also. Messrs. Dinshaw Manockjee Petit, Muncherjee Nowrojee Banajee, Tapidas Vurjdas, Nanabhoy Byramjee, Jeejeebhoy, and the Hon. Morarjee Goculdas, who retired from the committee according to the rules, were re-elected; while Messrs. James Greaves, Vullubdas Valjee, and Nowrojee Nusserwanjee Wadia were elected additional members of the committee. Messrs. Dinshaw Manockjee Petit and the Hon. Morarjee Goculdas were respectively elected chairman and deputy chairman of the association.

BROAD AND NARROW GAUGE.—During the time that we remained at the Ahmedabad station, and while the narrow-gauge train was preparing to start, it was amusing to watch with what undisguised contempt the whole staff of the Baroda Company viewed her Majesty's State Railway, on the narrow-gauge system. From the traffic managers and stationmasters, down to the native firemen, the newly started concern is looked upon entirely as "a one-horse affair." An engine driver of the old-established line, with whom I conversed, scorntully asked if any sane individual could call "that ere thing a railway," and remarked that, in his opinion, "it was nothing more than a bit of a tram," averring further that, so far as carrying the mails was concerned, he would "back a good long-winded set of tapal coolies against them any day."—Correspondent of Bombay Gazette.

SURETYSHIP AND GOVERNMENT CLERKS.—In order to put a stop to the by no means uncommon practice of clerks in Government offices becoming security for one another for money borrowed Government has issued a circular to all heads of departments forbidding the practice of one clerk standing security for another, on pain of dismissal of both the principal and the surety. The head of the department is, however, allowed the power of permitting one clerk to stand surety for another in special cases only. The above is to be a standing rule of the Government service, and every man, on first appointment, is to be furnished with a copy of this order so that there can be no excuse for ignorance.—Bombay Gazette.

A RAJPUTANA NARROW-GAUGE RAILWAY.—On the whole the impression conveyed over the run over the new railway, from one point of view at least, is not unfavourable. At present the supply of rolling-stock is ridiculously small; but I think it will be found that when in thorough working order the line will prove equal to the work it will be called upon to perform; but, whether that work, heavy as it is certain to be, will be done as cheaply as if the gauge were a broad one, is quite another question. I only venture to say that with sidings at every station, and with engines worked up to the power of speed and draught which they possess, the line, if well managed, is capable of pulling through much business. As to the break of gauge, there can be no question that a stupid mistake has been committed, for the railway is not light enough; it does not sufficiently approach Fairlie's system, to entitle it to be classed as a cheap line constructed for light traffic. On the contrary, a railway has been built which must cost but very little less than lines on the ordinary Indian gauge, and the break as a consequence drags grievous disadvantages in its train without any advantages to set against them. In short, the Rajputana Railway gives one the idea of being neither one thing nor the other. It is too good for that description of cheap light line which so many Indian districts stand in need of, but as a link in the chain of a great railway system that is to carry the commerce of thirty millions of people to the sea it represents a grievous and culpable blunder, and although it may succeed in carrying its traffic it will be at the needless sacrifice of efficiency and cheapness.—Correspondent of Bombay Gazette.

THE PRINCE OF WALES DOCK.—The new wet dock named after H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, who laid the first stone on November 11, 1875, while staying in Bombay on the occasion of his memorable visit to India, was formally opened on New Year's Day with great ceremony by Sir Richard Temple, the Governor of the presidency. On his Excellency finally declaring the dock to be open for traffic several steamers entered amid the vociferous cheering of the large crowd who were witnesses of the ceremony.—Reuter's Telegram.

THE VICE CHANCELLOR OF THE UNIVERSITY.—Surgeon General Hunter has recently been appointed vice chancellor of the University of Bombay during the absence on leave of Mr. Justice West. The position is one which has hitherto been usually held only by members of Council or judges of the High Court. It is true that Dr. Hunter occupies an exceptionally distinguished position in his profession, but the compliment paid to the Bombay medical service by Dr. Hunter's selection for the vice chancellorship is none the less to be appreciated.—Broad Arrow.

BARRACK DEPARTMENT.—The Bombay Gazette is informed that orders were issued on the 12th ult. by the Government of Bombay in the Public Works Department to the effect that, from April 1, that department will undertake all the duties of the Barrack Department. No orders have yet been issued by the Military Department on the subject, so that barrackmasters are in a state of uncertainty as to their future. It is deemed rather unaccountable that the Public Works Department should issue orders abolishing a whole department under the military authorities without the latter knowing anything about it.—Pioneer.

IT is notified in the Government Gazette that the Bombay Land Revenue, 1879, is extended to the jaghir territories of the State of Jath so far as its provisions are applicable.

THE BHOODWAR PALACE.—The ground on which the Bhoodwar Palace, which was destroyed by fire seven months ago, stood, is, according to a Puna paper, to be made over to the local municipallty and converted into a public garden.—Times of India.

THE VOLUNTEERS.—The last regimental orders of the Bombay Volunteer Rifles announced the retirement of Lieut. G. S. Lynch, and convey the regret of the commandant, in which all ranks, we are sure, will join, at being deprived of the assistance of so zealous, efficient, and painstaking an officer. Mr. Lynch, we understand, is leaving India to join a firm of well-known solicitors in London.—Ibid.

DROWNED AT SEA.—On Saturday, Dec. 6, at 8.15 a.m., in lat. 13 deg. 18 min. N., long. 48 deg. 38 min. E., George Kattings, boatswain on board the Anchor Line s.s. India, while assisting to spread one of the quarter-deck awnings, missed his footing and fell overboard. The steamer's engines were immediately reversed and a boat lowered, two men meanwhile aloft keeping their eyes on the man in the water. After about four minutes' submersion he was observed to sink. Strict search was made for two hours without success, and the vessel then proceeded on her course. The unfortunate man was forty-two years of age and a native of Liverpool. He leaves a wife and young family, on whose behalf the crew and passengers of the steamer subscribed £25.—Ibid.

THE Governor in Council, with the sanction of the Governor General in Council, directs that the following rule be added as Rule 27A of the rules under the Opium Act, published in the Bombay Government Gazette extraordinary dated March 30, 1878:—Transhipment and re-export. Rule 27A.—"Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained to the contrary, opium may be imported by sea into the ports of Bombay, Karachi, or Aden, from any port in Persia manifested for transhipment or for re-exportation in the same bottom, and may be re-exported by sea from the said ports. All such opium imported into and re-exported from the said ports in the same bottom shall be liable to a duty of Rs.100 per chest not exceeding 140¼ lb. avoirdupois net weight.

MR. JUSTICE GREEN.—We regret to learn that Mr. Justice Green had a paralytic seizure on the night of Dec. 9 and remained up to the following evening in an unconscious and critical condition. There was a slight change for the better on Thursday morning, but not of an encouraging nature. The paralytic seizure extended over one-half the entire body on the right side, depriving him wholly of the power of speech.—Bombay Gazette.

CEYLON.

WE take the following items from the Ceylon Times of Dec. 12:—

THE LEGISLATURE.—The session of our Legislature was brought to a close yesterday with an address from the Governor. At the meeting on the previous day the Government, after a long discussion, agreed to postpone the Coolie Medical Aid Bill until next year; it is probable an interim session may be held for the purpose of enacting an improved measure in April next.

THE WEATHER.—The weather continues very monsoonish; the daily rainfall is regarded as favourable for the maturing and ripening of coffee still on the trees. The following passengers left on the 10th inst. by s.s. Navarino:—For London, Ernest Wall, Esq., Mr. Underdown, and Master George Winter, and for Zanzibar W. F. Fairlie Esq.

GAZETTE NOTICES.—His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint G. S. Saxton, Esq., to be extra office assistant to the Government Agent of the Central Province. It is notified that Messrs. F. S. Thomasz, A. L. De Alwis, and Edward Orr have been re-elected unofficial members of the Local Board of Health and Improvement at Kalutara for 1880 and 1881. Leave of absence for six weeks from the 5th inst. having been granted to Mr. R. Massie, it is notified that Mr. J. S. Harper has been appointed to act during that period as assistant at Trincomalee to the Government Agent of the Eastern Province, district judge commissioner of requests, police magistrate, and coroner of the district of Trincomalee, and superintendent of the Trincomalee Prison. It is notified that the following days will be observed as holidays, viz:—From the 24th to the 27th inst., and from 1st to 3rd proximo, inclusive.

CEYLON GOVERNMENT RAILWAY.—Mr. Charles Rastuck Hanson has been appointed by the Secretary of State for the Colonies an assistant engineer of the railway on a salary of Rs.5,000 per annum. Mr. John Minnet is to be inspector of masonry on the Matale Railway.

CUSTOMS DEPARTMENT.—Mr. Reidy, late acting immigrant officer of Pamben, is to be appointed chief landing waiter of the Colombo Customs. Mr. P. Suppremanian, preventive officer of Kayts, has been appointed sub-collector of that port. Mr. S. Mylwaganam, senior landing waiter, has been appointed sub-collector of Mullaitivu.

TRINITY CHURCH.—The Examiner hears that the Secretary of State has sanctioned an exchange of duties between the Rev. Mr. Meeres, the chaplain of the Holy Trinity Church, Colombo, and the Rev. Mr. Boyd, rector of Princes Risboro. Mr. Boyd is expected here by the Eldorado.

THE REVENUE OF CEYLON.—The last Gazette gives the figures which represent the revenue of the colony for the nine months ended Sept. 30. These amount to Rs.10,552,169 as compared with Rs.11,756,383 for the corresponding period of 1878. As, however, there was in the former year Rs.574,057 realised by sale of colonial stores, the actual decrease on the nine months amounts to only Rs.630,165.

THE LATE SIR COOMARA SWAMY.—A large party passed through Bombay a few days ago on their way to Benares, accompanying the mother of the late Sir Coomara Swamy of Ceylon. She is a devout Hindu lady, and on her son's cremation in May last preserved his ashes in order to convey and deposit them in the Ganges at Benares and perform funeral ceremonies there for the benefit of his soul. Sir Coomara was said to be far too advanced a man to lend any countenance to Brahminism as popularly professed, or indeed to any other religion, but his mother thinks the performance of these last sad rites a matter of solemn obligation. Among those accompanying her are two of her grandsons, Mr. P. Coomara Swamy (Proctor of the Supreme Court of Ceylon and a prominent member of the Colombo Municipal Council) and Mr. P. Arunachalam, of the Ceylon Civil Service. The latter arrived at Bombay on the 27th Nov. from England by the P. and O. steamer Venetia; he is a M.A. of Cambridge, probably the first native of India or Ceylon who has obtained that degree from an English university. Sir Coomara has left a son, about two years old, who is now in England with Lady Coomara Swamy. The seat which he occupied with distinction for nearly twenty years in the Ceylon Legislative Council, as the representative of the Hindus and Mussulmans, is now filled by one of his nephews, the Hon. P. Rama Nathan, and was originally held by Sir Coomara's father from the first establishment of the council till his death.—Times of India.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, JANUARY 5, 1880.

THE year, which at the beginning saw the attention of Englishmen earnestly directed to Afghanistan, began with what it ended in. The Christmas of 1878 saw our armies waiting to advance, if required, on the defenceless city of Cabul. The week just passed has brought relief to many overcharged with anxious watching for tidings from the beleaguered Sherpur cantonments. The first few weeks of 1879 witnessed only some desultory attacks, for the disorganised and deserted army of Shere Ali was in no plight to make vigorous resistance. Nor did our commanders desire unnecessarily to humiliate Yakoob Khan by an advance on Cabul, contenting themselves with holding the portions of territory which had been occupied as needful for the regulation of our frontier. The melancholy and fatal disaster which befel the 10th Hussars, the affair at Futteabad, and the attack on our rear at Giriskh, caused us much and regrettable loss before the conclusion of hostilities. The death of Shere Ali was reported on March 1 by the Viceroy as having been communicated in a friendly letter by Yakoob Khan. His accession as Ameer, recognised by the Viceroy, was at once followed by negotiations for peace; the Ameer's visit to the British camp followed, and on May 30 the Treaty of Gandamak was duly ratified. The Ameer issued public proclamations assuring his people of his having concluded perpetual peace and friendship with the British Government, and promising an amnesty to all the chiefs and tribesmen who, during the war, had assisted the invaders; communications of courtesy were interchanged between the Viceroy and Ameer, who spoke of a speedy visit to his Excellency. This, however, had naturally to be postponed to the immediate task of settling his government, restoring his authority in Turkestan, and, according to the terms of the Treaty of Gandamak, preparing for the reception of her Majesty's Envoy in Cabul. On July 24 Sir Louis Cavagnari and the British mission entered that city, experiencing "a brilliant reception," and were installed in the house in the Bala Hissar, the ruined walls of which have been made familiar to English readers of the illustrated papers. The evacuation of Afghan territory by our forces commenced early in August. From Candahar, where it seemed that the continuous presence of the British force was becoming increasingly welcome, the troops were to depart in the beginning of September, and the rule of the city was before that date placed in the hands of the Afghan Governor. The reports were satisfactory, the Envoy considered that the Ameer was endeavouring to act with fidelity, and had loyally repulsed overtures made by the Russian authorities in Turkestan. There were not wanting sinister rumours, which, however, did not seem to contain any substance or cohesion. The 3rd of September witnessed the attack on the Embassy by mutinous regiments from Herat, who, aided by the fanatics of Cabul, and left unchecked by the pusillanimous or treacherous conduct of the Ameer, completed the work of destruction; our gallant officers and soldiers, European and native, perishing after a gallant defence that will never be forgotten. It needs not to dwell on the unanimous and impatient demand for an immediate advance and quick vengeance that arose at home. In India the same feelings found similar expression. There was no uncertainty about the general unanimity which throughout British India demanded the prompt punishment of the treacherous Afghan. We have been told lately on good authority that the Afghan war, by its manifestation of a bold foreign policy, awoke the loyalty of India. It is certain that princes and people alike urged and offered all aid in their power to the advance on Cabul. This was necessarily delayed till it was possible to advance with sufficient troops, supplies, and supports. At the time it seemed long ere we heard of the successful entry into Cabul. Yet it took place on Oct. 12, during which interval the Ameer had surrendered or entrusted himself to the British General, and the battle of Charasiab had been fought. Quickly upon each other followed the abdication of the Ameer, the meting out of well-deserved punishment to the Kotwal and other Cabulis whom careful inquiry had convicted of active complicity in the murder of the Envoy. The attack on Col. Money's camp and the several scattered engagements showed that the hostility to the English, though unsuccessful, was not quelled. The explosion at the Bala Hissar was by many attributed to native hands although it would seem to have been purely accidental. The temporary rule of the British was announced by the appointment of General Hill as governor of Cabul, while faithful sirdars were entrusted with the settlement of the districts. In the south, Candahar had been again occupied, and that without resistance, and the vigorous prosecution of the Sukkur-Dadur Railway, the energetic organisation of supplies and communications, every day made the hold of the Candahar line, with its possible goal at Herat, more secure. The abandonment of the Shutar Gardan Pass, necessitated by the closing in of winter, and, it must be added, by the want of sufficiently strong transport powers and reserve of troops, was compensated for by the complete establishment of communication by the Northern Passes. There was, however, a want of information as to the real plans and powers of the hostile tribes. The secret machinations, though suspected, were not thoroughly disclosed until the outbreak which, though apparently checked by Macpherson on Dec. 11, showed on the following day the numerous and strong forces of the enemy, united from Kohistan and Ghuznee. We need not recapitulate the details of the few days following, during [which General Roberts made head against thirty thousand well led foes. By the 15th the British force was established in the Sherpur cantonments, the city of Cabul and the Bala Hissar having been abandoned. The anxiety as to the position of our troops, the temporary failure of communications, and the uncertainty whether, without delay for reinforcements, assistance could be sent, made many at home over fearful. The news of the defeat of the attack made by the enemy on Sherpur made many hearts rejoice at Christmas; albeit, it was saddening to think that, in the words of one who is none the worse statesman and ruler because he is a true poet, so many of our bravest were, at the period of home festivities, "dying, not dancing, to a music nobler far." So far, the year has ended with success, but leaving for 1880 a serious and difficult task, yet one that had become absolutely needful, both for Indian and British interests, to be brought to a successful and abiding accomplishment. There has been, during the greater portion of the year, constant ground for apprehension of a war, or, at least, of armed intervention being made necessary by the outrageous conduct of the young King of Burma. The massacre of his relatives, the violent purposes and hostile plans attributed to him, made it evident, early in the year, that difficulties might arise. The death of our late Resident, Mr. Shaw, was, after a period of neglect, and almost insult, towards his temporary successor, followed by the complete withdrawal of Mr. St. Barbe and the establishment of the Mandalay Residency. That at Bhamo had been previously abandoned. The reports of the intended attack on the independent Karens, as well as the recent rumour of violation of our Arakan frontier by a Burmese force, have not been followed by any overt act. The latest accounts tend to show that the King or his advisers feel some alarm at the possible consequences of the insolent freaks which his Majesty indulged in. The attempt to send an Embassy to Simla, and the apparently anxious care to avoid any act of hostility to our subjects or traders, point to the conclusion that Theebaw is not quite so confident of his strength as he seemed to be last spring. It cannot, however, be doubted that the relations between Mandalay and British Burma must be placed on a proper footing. In the meantime, whether due or not to the notion that we were too much occupied on the North West to act vigorously on the North Eastern frontier, the always troublesome Nagas have again compelled us to undertake a little war. In the commencement of the year we announced the secure and unresisted occupation of our new headquarters in the Naga Hills. Kohima was described as in every respect well chosen as a station. The Angamies appeared to be slowly but surely yielding to the conviction that robbery and murder must cease to be profitable pastimes. The murder of the young and able civilian, Mr. Damant, was not so much the cause as the evidence of the rebellion. The illicit collection of ammunition at Konoma could only have had for its cause a determination again to try armed resistance. The neglect of warning as to the purpose of the Angamies cost the Political Agent his life when he attempted to seize the ammunition collected in violation of the law. The prompt movement of troops was only just in time to rescue the small body of Englishmen and Englishwomen who, with their faithful sepoys of the frontier force, were assailed by the fierce savages in Kohima. The ultimate suppression of the outbreak is certain, if indeed there is still any actual resistance. But the details of the defence of Konoma, where Major Cock lost his life, show a bitter bravery on the part of the Nagas. This past year of war has also witnessed attempts at armed rebellion in the Presidencies of Bombay and Madras. It may seem to give too much importance to the dacoits and incendiaries, who caused the destruction of some of the ancient palaces of Puna, and have during a large part of the year kept the rural districts in alarm, to call them rebels; the punishment of their leaders may be said to have ended the organised system of daccity, but we still hear of scattered cases. It is but just to recall to our readers that there has been no reason to give credit to the existence of widespread disaffection, or even discontent, as connected with the lawless acts of Wasadeo Bulwunt and his gang. The late rumour of Arabs and Afghans making their way to Hyderabad may perhaps revive the ideas that were prevalent in the early part of last summer and again create a phantom of rebellion in the Deccan. The outbreak in the hilly and jungle-covered districts of the Godavery district, which so often is mentioned in our columns as the Rampa rebellion, still refuses to yield to the Madras Government. Since March last, when the hillmen fired upon the magistrate, and nearly cut off a detachment of police, the authority of the Government has been set at defiance. It is true that fever has been the most fatal opponent of the handful of troops and police who have latterly, with more success, been endeavouring to restore order, but it does not say much for the wisdom which has planned the operations that every mail should bring us fresh proofs that Chendria and his followers are still unsubdued. It is so far satisfactory to know that the irritating cause of this, as of a former outbreak in the same district, was the abuse of power by a mansabdar. The tranquillising of the Rampa district will need care, and also, apparently, more vigour than has been hitherto exhibited. The year 1879 has thus been marked by internal as well as external troubles, and wars great and small. But the evidence from all parts of India is strongly in favour of a favourable balance being struck on the side of loyalty, which, strange as it may seem to some Englishmen, is encouraged, not lessened, by a manifestation of strong determination to put down both domestic and foreign foes

GENERAL SIR P. S. LUMSDEN.

THE following appears among the general orders by his Excellency the Commander in Chief, under date Dec. 1:—

"Major General Sir P. S. Lumsden, K.C.B., C.S.I., having on the 1st September last completed five years' service as adjutant general of the army in India, vacated the appointment from that date. It would be impossible, within the limits of a general order, to record in an adequate manner the eminently valuable services rendered by Sir Peter Lumsden during the period of twenty-seven years, in the course of which he has filled many highly responsible posts on the staff of the army; has proved himself throughout an accomplished soldier, and an able, self-reliant public servant; and has won for himself, by his discretion and judgment, the well-merited confidence of his superiors. Sir Peter Lumsden's latest and best opportunities of doing good service have arisen out of the Afghan War. At its commencement his topographical knowledge of Afgnanistan, and his familiarity with the language and customs of the Afghans and of the Pathan border tribes, specially qualified him to advise, as adjutant general, on all matters pertaining to the concentration, the equipment, and the provisioning of the troops destined to operate in those regions and in the midst of those tribes. Subsequently, when after a brief interval of peace the necessity for a renewal of hostilities arose, it was on him, as chief of the staff, that the duty of carrying out the details connected with the reorganisation of the field force for the advance on Cabul devolved; a duty which he performed with the utmost industry and intelligence. His sagacious counsel and ever-ready fertility of resource, by the aid of which the Commander in Chief has been enabled to meet the numerous demands made upon him by the varying phases of the war, and to give effect to the political requirements of the Government of India, in so far as they were dependent on military action, also call for special recognition. With what straightforward honesty of purpose, with what judgement, uniform kindness, and strict impartiality, he has invariably placed before the Commander in Chief all matters affecting the interests or character of officers and men would never have been known unless recorded here. Sir Peter Lumsden's appointment as chief of the staff was temporary only, and now that the emergency to meet which it was created has passed he relinquishes it and leaves India on furlough. Sir Frederick Haines heartily congratulates him on his advancement to the dignity of Knight Commander of the Bath, a proof that his services have gained the approval of the highest authority; and trusts that he may yet see him in the performance of duties higher, though not more arduous or responsible, than those he is now resigning; and, in bidding him farewell, his Excellency feels assured that he is joined by the assenting voice of the army of India in all its branches and departments."

CAPT. DUNDAS, V.C., R.E.

CAPT. JAMES DUNDAS, V.C., R.E., whose death, according to Sir F. Roberts's telegram of Dec. 23 from Cabul, was caused by an untimely explosion while engaged in blowing up the towers of a village in the neighbourhood of Cabul, and who was a short time since acting as executive engineer of the first grade in the Department of Public Works, obtained his commission as first lieutenant in June, 1860, and served in the Bhootan expedition in 1865, and, in company with Capt. W. S. Trevor, was awarded the Victoria Cross for gallant conduct at the attack on the blockhouse at Dewangiri on April 30 of that year. Major General Tombs, C.B., V.C., the officer in command at the time, in recording the act of gallantry, remarked that a party of the enemy, from 180 to 200 in number, had barricaded themselves in the blockhouse in question, which they continued to defend after the rest of the position had been carried and the main body was in retreat. The blockhouse, which was loopholed, formed the key of the enemy's position. Seeing no officer of the storming party near, and being anxious that the place should be taken immediately, as any protracted resistance might have caused the main body of the Bhooteas to rally, the British force having been fighting in a broiling sun on very steep and difficult ground for upwards of three hours, the general in command ordered these two officers to show the way into the blockhouse. They had to climb up a wall which was fourteen feet high, and then to enter a house occupied by some 200 desperate men, head foremost, through an opening not more than two feet wide between the top of the wall and the roof of the blockhouse. Major General Tombs states that on speaking to the Sikh soldiers around him, and telling them in Hindustani to swarm up the wall, none of them responded to the call until these two officers had shown them the way, when they followed with the greatest alacrity. They were both wounded, and both received the medal with clasp for their services in the campaign. —Broad Arrow.

MAJOR GENERAL M'DONALD.

MAJOR GENERAL JAMES DAWSON M'DONALD died, after a short illness, on Dec. 25, at his residence, 8, Douro-place, Kensington. He was born in 1819 at Coulnakyle, in Strathspey, and entered the Bengal Army in 1840, and retired in 1874. General M'Donald served in the Gwalior and Rajputana campaigns. He was commandant at Neemuch when the mutiny occurred. Most of his brother officers were then killed, and he himself made a narrow escape. Soon after the mutiny the Government resolved to raise a corps of Meenas, and the carrying out of this resolution fell to Captain M'Donald. The Meenas are described in official documents as a lawless hill tribe, by nature turbulent, independent, and vagabond. Sir William Sleeman pronounced them irreclamable, and, according to him, they pursued the crime of dacoity more systematically than any other Indian tribe. But they were tall, handsome, athletic, and brave; and, though bloodthirsty and revengeful, they were believed to be sensible of kindness, obedient to their leaders, and proud of their descent. Out of this raw material there was raised a force of about 1,000 strong, now known as the Deolee Irregulars, but long spoken of more familiarly as "M'Donald's Meenas." They were dressed like French Zouaves, but they wore the Glengarry cap.—Scotsman.

RUSSIA AND CABUL.

WE referred recently to certain documents which had been found in the archives of Cabul, and of which the effect was discreditable to the part which the Russian Government has played recently in the Afghan politics. The fact appears to be that an immense mass of correspondence relating to this matter is now before the Government at home, as the fruit of the researches which General Roberts has made since his occupation of the Afghan capital. The serious aspect, of which we have already spoken, is imparted to this correspondence by the fact that it includes direct instructions from the Russian Government to its agents in Central Asia marking out the course they were to follow in their relations with Shere Ali. It will be remembered that the excuse made by the Russian Government for its disregard of old standing promises to regard Afghanistan as outside the sphere of Russian operations had reference to the recent action taken by the Indian Government since it has been administered by Lord Lytton, and since the course of events in Europe threatened an outbreak of direct war between England and Russia, in presence of which the sanctity of old pledges, according to the Russian view at any rate, would have been dissolved. The Russian mission of last year was accounted for entirely on this latter hypothesis. It was a defensive measure that the Russians felt bound to undertake in order to put themselves in a position to make an effective diversion against India, when once the declaration of war might be made. And the English opposition papers, grasping readily at any notion which would serve to cast discredit upon British policy as directed by Lord Beaconsfield, have not hesitated to declare that the Russian mission was a legitimate consequence of Lord Lytton's interference and the warlike preparation of the Home Government. Now, it appears, the recently discovered papers show that Russian intrigues against Afghanistan were plotted by the Government at St. Petersburg as far back as 1873. The present papers, going back to that year, include documents bearing Prince Gortschakoff's signature, and affording conclusive proof that the excuses lately put forward by the Russian Government were absolutely insincere. Light is thrown upon some other phases of the Afghan episode by other papers of the present series. Thus it appears that, so late as fifteen months ago, when this Government was threatening Shere Ali after the repulse of Sir Neville Chamberlain, the Russians assured their deluded victim that no English force could possibly reach Cabul in less than two years. But the essential feature of the present discovery is that which exhibits the utter disregard of truth involved in the language which Russian diplomacy has lately employed in its explanation of the part it played in the precipitation of the late war.—Pioneer.

THE DALAI LAMA.

THE following account has been received of the recent installation of a Dalai Lama and the programme of bringing him into Lhassa:—On the 10th of Sawun Sudee (28th July, 1879) all officers of the Bhote (Tibetan) Government, and the Bawras monks) of the several gumbahs (monasteries), down to the rank of chitum, pitched their tents and remained in waiting. From the 10th until the 12th Sawun (28th-30th July, 1879) everyone remained in his tent. On the 12th of Sawun Sudee (30th July, 1879), the Lama was brought into the tent and installed on the guddee, when the Ambahs and others, according to precedence, presented khotas (a silk article of dress), and a nâtch was held. On the 13th of Sawun Sudee (31st July), the Lama was conveyed from the tent to Potla (the palace monastery of the Dalai Lama on the plain of Lhassa). The road was then lined by Bawras of the several gumbahs on both sides, each with an umbrella and a flag for presentation. Thus attended, the Lama was conveyed from Reika (apparently the place where the present Lama was discovered) to Potla, the Chinese and Bhotia officers joining in the procession. On the next day the Lama was put on the guddee; before that he was made to stand before it; and the Ambah then put before him the presents from the Emperor of China; after which two papers in Chinese and another in Bhotia were read. The Lama, then, facing to the east, knelt down and bowed his head in obeisance to the Emperor of China. After going through all these ceremonies he sat on the guddee. The Chinese papers alluded to above are said to be an order from the Chinese Emperor to the effect that, having learnt from Tale Lama, the Chinese Ambah, and the four Cazis of Bhote, that the new Lama has identified the deceased Lama's things as his own, the Chinese Emperor authorises him to sit on his former guddee. When the Lama went from Reika to Potla the road was swept, and doors and windows of houses were adorned, while those who omitted to do this were severely punished. This is said to be the 13th incarnation, if certain pretenders are omitted.—Press Commissioner.

HOME NEWS.

OBITUARY.—General Frederick William Burroughs, whose death is just announced, entered the Bengal Army on January 8, 1825, and was posted to the 17th Native Infantry, of which he was adjutant for some twelve years. He was aide de camp to Major General Sir J. H. Littler, G.C.B., in the Sutlej campaign, and during the Punjab campaign served as deputy assistant adjutant general. Major Burroughs was in command of the 17th Bengal Native Infantry when it mutinied at Azimghur on June 3, 1857. The older soldiers of the regiment, however, rallied round him and the other officers, and, conducting them and their families in safety to Goruckpore, the next military station, afterwards marched off to join the King of Delhi. General Burroughs was placed on the retired list of general officers in July, 1879. His commissions bear the following dates:—Ensign, Jan. 8, 1825; lieutenant, Oct. 19, 1827; captain, by brevet, Jan. 8, 1840; captain, Oct., 1841; brevet major, Nov. 11, 1851; major, Sept. 9, 1856; brevet lieutenant colonel, Feb. 4, 1859; lieutenant colonel, Dec. 27, 1859; major general, April 20, 1868; lieutenant general, May 24, 1877; general, July, 18, 1879. He died aged seventy-three years.

MAJOR ANTHONY CUNNINGHAM, whose death took place on Friday, at Bath-road, Hounslow, was one of the few survivors of Sale's "illustrious garrison" and of those who marched through the famed Bolan and Khyber Passes. The deceased served in the 13th, Prince Albert's Light Infantry, with the army of the Indus, 1839-42, and was present at the storming of Ghuznee, July, 1841; the storming of the Khoord Cabul Pass, Oct. 12; the affair of Tezeen, Oct. 22; the forcing of the Jugdulluk Pass on Oct. 29; the reduction of Fort Mamov Khail on Nov. 6; the heroic defence of Jellalabad; the sorties on Nov. 1, Dec. 1, 1841 (when he was wounded), and March 11, March 24, and April 1, 1842; the general action and defeat before Jellalabad, on April 7, 1842, of Sirdar Mahomed Akbhar Khan Barukzye, son of Dost Mahomed, and the assassin of the British Envoy, and treacherous destroyer of the Cabul force (medal and gunshot wound); storming the heights of Jugdulluk, Sept. 8; general action at Tezeen, Sept. 13; recapture of Cabul, Sept. 15 (medal). He proceeded to Suffuk Kak, under Sir R. Sale, for the purpose of bringing in the Cabul captives (Lady Sale, &c.) This gallant officer also served throughout the Crimean war, 1854-5, and in the China war, 1857-8.

H.M.'s TROOPSHIPS AND RELIEFS.—In addition to the 30th Regiment and drafts the following officers are under orders to proceed to India on board the Serapis, Capt. Twiss, on the 7th inst.:—Lieut. Baird, 14th Foot; Capt. Lawrence, 18th Foot; Capt. Rushbrooke, 15th Foot; Lieut. Forbes, 7th Foot; Lieut. M'Intyre, 78th Foot; Lieut. Doyne, 6th Foot; Capt. Chard, 7th Foot; Lieut. Tennant, 16th Foot; Quartermaster Horner and Lieut. Vint, 17th Foot; Capt. Rendle, Madras Staff; Capt. Walker and Lieut. Elliot, Bombay Staff; and Surgeons-Major R. de la C. Corbett, J. Riddick, and M. Cogan, and Surgeon Rose, of the Army Medical Department. The Indian trohpship Crocodile, Capt. Doughty, left Portsmouth on Friday afternoon for Bombay. She takes out the 2nd Battalion 5th Regiment, from Chatham, consisting of 28 officers, 50 sergeants, 17 drummers, and 675 men; drafts for the 29th, 39th, 1st Battalion 21st, and 48th Regiments and Royal Engineers, amounting in the aggregate to ten sergeants, nine trumpeters, and 389 rank and file; and the following officers:—Capt. Jackson and Lieut. Davidson, 21st Foot; Lieut. Pilkington, R.E.; Lieut. Moulton-Barratt, 73rd Foot; Lieut. Corfield, 25th Foot; Lieut. Harding, 5th Foot; Lieuts. Custance and Lysons, 90th Foot; Lieut. Whitaker, 5th Foot; Lieut. Saunders, 10th Hussars; Lieut. Honeywood, 66th Foot; Capt. Morris, 14th Foot; Capt. Claremont, 29th Foot; Capts. Bradford and Malet, 39th Foot; Lieut. Bennet, 48th Foot; Lieut. Pitt, R.E.; Surg. Majors Davies and Hare and Surg. O'Connell, A.M.D.; and Surg. J. Maitland, Madras Medical Department. A telegram to Lloyd's from Aden, dated January 2, says that her Majesty's ship Malabar had arrived there. A telegram received through Reuter's Agency from Malta, dated January 2, says:—"The Indian troopship Euphrates has proceeded for Bombay, free pratique being refused in consequence of her having one case of scarlet fever on board. The patient was landed in the lazaretto. With this one exception the health on board was good."

THE Malabar, Capt. Grant, which was timed to arrive at Bombay on the 11th inst. with artillery and drafts, instead of again leaving for Portsmouth on the 18th, according to programme, has been ordered to proceed to Natal to embark the 1st Dragoon Guards for passage to Bombay. It was intended that the Dragoon Guards should be stationed at Meerut and that the 15th Hussars should return to England on being relieved; but these arrangements will greatly depend upon the necessities of the war. The Malabar will make two voyages between Portsmouth and Bombay, instead of three as proposed when the 2nd Battalion 5th Fusiliers, under the command of Lieut. Col. Bigge, left Chatham garrison. The marching out strength of the regiment was 30 officers, 50 sergeants, and 640 rank and file. The strength of the regiment should be 850, but on its arrival in India it will receive some transfers from the 1st Battalion 5th Fusiliers, which will come home on affairs in Afghanistan becoming a little more settled. The 2nd Battalion of the 5th has been stationed at Chatham since May 27, 1877.

THE OPIUM TRADE.—Both the importation of opium into China and the cultivation of it in China itself have been steadily on the increase. The importation has been since 1871 as follows:—1871, 59,670 piculs; 1872, 61,193 piculs; 1873, 65,797 piculs; 1874, 67,463 piculs; 1875, 66,461 piculs; 1876, 68,042 piculs; 1877, 69,052 piculs; 1878, 71,492 piculs. The picul is equal to 133lb. avoirdupois. Most of the opium finds its way into China through Hong Kong. The largest portion of it is of the Malwa growth. The rest comes from Patna, Benares, and other parts of India. About 11,000 chests are sent yearly to America for the use of the Chinese living in California.

ELECTRIC TIME-BALL FOR INDIA.—The Indian Government having decided upon erecting an electric time-ball and gun-firing apparatus at Fort William, Calcutta, the same has been designed by Mr. S. Alfred Varley, who has had special experience in this class of electrical mechanism. The apparatus consists, in the first place, of a clock, which will be placed at the observatory, together with a commutator for sending the electric currents to lock and to release the time-ball and to actuate the gun-firing apparatus, and which also records at the observatory the correct operation of the same. In the next place, there is the time-ball and its locking apparatus, which will be placed at Fort William, with the gun-firing mechanism in its vicinity, the two being connected by electric wires with the commutator and clock at the observatory, which may be any distance away. The apparatus for India has been manufactured at the works of Messrs. Siebe and Gorman, Mason-street, Westminster-bridge-road, where its working was lately inspected by General Hyde and Mr. W. F. Batho, C.E., on behalf of the Indian Government, and by whom it has been duly approved, and will be forthwith sent to Calcutta. We may add that a set of time-ball apparatus, similar to that described, is in course of construction for another Indian station.

MAILS FOR INDIA, CEYLON, CHINA, &C.—The Postmaster General gives notice that, after the end of January, mails will cease to be sent to India, Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, Labuan, China, or Japan by the route of Southampton. Thenceforward the mails for India will be forwarded solely by the route of Brindisi, and those for Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, Labuan, China, and Japan will be forwarded either by the route of Brindisi, or by French packet viâ Marseilles, week by week, according as the correspondence may be posted in time for one or the other route. The following rates of postage will, from the same date, be charged on prepaid correspondence addressed to the several countries and colonies above mentioned, as well as to all other places eastward of Suez:—Letters, 5d. per ½oz.: post cards, 2d. each; newspapers, not exceeding 4oz., 1½. each; printed papers, patterns, and samples, 1½. per 2oz.; commercial papers, the same as for printed papers, but with the proviso that the lowest charge for any packet shall 2½d. Unpaid letters will be charged on delivery with double postage. The privileged letters of soldiers and seamen will be charged 2d. each and unless this rate be paid upon them they can only be forwarded by private ship as opportunity offers.

SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY.—The warrants for the half year's interest have been forwarded to the proprietors, and are now payable at the Union Bank of London. The interest on the debenture bonds of the company is also payable at the same place on presentation of the coupons.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England for Rs.40,00,000 in Government bills on India. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta Rs.28,94,000, and to Bombay Rs.11,06,000. Tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 8 1/16d. will receive about 2½ per cent., above in full. Compared with last week this price shows no alteration. The same amount will be tendered for next Wednesday. Quietness prevailed in the silver market, bars being steady at 52 7-16d., in sympathy with the slightly-improved tendency of the rate at which the drafts were sold, as shown in the proportion in which they were allotted. The reduction in the discount rate of the Bank of Bengal from 4 to 3 per cent. is ascribed principally to the amount of money lately remitted from this country to India, in anticipation of an expansion of trade, being considerably in excess of present requirements.

SIND, PUNJAB, AND DELHI RAILWAY.

THE half-yearly meeting was held on Tuesday, at Gresham House, Old Broad-street, for the purpose of receiving a report and statement of accounts from the directors. Mr. W. P. ANDREW, chairman of the company, presided.

Mr. J. H. NOTMAN, the secretary, having read the notice calling the meeting, presented the report of the directors, the substance of which has already appeared in our columns, and it was taken as read.

The CHAIRMAN said the report had not been placed in the hands of the shareholders so early as usual, and the meeting had been postponed until the latest moment possible. That had been caused by the fact that the board believed that they would be able to lay before the shareholders an agreement for this company working the Indus Valley State line of railway. Unfortunately those negotiations, prolonged as they had been, had not yet come to a head. The company had evinced every desire to meet the Government of India, and there was also a willingness on the part of the Government, but for some reason or other the negotiations were incomplete and the heads of the complete agreement not yet settled. It was, however, no fault of the board—of that he could assure the meeting. (Hear, hear.) The line had been of great service to the Government, and the company's officials had shown the highest administrative capacity, and were entitled to the thanks not only of the shareholders but to those of the country generally. As showing the services rendered to the Government, he had caused to be prepared an estimate of the number of troops, followers, horses, camels, &c., and military stores despatched to Afghanistan since the movement of troops commenced on 9th of September, and the returns were made up to the 26th of November, the details of which would be most interesting at the prenset moment. During that time the company had despatched for Jhelum 22,719 troops and followers; 14,367 horses, ponies, and mules; 4,720 camels; 27,610 horned cattle; 3,094 carts (country); 20 ambulance carts; 4 heavy guns; 5 wagons of treasure; 34 tons of ammunition; 598 tons troops' personal baggage; 57,179 tons of commissariat stores; 1,518 tons of miscellaneous baggage, equipment, fodder, &c. For Sukkur, 11,932 tons of rails; 6,575 tons of miscellaneous railway materials; 67,400 sleepers; 20,000 tons of rails and material via Karachi. The only casualties had been that 20 camels, 2 ponies, and 3 bullocks had died in trains, a very small number considering the magnitude of the service rendered and the hurry of the despatch. It would also be interesting to the shareholders to know that the cost of conveyance of troops, &c., from the coast destined for Afghanistan through the Khyber Pass would be 5 per cent. more on the land carriage via Bombay than by Karachi, and on those destined for the same place through the Bolan 523 per cent. more on the land carriage via Bombay than by Karachi, if the rates on both lines were the same, but they were somewhat lower on this company's system. The new line to Candahar would bring Manchester within five weeks of Central Asia, the trade of which at the present moment, with all drawbacks, exceeded over £1,000,000 annually. Turning to the report, he said the returns would have been better had it not been for the extraordinary repairs necessary, over £65,000 being required for the repairs of the bridges. He concluded by moving the adoption of the report and accounts.

Sir EDWARD THORNTON, C.B., the deputy chairman, in seconding the motion, said he could not do so in the usual formal manner simply, but desired to endorse the very favourable remarks made by the chairman as to the officials and the management generally. Since the last meeting of the shareholders the railway had been put to the use for which it was originally intended, namely, to serve the Government in time of emergency and need. (Hear, hear) The service had been rendered ably and well by the staff, who had nobly done their duty.

The CHAIRMAN, in reply to the various speakers, said that the reduction of the fares was at one time hotly opposed in India, but the board were decided, and the lower fares were introduced. They had been so successful in producing not only a large accession of traffic but a fair increase in the net receipts, that the board was fully inclined to go a step further in the reduction of third-class fares. As to the £5 shares, he, being a large holder, would be only too glad to pay up in full; but at the present moment the Secretary of State had a balance of £292,000 in hand, so there was really no reason why the board should ask to be allowed to make a call. In other words, as the lawyers would say, if they went to the Secretary of State and asked to be allowed to make a call they would have no case. Since last June, however, some £30,000 had been expended, and so there was a possibility of a call being made within a reasonable time. It was no doubt most unfortunate for shareholders to have to hold money in hand so as to be ready to meet a call when made, but it was no fault of the board. To the other question he would say that if there had been a break of gauge, as was at one time proposed by the Indian Government and opposed by this company, it would have been simply impossible for this railway to have rendered that efficient assistance it had done in the recent emergency.

The report having been adopted, unanimous votes of thanks were accorded to the chairman and his colleagues.

The CHAIRMAN, in reply, said he was greatly obliged to the meeting for the vote just so unanimously accorded, and he desired to give expression to the opinion of the meeting as to the staff of the company by moving that the thanks of the shareholders be given to Mr. C. Stone, to Mr. Ross, and the officials and staff acting under them for their able services during the past six months, and it would afford both himself and his colleagues very great pleasure to transmit such a resolution.

LAND MORTGAGE BANK OF INDIA.

AN extraordinary half-yearly general meeting was held on Wednesday at the Cannon-street Hotel; Mr. J. R. BOYSON, chairman of the board of directors, presiding.

In moving the adoption of the report, the CHAIRMAN regretted that the unpromising state of things reported last June had not improved since then. The reasonable expectations they entertained at the commencement of the year had fallen short seriously, particularly with regard to tea. They looked forward to a yield of fully 1,029,000lb. of tea, which was at least three times the amount of profit for the season's crop. This, and other features having to do with their property, was by no means satisfactory. From their knowledge of business, however, and of the state of trade generally which had prevailed for a lengthened period, these results would not be altogether unexpected. He had hopes that the actual facts would not be worse than had been contemplated. The repayment of principal on the reduction of current loans had not been as much as in 1878. The directors considered that more a matter of congratulation than of regret, as they were satisfied that all their current loans were more than covered by sufficient mortgage securities, and the larger guarantee they had bearing interest at 10 per cent. the better for the revenue account. According to their latest letters and reports from India the yield for 1880 was estimated at 14,200 maunds, or 1,136,000lb. of tea, being upwards of 263,000lb. more than that of the present year's production. A proposal of the Government to buy property in Bombay would probably set a large amount of money going, some of which, the directors trusted, would be invested in land and building. The report contained the usual announcement that all financial arrangements had been satisfactorily provided for. Their debenture liability had been reduced further, and on January 1 would be only a little over £400,000, whereas a few years since it stood at between £600,000 and £700,000. In the report it was stated that the sterling proceeds from the 1879 tea crop would probably suffice to cover all the bank's liabilities of the current year, as well as the coupons and debentures payable on January 1, amounting to £24,217. He could state now positively that the proceeds referred to would cover all those liabilities. As to a dividend, the directors were not able to make any positive statement, but they had every reason to hope that they should be in a position when the time arrived, and recommended a dividend of 1s. 6d. per share on the reduced capital of the bank. Should there be any considerable rise in the value of tea, and should they in the meantime dispose of any property they had for sale, their position would, of course, be improved. Now, however, the directors would not hold to any larger dividend than 1s. 6d. a share. The report was unanimously adopted and a vote of thanks to the chairman and directors concluded the business.

THE FACTORY ACT.—The Bombay Chamber of Commerce adopted at its recent meeting some important amendments to its memorial on the Factory Bill, which now forms a very valuable antidote to the interested representations made by the Bombay millowners. Mr. Hector succeeded in carrying resolutions to give the workpeople in mills one hour for their meals in every working day of twelve hours, and one day of entire rest out of every seven. He mentioned, in support of this latter motion, the interesting fact in the mill with which he is connected, the experiment of working only six days in the week has been tried with the best results, the people employed doing their work so much better for the one day's rest that the out-turn of the mill was quite as large as it had been when work was continued through all the seven days. A native gentleman objected to letting the operatives have an hour for their meals, as, he said, it only took him ten minutes to eat his dinner. But, if he worked in a mill from six o'clock in the morning till six in the evening, he would probably be glad of a respite of more than ten minutes during the day. We are glad to notice that Mr. Hector corrected the statement which has gone abroad, that the Government of India was induced by "Manchester" to take up the question of factory legislation, in order to hamper the Indian cotton mills in their competition with English manufacturers. This odious falsehood has been diligently circulated by people who certainly ought to have known that Lord Shaftesbury and Mr. Sorabji Shapoorji Bengali originated the bill now before the Legislative Council of India. It is surprising that the local millowners do not see how much discredit is brought on their cause by the publication of these shameful libels on their English rivals.—Bombay Gazette.

This new West-end Club, which now numbers 1,500 members, is open in one of the best portions in the West-end, being at the corner of Pall-mall, opposite the Athenæum Club.

This Club is established to meet the wants of Gentlemen who, owing to the almost dead-lock existing among the leading West-end Clubs, are at present without the advantages of one.

The Club is intended for members of Town and Country Society, and one of its objects also is, as its name also denotes, to offer a place of resort for Men of Travel and other Gentlemen who have associated in various parts of the world.

The Entrance Fee at present is Ten Guineas, which will be raised when the strength of the Club is completed.

The annual subscription is Eight Guineas, but Members residing beyond a radius of fifty miles from London are admitted as Country Members at an annual subscription of Four Guineas.

The Subscription of Officers on Foreign Service is One Guinea, and other Gentlemen residing abroad Two Guineas.

This Club being strictly proprietary the Members incur no liability.

A RIDE TO KHIVA
BY
CAPTAIN FRED. BURNABY,
Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 13:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken: and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheik, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a 'medicine man' had not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

LAMPLOUGH'S EFFERVESCING

PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators; also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates

Her Majesty's Representative the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, 2 teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

A RIDE TO KHIVA

BY

Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 13:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheik, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a 'medicine man' had not died out, bent that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, JANUARY 12, 1880.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Dec. 22; Madras and Allahabad, Dec. 20; Calcutta, Dec. 19.

THE general reports on the season and crops for the week ending Dec. 9 are as follow:—Slight rain has again fallen in several districts of the Madras Presidency, but none has fallen elsewhere. Want of rain is felt in Orissa, and in a less degree in the Punjab and parts of the Deccan. Cotton, tobacco, and pulse have been somewhat damaged by frost in Western, Central, and Northern India. The autumn harvest has mostly been gathered in, and the spring crops promise well. The general health is improving.

THE health reports for the same week are as follow:—Bombay: Fever prevalent in Ahmedabad, Surat, and Kanara. Bengal: In cyclone tracts of Chittagong cholera unabated; public health on the whole fair, but fever in some places; ordinary fever in many places of 24-Pergunnahs; cholera and small-pox here and there. North West Provinces and Oudh: Health improving. Punjab: Fever continues in Lahore and Rawul Pindi; elsewhere abating. Central Provinces: Health improving. British Burma: General health good. Assam: Good. Berar and Hyderabad: Fever slightly prevalent. Rajputana: Fever abating.

THE following telegrams have been sent to us from the India-office for publication:—

"FROM VICEROY, JAN. 6.—Bright reports five men, Carabiniers, returning from reconnaissance, Lughman Valley, drowned yesterday crossing Cabul River at usual ford near Derchuta Gorge. News from Roberts to 4th. Charles Gough's brigade has reoccupied Bala Hissar, where troops will soon be provided with quarters. Hugh Gough has left to arrange communications to Gandamak. Macgregor goes to Jellalabad to consult with Bright about disposition on Khyber line. Regular postal communications re-established, and telegraph repairs being pushed on. 12th Bengal Cavalry has left Cabul for Jellalabad, 14th for Bootkek and Gandamak; convoy of sick leaving on 5th for India. Cabul quiet and refilled; supplies more plentiful than before rising."

"FROM VICEROY, JAN. 9.—Following casualties during recent fighting at Cabul not hitherto reported:—Men killed or died of wounds, G 3rd, Gunner Holt; 72nd Highlanders, Colour-Sergeant John Yule, Corporal A. Wilson; Drummers F. Adams and P. Girvan; Privates W. Ritchie, J. Taylor, J. Light, John Fraser, M. Mally, E. Thomson, J. Gray, J. J. Cole, W. Henry, J. Tees, George Miller, and Peter Glen; 92nd Highlanders, Privates White, J. S. Wood, and William Davis. Five officers have had small-pox at Cabul. One is well, others nearly so."

THE principal items of interest in the Cabul, Gandamak, and Calcutta telegrams published this morning are as follow:—

"After the repulse and dispersion of those in arms on Dec. 23 General Roberts forthwith issued a further proclamation, of which the following is the purport:—

"'At the instigation of some seditious men the ignorant people, generally not considering the result, have raised a rebellion. Now, many of the insurgents have received their reward. The British Government being just and merciful as well as strong, it is now proclaimed that all who come in without delay will be pardoned, excepting only Mahomed Jan, of Wardak; Meer Batcha, the Kohistani chief; Samundur Khan, of Logar; Ghulam Hyder of Churkh; and the murderers of Sirdar Mahomed Hassan Khan. Come, then, and make submission, of whatever tribe you be. You can then remain in your homes in comfort and safety, and no harm will befall you. The British Government has no enmity towards the people. Anyone who rebels again will, of course, be punished. This condition is necessary, but all who come in without delay need have no fear or suspicion. The British Government speaks only what it means in its heart.'" The correspondent continues: "Last week I mentioned that the fortress of Ghazni was held in our interest by one Abdul Kadir. I have now to report that the custodians of the boy Moosa Khan have obtained entrance into it. Moosa Khan is at present in the hands of only a military adventurer, Mahomed Jan, and the fanatical old priest, Mooshi-Alum. With this unimportant exception, he is unsupported by any sirdar of birth. His mother is with General Roberts and is most anxious that he should return to Cabul. At present General Roberts's efforts are being directed towards the breaking up of the party which is using the boy as its tool, and he has to this end the apparently loyal and valuable services of Mustaufi Habibullah, who has fortunately not departed to India with the others. He is a most valuable instrument for political use in the general's hands. It was in any case better that Moosa should have been taken to Ghazni than Turkestan, for instance. The Hazara people are in our interest, and may make a future exit from Ghazni difficult for Mahomed Jan and his adherents.

"The troops are enjoying rest after their late hardships. The weather is milder than it was, and, so far, the rigours of the Cabul winter seem to have been overrated. Strenuous efforts are being made to place communications with India on a safe and permanent footing. The telegraph line has been restored. General Bright will act energetically against the Ghilzai chief who, with characteristic cunning, watched the opportunity to annoy us when General Roberts had the late combination on his hands. The other Ghilzai chief, Padshah Khan, is in Sherpur. Naib Noor Mahomed Kuzzulbash, who was deputy-governor of Turkestan under Shere Ali, has been nominated agent by General Roberts in that province. He is accompanied by the son of Wali Mahomed.

"An interesting durbar was held on the 9th for the purpose of publicly acknowledging the services of the many sirdars and others who assisted us through the late events. Opportunity was also taken to give a public reception to a large number of Kohistan, Ghilzai, and Logar petty chiefs who came in under the terms of the recent proclamation.

"A great public loss was sustained by the death on the 9th of the principal medical officer with this force, Dr. J. H. Porter, of pneumonia. His services have been of the greatest value both in this and the last campaign.

"A reconnoitring party, consisting of the Carabiniers and the 3rd Bengal Cavalry, went out from Jellalabad, crossing a ford over the Cabul River near Fort Sale, for the purpose of examining the entrance into the Lughman Valley. After a successful reconnaissance, Capt. the Hon. C. Dutton, assistant quartermaster general, and Major W. J. Boyes, assistant adjutant general, being with the party, they returned by a ford at the foot of the Dorunta Gorge, a very narrow and difficult gorge round which the Lughman Valley commences. Here some carabiniers lost the line of crossing, and five men were drowned. No bodies were recovered, but four horses were saved. Asmatulla Khan is supposed to be in the Lughman Valley. Nasrula Khan, the Hissarak Ghilzai, has been invited to come into Gandamak. Five shots were fired at our convoy from Pezwan yesterday, a quarter of a mile out of the camp. General Arbuthnot, with his staff, and Colonel Tweedie, the chief political officer, are at Gandamak.

"It is announced that the reserve division assembling at Peshawur will be commanded by Major General J. Ross, who would have under him the following brigadiers:—Cavalry and Artillery, Lieut. Col. Hankin, B.S.C. Infantry, Col. Roberts, 5th Foot; Col. R. S. Hill, 1st Goorkhas; and Brigadier General W. A. Gib, M.S.C. The division will be composed as follows:—Artillery, D Battery, A Brigade, and I Battery C. Brigade, R.H.A., and L Battery 5th Brigade, R.A.; cavalry, 8th Hussars, 4th Bengal Cavalry, Central India Horse; infantry, 1st Battalion 5th Fusiliers, 2nd Battalion 14th Foot, 1st Battalion 25th Foot, 9th and 16th Native Infantry, 32nd Pioneers, 41st Native Infantry, 1st Goorkhas, and 1st and 15th Madras Native Infantry. A new Bombay brigade of three regiments, under General Burrows, has also been ordered to the front; it is probably destined as a support to the Candahar force."

A REUTER'S telegram from Bombay states that Major Evan Smith has been ordered to Candahar from his present post at Muscat on special political duty.

THE Press Commissioner informs us that there is no truth in, or foundation for, the statement that has recently appeared in some papers to the effect that the Khan of Khelat had an interview with his Excellency Sir Richard Temple at Gundava and raised vexatious questions at the instigation of his vakeels. Sir Richard Temple did not return by Gundava. The Khan is at Khelat, and no interview took place between him and the Governor of Bombay. No vexatious political question has been raised by the Khan or by his vakeels, who are giving all assistance.

A Standard telegram from Berlin says that the Persian Government has instructed the Governor of the Province of Khorassan, which is adjacent both to Merv and to the Russian possessions on the east of the Caspian Sea, to obtain precise information touching the preparations for hostilities on the part both of the Turcomans and the Russians, and to report the result of his inquiries to Teheran. Upon his doing so the expediency of establishing a corps of observation in the Attrek Valley and on the Merv frontier will be decided upon. These cautionary measures illustrate the anxiety felt by the Shah as to what may be the result of a successful Russian campaign against Merv.

THE Indian Association is about to draft a scheme of representative government in India. The Calcutta Statesman thinks that definite reasons must be given for rejecting definite proposals, and thus the way may be paved for future plans. At the same time the Statesman admits that a representative Government for the whole of India is impracticable. This would seem to be a sufficient answer to the body which does not, though it pretends to, represent the Indian populations.

A RECENT Reuter's telegram informed us that the Government of India have decided to allow the rules respecting newspaper correspondents with the troops on active service to remain in abeyance, leaving to the discretion of the commanders the question of imposing restrictions upon them if necessary. No correspondent, however, will be permitted to proceed to the front without a license. It will be remembered by our readers that these obnoxious rules were formulated by the Horse Guards and published in India as sent out, mutatis mutandis.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE'S proposal to carry the new line of railway from Ruk to Pishin and towards Candahar, via Sibi, Hurnai, the Chappar mountain, and Gival, has met with the approval of H.E. the Viceroy.

THE Secretary of State has approved of the deputation of an officer of the Forest Department to report upon the forests of the Kuram district and to devise means for supplying the cantonments with timber without injury to the forests.

THE Postmaster General of Madras (Mr. H. G. Turner) was married to Miss Gore Langton, sister of the member for East Somerset, and niece of the Duke of Buckingham, at Madras on the 18th ult.

THE safe arrival of Mrs. Precha, daughter of Mr. Knox, late consul general for Siam, is announced from Singapore. Her husband was condemned to death on conviction of two distinct charges of embezzlement of the royal treasure, of having caused the death, in prison, of a man who sought to give information of his frauds, and, lastly, of ordering two Chinamen to be drowned.

AN official note from the Press Commissioner states, with reference to the questions that have been asked regarding the amount of warm clothing supplied to the Cabul Force, that the following is the state of the case:—Warm clothing despatched from Peshawur towards Cabul to date, General Roberts's two divisions for troops, British and native: jerseys, 11,406; socks, 23,866; mittens, 8,705; waterproof sheets, 3,255; boots, 4,821; English blankets, 8,590; overcoats, 3,700. At Peshawur, not yet despatched: jerseys, 3,765; socks, 23,405; mittens, 6,870; waterproof sheets, 6,230; boots, 1,889; English blankets, 6,481; overcoats, 5,385. For followers, left Peshawur: coats, 9,678; pyjamahs, 10,291; putties, 19,373; shoes, 14,596; country blankets, 18,240. Still at Peshawur: coats, 11,347; pyjamahs, 7,239; putties, 2,715; shoes, 24,976; country blankets, 11,927; boots, 1,840. Large additional supplies of above are sent on daily to Peshawur from Jhelum by Government bullock train, and further supplies are constantly received at Jhelum from Bombay. Most of the followers with the force were supplied with warm clothing on engagement. Government have no apprehension of there being any deficiency of warm clothing for the troops and followers.

GENERAL SIR JOHN LOW, K.C.B., G.C.S.I., expired on Saturday morning of bronchitis, aged 91 years. Deceased entered the East India Company's service in 1805, became lieut. general in 1859, and general in 1867. He served with distinction in the Isle of France, and with Col. Close against the Pindaries, and in Java, as volunteer with the 59th Foot, for which he received medal, with clasp, being severely wounded at the capture of Fort Cornelis in 1812. He served as brigade major, Persian interpreter, and chief of the intelligence on the staff of Col. Dowse, in the Southern Maratha country. In 1816 he was commissariat officer in the Palnad and Guntoor districts. He was aide de camp to Sir John Malcolm at Mehidpore in 1817, and in 1818 he commanded a field force in Chindwarra, and, as first assistant to Sir John Malcolm, conducted the negotiations with Bajee Rao. His subsequent political services require a more extended notice. He was appointed a military member of the Supreme Council of India in 1853, from which he retired in 1858.

A CABUL correspondent recently describes the escape of General Baker and a small body of lancers from a trap laid for their destruction in a village called Beni Madam. The maliks brought out refreshments and entreated the officers and men to dismount and rest, and the villagers brought forage for the horses. All this show of hospitality was simply a bait. The treacherous tribesmen thus endeavoured to throw the small force off their guard while a concealed band of enemies attempted to surround them. The attempted treachery was perceived barely in time to secure the safety of the party after a sharp skirmish. These are the innocent villagers whom the United Presbyterian Presbytery of Edinburgh have taken under their protection. We read that at a meeting of the United Presbyterian Presbytery of Edinburgh it was unanimously agreed, on the motion of Principal Cairns, "That a memorial be transmitted to her Majesty earnestly entreating her to exercise her authority to put a stop to the atrocities which are being perpetrated in Afghanistan in burning villages and in leaving helpless women and children to die of cold and hunger, proceedings at variance not only with the dictates of Christianity, but even with the laws of civilised warfare." The Presbyterian presbyters may be authorities for some people as to the dictates of Christianity, but are scarcely judges of the laws of war, and, apparently, are patriotic enough to accuse our generals of "atrocities." Perhaps the Presbyterian presbyters are imitating the Afghan maliks and sounding the war-cry of a political Jehad. There's a deal of human nature in man.

THE Government of India has recommended the Queen to permit all regiments, European and native, that served in the late campaign, to inscribe "Afghanistan" on their colours and appointments. A Calcutta paper asks if the Guides cannot be allowed to inscribe "Cabul Residency" for their heroic defence on Sept. 3.

THE chaplains are complaining that, by a recent resolution of the Financial Department, dated July 4, 1879, the travelling allowances granted in 1868 to the wives and families of chaplains proceeding on duty have been rescinded.

THE actual receipts from ten sales of Bengal opium and nine months' past duty on opium exported from Bombay have exceeded the estimated receipts by Rs.77,46,349. Of this surplus, Bengal opium has furnished Rs.45,87,811, and Bombay opium Rs.31,58,538.

AN approximate statement of the gross receipts and expenses of Indian railways from Jan. 1 to Oct. 25, 1879, as compared with the previous year, shows an increase in the gross receipts of the guaranteed railways of Rs.34,46,836, and in those of the State railways of Rs.43,51,082. The Eastern Bengal exhibits a falling off of Rs.3,68,83; Oude and Rohilkund, Rs.1,16,364; and the G. I. Peninsula, Rs.16,69,504. The Nizam's State Railway shows Rs.1,05,278 less this year. Of the guaranteed railways East Indian figures for an increase of Rs.26,41,602; Sind, Punjab, and Delhi, Rs.18,48,742; and Bombay, Baroda, and C. I. for Rs.4,91,802. Among the State railways Rajputana shows an increase of Rs.6,03,152; Punjab Northern, Rs.6,33,325; Northern Bengal, Rs.2,91,868; Dhond and Manmad, Rs.3,12,578; and Indus Valley, Rs.21,17,904.

ACCORDING to the latest trustworthy intelligence from Upper Burma the executions at Mandalay are still continued with unabated cruelty. One of the newly-created princes has, it is said, been put to death for a spring too high in his armour. Five sisters of the Thongazi Prince have also been executed. The reason officially assigned is that they were in correspondence with the Nyoung-yon Prince, but it is alleged that they have fallen victims to the jealousy of the chief queen. Two Ponnas, or (Manipuri) Brahmins, with three Burmese companions, or attendants, have been executed, whether for undertaking to procure poison to be used on the King, or for devotion to the Nyoung-yon Prince's cause, is uncertain. It is stated that the chief queen's elder sister, Soopayahgyee, has been concerned in an attempt to administer poison to the King and Queen. True or false, stories of palace intrigue such as these are made the excuse for remorseless killing off of the unfortunate persons who have incurred the displeasure of the King or his ruling favourites.

THE United Service Gazette hears that in April next a new set of pensions will be offered to the officers of the Indian army, and a rule be brought into force making retirement compulsory after thirty-one years' service, with a pension of £600 per annum. Officers declining this will get nothing more, and be probably compulsorily retired.

THE question of the injury to through traffic and the general trade of the country by the imposition of municipal taxes and octroi duties has been dealt with in a bill recently introduced into the Legislative Council. Our correspondent who last week pointed out the abuse of the octroi system will be pleased to find that the Indian Government had anticipated his complaint and provided a complete remedy for the evil. The statement of objects and reasons says that "in some of the most important entrepots of trade in British India the incidence of the tax has been extended so far beyond its legitimate bounds as to set up what is to all intents and purposes a heavy transit duty. A provision for refund of duty on dutiable articles when exported, and another for providing, in effect, that when the quantity of any commodity taxed in any town in a given year exceeds by one-fourth the estimated consumption, the tax shall be suspended for two years, will effectually prevent the undue taxation of stored grain or other food. The popularity of the octroi system has led to abuses which will for the future be rendered impossible.

THE Gazette of India of 6th ult. contained an announcement of the Calcutta mail being closed on Wednesday, the first Wednesday mail being on 31st December.

THE immediate occupation of Herat by England is advocated in Col. Malleson's forthcoming volume, entitled "Herat, the Garden and Granery of Central Asia." The book will be published by Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co. about the 20th instant.

THE Examiner hears that the publication of Mr. Marvin's new work on the recent Russian expedition against the Turcomans has been entrusted to Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co.

THE Portuguese Governor General in India has telegraphed to Lisbon that the execution of the new treaty will begin on the 15th inst.

THE account of revenue and expenditure of the Government of India for the third month of 1879-80, as compared with the corresponding period of 1878-79, shows an increase of revenue and receipts of £1,689,861, and an increase of expenditure of £657 from April to June in the respective years. Loss by exchange figures this year for £614,995 as compared with £827,883 last year. Land revenue shows an increase of £196,113, salt £297,181, and assessed taxes £304,616. Expenditure on public works ordinary shows a decrease of £116,763, and productive public works show on capital expenditure a decrease of £232,043. Under the head of England, including army, public works ordinary, and guaranteed interest, there is close on £200,000 less, and on army £370,493 more expended.

THE ATTEMPT TO SHOOT LORD LYTTON.

THE leading native paper, the Hindoo Patriot, offers its humble but sincere congratulations to his Excellency the Viceroy and to Sir George Colley on their narrow escape. All India (it adds) rejoices and feels grateful to Providence that the ruffian missed his aim. If he be really a lunatic he should never have been set free.

The Bombay Summachar says :—"It has been suggested that the attempt on the part of an East Indian or Eurasian to assassinate the Viceroy could not have arisen from political motives. But we think it rather premature to put this construction through a feeling of race-sympathy or religion, and to attribute it wholly to drunkenness. Many of the class known as East Indians and residing in Calcutta and other large cities are found to be in a very bad condition. It is not at all improbable that some of them should become the tools of evil-designed persons and budmashes, and seek to cover their guilt under the cloak of drunkenness. It is therefore of importance that close scrutiny should be made as to what led him to commit the dastardly act, and that he be dealt with with requisite severity to serve as a warning to others. That there is one law for all under the British Government is admitted, so that the assassin of a viceroy cannot receive greater punishment at the hands of law than any other criminal, but surely such a person deserves to meet the extreme penalty, which in such cases is transportation for life."

The Trades' Association of Calcutta have addressed to his Excellency the Viceroy a letter conveying their congratulations and sympathy.

The Secretary of the British Indian Association has addressed a letter of congratulation to the Viceroy on his escape. The writer says :—"The committee consider it a matter of national congratulation that the ruffian missed his aim. While they rejoice at the merciful dispensation of Providence, they cannot in too strong terms express their horror and detestation of the crime, the object of which was so execrable. If the news of this horrible attempt has filled the Indian subjects of her Gracious Majesty the Queen-Empress with the deepest grief, the intelligence that it did not cause the slightest harm has produced in them the liveliest sense of sympathy and satisfaction."

THE ANJUMAN-I-PANJAB AND THE COMPULSORY VACCINATION BILL.

THE introduction into the Viceregal Legislative Council of a bill to prohibit inoculation, and to make vaccination compulsory, under penalties, has been briefly mentioned in our columns. The framer of the measure, the Hon. Sayad Ahmed, states that in preparing the draft it has been especially kept in view that the proposed law should find popularity among the people, and not interfere with their customs and ways of life. With a meritorious desire to accurately collect public opinion—which, by the way, home critics are apt to deny to the Indian Government—the bill has been submitted to such representative bodies as may be considered best qualified to ascertain or represent the feelings and opinions of the great sections of the population. The Anjuman-i-Panjab, during its fifteen years of honourable activity as a learned society, has sought to facilitate the acceptance of Government measures for the public good by making them popular. To their consideration, accordingly, was submitted the proposed Vaccination Bill, and the discussion thereon and decision arrived at are embodied by the learned president, Dr. Leitner, in an interesting document which we received by the last mail. Connected with the Vaccination Bill in the discussion by the Anjuman was Dr. Cuningham's Sanitary Primer, in so far as the origin of vaccination is described, apparently under the impression that the additional honour gained by the sacred cow therefrom would tend to make the process more acceptable to the Hindus. It appears, however, that this disclosure is, in the opinion of the pandits of the Anjuman, a grave error. The majority of natives, at least of the Punjab, are unaware of the derivation of lymph from the cow, regarding, as we are informed, the Government vaccination to be merely another form of inoculation, and submitting to it, so far as they do, in happy ignorance that it originates from an unholy secretion of the cow. The suppression of all explanations, therefore, is suggested; the people being left for the present, under the influence of the traditional etiquette which enjoins them "not to inquire into the nature of the medical compounds offered by Hakims and Baids." With regard to vaccination, the majority of the Anjuman decided against its being made compulsory, preferring to extend its use by persuasion and example. A suggestion is thrown out by Dr. Leitner that vaccine lymph should be obtained from a young buffalo, which is alleged to be as efficacious as that from the cow. "If this be the case all the religious grounds of opposition to the Government mode of inoculation would be at once removed, and could court the fullest inquiry." Dr. Leitner, however, considers that "better than this proposal is that of the Anjuman to trust to the proved efficacy of the Government system of inoculation to make its way to complete popular acceptance." Yet we cannot but note that Mr. Maya Das Tahsildar said that it was admitted by all the members that, "notwithstanding all the efforts used by the municipalities and other authorities, the majority of the people of the lower classes still adhere to their fanatical and superstitious customs, and conceal their children and put all manner of obstacles in the way of free vaccination." If this is true in the Punjab, we can also remind our readers of the terrible mortality which, during the past year, has afflicted the Central Provinces, where the goddess Shitala seems to have established her reign unchecked. It is, however, certain—to quote the words of the president of the Anjuman—that measures for the public good can only be made popular by studying the people and interpreting their best feelings and real wants. The fact that the Lahore pandits distinctly state that direct vaccination would contravene the teaching of the Hindu authorities on "the cow question," while the use of buffalo lymph, or (apparently) human lymph, from infants directly vaccinated, will not shock the most pious prejudices, is one that should be carefully considered by the Legislative Council in their manipulation of the bill, which, if judiciously framed, would undoubtedly prevent an enormous loss of life.

THE LAW COMMISSION.

THE report of the Indian Law Commission, which held its meetings at Simla last year embodies the following conclusions :—

In conclusion, we have to recapitulate briefly the specific recommendations which we have made in this report :—

(a) that the process of codifying well-marked divisions of our substantive law should continue ;

(b) that the eventual combination of those divisions as parts of a single and general code should be borne in mind ;

(c) that the English law should be made the basis in a great measure of our future codes, but that its materials should be recast rather than adopted without modification ;

(d) that in recasting those materials due regard should be had to native habits and modes of thought ; that the form which those materials should assume should, as far as possible, resemble that of rules already accepted ; that, in other words, he propositions of our codes should be broad, simple, and readily intelligible ;

(e) that uniformity in legislation should be aimed at, but that special and local customs should be treated considerately ;

(f) that the existing law of persons should not at present be expanded by way of codification, save that the operation of the European British Minors Act, XIII. of 1874, should be extended ;

(g) that the laws relating respectively to negotiable instruments, to the subjects dealt with by the Transfer of Property Bill, to trusts, to alluvion, to easements, and master and servant, should be codified, and the bills already prepared on these subjects be passed into law, subject to the amendments above suggested ;

(h) that the law of wrongs should then be codified ;

(i) that, concurrently with or after the framing of a law of wrongs, the laws relating to insurance, carriers, and lien should be codified ;

(j) that the Legislature should then deal with the law of property in its whole extent ;

(k) that preparation be made for a systematic chapter on interpretation ;

(l) that the project of framing a digest of the decisions of Indian courts should be abandoned.

FRENCH INDIA.

PONDICHERRY was described by Sir Charles Trevelyan, when he paid a visit to that town in 1860, as the most European looking town in all India. He wrote of it as, if we remember rightly, a slice of Paris. The opening of the Pondicherry Railway will give the town an importance which it has not possessed hitherto. Monsieur Laugier, the Governor, in his address at the opening of the first séance of the Conseil Général lately, remarked that the connection of Pondicherry with the railway system in India would open out a new era of prosperity. The town is divided into two distinct portions, the one called la ville Blanche, and the other la ville Indienne, which are separated by a canal. The principal public edifices are the Hotel du Gouvernement, two churches, one built by the Government and the other by the Society of Foreign Missions, besides two large pagodas, the monuments of ancient Indian architecture, a splendid market with a large clock, a well furnished hospital, the Hotel de Ville, the Cour d'Appel, and a college established by a liberal-minded native of Pondicherry. The town has not the disadvantage of a rough and boisterous surf, and a French writer is perfectly justified in stating that the roadstead of Pondicherry is the best on the Coromandel coast, "la meilleure de toute la côte." The pier of Pondicherry is 192 metres in length ; it is proposed to extend it, and it is connected with the railway station by tramway. Pondicherry covers a space of 29,122 hectares, a French measure of area equivalent to 24,711 English acres. The territory under the immediate control of Monsieur Laugier is well watered. There is the little river Gingi, the source of the Araincoupam River, on whose banks Pondicherrians enjoy their holidays. It is also traversed by the Coodoovear and other little streams. Pondicherry has its colonial college, which, since 1846, has been managed by the priests of the Society of Foreign Missions. There are two seminaries supported by the mission, in which about 500 natives are educated. There are about a dozen schools for the poor classes, most of which are supported by the State.

Karikal is one of the most fertile portions of the Tanjore District, and is watered by six little streams which branch from the Cavery. Yanaon is situated on the banks of the Godavery, which falls into the sea about twelve miles from that town. In Masulipatam the French have a small bit of territory which is not larger than the monument Esplanade in Madras. It has been found useful as a place of refuge for impecunious people in Masulipatam who are worried by their creditors. This place is known as Francepett, and the British Government pays the French Government Rs. 3,500 annually on the condition that the latter will not allow the sale and manufacture of spirituous liquors in this loge. Mahé is about 312 miles from Pondicherry, and its whole extent is 5,900 hectares. It is situated on the left bank and near the mouth of the river that bears its name, which is navigable for boats of sixty and seventy tons burden. Chandernagore is situated twenty-five miles from Calcutta, and is a nice little town. The principal industries of French India are the filature weaving and dyeing of cotton stuffs, the manufacture of oils, and tanning skins and hides. To Monsieur Desbassyne de Richesmont Pondicherry owes the establishment, in 1826, of the first weaving mills conducted on the approved European system. There are now three mills of the kind in Pondicherry, the most important of which belongs to Messrs. Cornet and Co., having 15,840 spindles, and employing 2,000 workmen. In Karikal and Chandernagore the manufacture of cloth by the native weavers is encouraged by the Government.—Madras Times.

THE NAGA HILLS.

OUR correspondent writes from Sachema, Dec. 3 :—"The Nagas are still in the forts they have built above Konoma, in an almost inaccessible spot, which could not be approached without great loss of life from any side. The guns also cannot be brought to play on them, as there is no position near from which they could act. On one side above them are high precipices of a wall-like nature of the mountain Luppho, which is inaccessible here except to a goat. On either side of the ridge they are on, which has sides also of a precipitous nature, and difficult for even a man to get up, are thick woods, where the garrison could retreat to, and find safe refuge, should the fort prove too hot to hold. The only approach is along up the crest of the Konoma spurs, on which their forts are also placed. Here a trench has been cleared, and the top of the ridge of the spurs is bare for the breadth of a few yards on either side. The guns, if brought up here also, would be so much below the Naga position—which stands on two abrupt bluffs on terraces, one above another, rising out of the top of the ridge each about 100 feet high, the front being like a wall—that they could not effect much. It will be seen from this how difficult it will be to act against the Nagas, where they are now placed, and how well the wily Angami has chosen his position. They are not much more than 2,000 yards from Konoma, and day after day the hateful sight of their fort stares us in the face, and the smoke of their cooking fires goes bravely up to heaven. How long, how long ! At present more troops are required to act against them effectually. The 44th Goorkhss have 200 men at Konoma, 248 (all ranks) at Sachema, twenty men at Kohima, fifty men at Piphema, and about another hundred men (recruits and band) at Golaghat. The 43rd Native Infantry have about fifty men here (Sachema), and 100 at Kohima. A striking force of 300 men could be got from these, but this is not sufficient to invest some 600 Nagas with, who have 200 guns and twenty Sniders, and are placed in a strong entrenchment. It is to be hoped that more troops are coming up as Col. Johnstone has left for Munipur with his Munipuries. I hear that he is to return with 500 Kookies armed with flint lock guns ; but, at the best, the Kookie is only good at surprising a weak village which has no guns, and cutting up, the wretches inside. At Konoma the other day 300 Kookies were sent out to co-operate. All the co-operation they did was to sit on the top of a high hill, many thousand yards away, and look on while the gallant soldiers of the 44th were being shot down in the desperate assault. The 44th have lost up to date one British officer, one native officer, and twenty-six men killed and dead of wounds, and one British officer, one native officer, and twenty-one men wounded, most severely ; one-fourth of the part of the regiment that took part in the assault were killed or wounded."—Pioneer.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

AKBAR.*

THE name of Akbar is to some degree familiar to people in this country; yet the notions of not a few in regard thereto are at best but dim and hazy. The effort, therefore, of Dr. Van Limburg-Brouwer to impart by means of a "romance" a knowledge as to the thoughts and habits of that Emperor—perhaps the wisest and best who ever sat on the throne of the great Mughals—merits commendation, even were the result of his labours a dry and wearisome tale, possessing little interest beyond the sphere of the savant or scholar. Far otherwise is the case with respect to the work which M. M. has presented to the public in the shape of a translation from the Dutch, in which the book originally appeared. The plot is good, and the heroine would do no discredit to the pages of a modern English novel—indeed, a more high-minded, generous-hearted maiden it would be difficult to portray. Nor is the interest which she creates in the mind of the reader in any way lessened by the poetic and striking changes so familiar in the East, and naturally turned to account by a daughter of Eve, unacquainted with the simple habits of thought which prevail in the Western hemisphere. One instance will suffice. Her lover, by name Siddha, is about to leave her on an errand to Agra, at that time the Mughal capital. Naturally anxious as to what would befall her beloved in that gay imperial city, in the innocence of her heart she gathers a lotus, and, "picking up a long leaf that lay on the ground, and, weaving it into a kind of boat, she placed the lotus on it and let it float on the surface of the water, which was gently stirred by the falling fountain. 'The lotus is my Siddha,' said she, half to herself, 'let us see if he will remain faithful to me.'" Alas, however, "it turned over and floated bottom upwards, while the lotus disappeared." The damsel foreboded ill from this omen. Her fancies were not groundless; the pleasures and indulgence of the great city, teeming with luxuries which, to this day, are inseparably linked with our conceptions of the Mughal dynasty, proved fatal to a youth reared in the comparative seclusion of the Vale of Kashmir, and the lotus was, sad to narrate, overturned. How the youthful cavalier was induced to forsake his first love will be found in the pages of "Akbar," a work in every way worthy of the illustrious potentate whose name it bears. The more serious side of the history of the court and character of Akbar is also well described. The editor, in his valuable introduction, prepares even a tyro to enter into the faithful description of the politics and intrigues in which the unsuspicious hero is involved. The remarkable breadth of the religious opinions of the Emperor is singularly well illustrated. His Mahomedan nobles display their bigoted hatred of infidels, and even conspire against their monarch because of his many-sided tolerance. The Jesuit fathers faintly endeavour to secure as a convert the Prince, who is really seeking to found an eclectic religion of his own. The Hindu traditions of the great Emperor as a tolerant man may be illustrated by a curious legendary tale, for which we are indebted to Rikhi Kesh, a learned pandit of Lahore. On one of the copper-plates kept in the Allahabad fort some slokas are engraved. The purport of them is as follows:—"Once a most celebrated Brahmachari, called Mukanda, unknowingly consumed a cow's hair with milk. Afterwards the fact came to his knowledge. He regretted it much, and asked his guru what result was destined for him in future. The guru replied that he would be born in the family of a Yavana. Then the Brahmachari said to himself: 'If such be my destiny I ought to be a great man at least of the tribe.' Then he drowned himself in a lake called Kamkupa, which was situated near the junction of the Ganges, Jumna, and the Saraswati. Accordingly, this man in his new life became Akbar, the great Mughal Emperor." Should, as may be hoped, the result of the joint labours of the editor and the accomplished translator, M. M., be to create an interest, by a means as novel as charming, in the history of the mighty empire which forms one of the brightest jewels in the diadem of this country, in any way conduce to a more wide-spread familiarity with some of the incidents of a reign the most important in the annals of the East, they will not have in vain published the romance of "Akbar."

NEW POETRY.*

AS one of the society papers has chosen to reveal the open secret that Violet Fane is Mrs. Singleton, it would be an affectation any longer to treat her as sheltered by her pseudonym, and, perhaps, she may herself think that the time has almost come when she may assume in person the credit of those charming writings which are always welcomed by the society of which she is an ornament. While we certainly always enjoy her prose writings, among which we rank most highly the "Edwin and Angelina Papers," we cannot resist the verve of her verse, especially in the case of the slighter poems, for here there is less need of the polish and discipline that are desirable in some of her more pretentious performances. Sometimes her verse is very sweet indeed, and bits of it haunt the memory for days, which is a very good sign that Mrs. Singleton has music in her soul. We fear that her principal fault is that she is too easily satisfied with her own work, whereas it is only the productions of giants that we can admire as they come off the anvil. Among the pieces there is not one, however, that does not deserve perusal, and that will not repay it; and there are plenty of touches, both of pathos and of fancy, which will find their way to every heart.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

THE CABUL PAPERS.

THE remarks of Mr. Bourke and messages from Cabul give weight to the circumstance of the discovery of a teapot which had been presented to Sirdar Nek Mahomed so late as "1879," and which bore an inscription to the effect that it had been given "in return for services rendered." The fact that, in 1879, a chief of commanding influence in the councils of the Ameer should have received a reward for services rendered is chiefly of moment as giving point and weight to the statement that papers had been found of a character to create a painful sensation. The teapot bears date 1879, and consequently cannot but have reference to the state of affairs subsequent to the death of Ameer Shere Ali. The papers must be of a peculiar character, for our readers will remember Ameer Yakoob Khan made a parade of his friendship for Sir Louis Cavagnari by presenting him with certain letters he had received from the Russian generals, and actually allowing the Envoy to suggest the answer thereto. If this circumstance be coupled with the Ameer's request to the Envoy to have no communications with the sirdars except through him, the Ameer, our readers will begin to see somewhat into a web of the most consummate treachery ever woven. For, by presenting the letters to the Envoy, the Ameer accomplished a double end; he first put the Envoy off his guard as far as he himself was concerned, and he at the same time deceived him into the belief that the Russian agency had been rebuffed and extinguished. But he was thus all the more free, from both himself and the Russians being unsuspected, to carry on a secret correspondence. As he could not do this himself, he denied the sirdars free access to the Envoy, and thus secured to Nek Mahomed the opportunity of carrying on unchecked the intrigue which ended so fatally on September 3. Now, this brings us to some idea of the character of the correspondence. It might have been the preliminaries to a secret treaty, offensive and defensive, or a treaty guaranteeing certain points to, the Ameer; it might have been an offer to supply arms and leaders for an Afghan rising, or it might have been suggestions for dealing with the envoy in such a way as to rekindle the unreasoning horror of all Afghan questions felt by many influential Englishmen. It might have been any one or all of these; but whatever it was, Yakoob Khan must have known of it, or he would never have ventured his own liberty to protest against an English advance on Cabul, or have gone to such an amazing length as to send his Ministers to counsel delay, and then risk himself in the endeavour to secure that delay. Delay to those engaged in such a correspondence meant succour in the spring, and hence their belief that the army could not advance from Kuram. But the outbreak was premature, as usual in such cases, and, this being so, everything had to be risked to regain the advantage the soldiery had sacrificed, by doing in September what was not intended to be done until after the Ramzan was over. We thus see that Russia withdrew her ambassador but left an agency behind at Cabul, known to the Ameer. The fact of Nek Mahomed having received a teapot shows that when, on Oct. 5, he visited the Ameer's tent at Zahidabad, on the eve of the battle of Charasiab, he went to receive instructions, for Sirdar Yahiya Khan, in whose house the teapot and other property was deposited, was with the Ameer. This tea-pot, therefore, brings home their guilt constructively, but, as we think, conclusively, not only to the Ameer, but to his Cabinet and to his father-in-law, for, when Nek Mahomed entered that tent on the night of Oct. 5, he came to the Ameer not only as chief of the Afghan army, but as the known head of the Russian party, or as the known agent of the Ameer in his intrigues with Tashkend. At all events, it is not difficult to form an opinion as to the value, bearing, and matter of the correspondence; and, therefore, to prevent erroneous opinions from taking too strong a hold on the public mind, we would counsel the speedy publication of the captured papers.—Indian Daily News.

FACTORY LEGISLATION IN INDIA.

THE failure of the local millowners who disapprove of factory legislation to realise the responsibilities devolving on them as members of the human family, and of a civilised portion of it, is perhaps less remarkable than their inability to form a correct appreciation of their own interests. Their policy appears to be to take as much out of both machinery and workmen as they can, without thought for the consequences which must ensue. Both must rapidly run down. No one who wishes to see the industry prosper can view its present condition with unconcern. The way the millowners look at the matter is this. They calculate that iron lasts for a certain number of years, and that in those years they will receive a certain profit in dividends or as commission on the quantity of goods which can be produced, or in whatever form the returns may come; and as to what may transpire at the end of those years —Khoda janeh! Machinery may cost something to replace, but of workmen at any rate a full supply can always be obtained on easy terms, for is there not a large population to draw upon? It seems almost unnecessary to point out the fallacy of this view. Even with regard to the workmen, it would be more to the advantage of the millowners to train up a healthy class of skilled labourers than to depend to so large an extent as they will have to do, if the existing system is continued, on raw recruits. It is not, however, to be supposed that any enlightened Government could permit the inroads upon the population which this system entails. If the soundness of the principle of factory legislation is recognised in England and all other civilised countries; if they have found it necessary to introduce regulations for the protection of children and women, is there any reason to suppose that in India no such regulations are required? It is strange that human nature should be so different in this country from what it is in other places. Are Indian employers of labour more self-denying than are those of other nations? When gains are to be made over and above the natural returns of capital and labour, by breaking in upon the health of the population, will they resist the temptation? As to the effect of factory work on the health of those engaged in it, we cannot do better than quote the opinion of Dr. Bridges and Mr. Holmes, the commissioners appointed to report on the subject to the Local Government Board in England:—"On the whole," the commissioners say, "the general results of our statistical investigations would seem to be:—That there is a high rate of general mortality in the factory districts; that there is a high rate of infantile mortality; that there is a considerably higher rate of mortality amongst women of the reproductive age in factory districts than in other manufacturing centres where women are not employed; that a large proportion of this mortality consists in phthisis and other diseases of the respiratory organs." The results can hardly be expected to be less serious in this country, where the mill hands are physically weaker than in England, and where the atmosphere inside the mills is more impure owing to the cotton which is used being inferior to the material employed by the English mills.—Bombay Gazette.

TEA EXPORT.—Messrs. Carritt and Co.'s tea circular gives the quantity of tea exported from Calcutta in November last as 5,135,293lb., as compared with 6,529,874lb. exported in November, 1878. The total quantity exported from May 1 to Nov. 30 was 24,528,129lb., as compared with 20,950,406lb. exported in the corresponding period of last year.—Englishman.

SHELL LAC.—In the present position of the shell lac market, the following figures of imports, deliveries, and stocks in London on Oct. 31 last, in comparison with 1877 and 1878, at the same date, may be of interest:—

Imported	38,120	33,470	19,150
Delivered	27,680	29,380	25,910
Stock	37,370	43,760	36,200

It is on the import item that the largest difference is marked for this year. The deliveries for the month of October last were 3,103 chests in London.—Indian Daily News.

ANTIQUITIES OF CENTRAL ASIA.—Mr. H. Rivett Carnac, C.S.I., has lately contributed to the Bengal Asiatic Society an interesting account of "Prehistoric Remains in Central India," derived from personal experience. The remains chiefly consist of barrows or grave mounds in several districts of the Nagpore province. There are circles, more or less complete, of large boulders surrounding the graves, which are exactly like the tumuli met with in Europe; as in Europe there is no trace of the origin of these remains. They belong to a period of which we know next to nothing. One of the largest of the stones described is 10ft. 3in. in length. As a rule, they appear to have had inscriptions or ornamental carving upon their surface, but these are of course not distinctly traceable. In the centre of these circles, doubtless the grave, are metal ornaments of various kinds, bangles for the wrist, made of copper, but with some signs of an admixture of metal, neither tin nor zinc, but probably silver or gold. Hatchets and other implements of the kind have also been found, cast in iron, but in miniature; in reference to which peculiarity Mr. Rivett Carnac reminds us that Herodotus, or some other old writer, has mentioned an ancient practice of burying symbols of this kind with the dead. All these remains cannot of course be accounted for, but it is a curious matter for speculation that they should exist at the present day in Central India with every characteristic which is presented by similar remains met with in many parts of England.—Bombay Gazette.

CALCUTTA RATES.—The budget committee of the municipality of Calcutta have recommended that for next year the house rate should be fixed at 8 instead of 10 per cent.; the water rate at 3¼, instead of 3¾ per cent.; the police rate at 2½, instead of 2¼ per cent.; and the lighting rate at 2 per cent.—Ibid.

PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.—We hear that the Dowager Maharanee and the young Maharaja of Burdwan have given a donation of Rs.500 to the funds of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The donation is as a kind of memento of the late Maharaja, who was a humane man; and such a gift is quite in accordance with the character of the deceased nobleman.—Indian Daily News.

FEVER IN THE NORTH WEST PROVINCES.—The return of mortality in the North West Provinces and Oudh during the month of October shows that 429,115 deaths were recorded; the return for the same month of 1878 being in round numbers 139,000—in other words, the death rate rose from 3·25 to 10·45 per mille. The extraordinary mortality, says the sanitary commissioner, was due entirely to the epidemic prevalence of remittent fever of a very severe type. The deaths reported to be from fever exceeded 401,000, against 112,687 for October 1878. In the Punjab, in October last, there were 91,727 deaths, of which no less than 78,873 were due to fevers.—Pioneer.

MR. LAL MOHUN GHOSE.—The committee of the Indian Association has accorded its best thanks to Mr. Lal Mohun Ghose for the ability, energy, and judgment with which he laid before the British public the views of the Indian people in relation to the various questions of Indian administration.—Times of Indía.

FEVER IN LUCKNOW.—Typhoid fever is very prevalent here. On Dec. 13 Captain Pole, 13th Hussars, died, to the great regret of his regiment.—Lucknow Times.

DEATH OF CAPT. FORBES.—The death is annouuced of Capt. C. J. S. Forbes, deputy commissioner of the Tharawaddy district. He joined the commission in 1866 and acquired a wide knowledge of Burmese manners and customs, which he gave to the public a year ago in the shape of a book, published by Mr. Murray, entitled "British Burma and Its People." Capt. Forbes was married to a Burmese lady who had visited Europe with him. She survives him and is requested by the will of her late husband to live in England with her six children. Capt. Forbes's death was caused by heart disease.

DR. JOHN ANDERSON, F.R.S., late honorary secretary of the Calcutta Zoological Gardens, is leaving India, and contemplates a journey to Africa. In voting a resolution of thanks to him the committee of the gardens express a hope that his travels will result in benefit to himself, and that, although absent from India, he will still be able to advance the welfare of the gardens by establishing new agencies and paving the way for future interesting and profitable exchanges.—Times of India.

STREET TRAMWAYS.—On Dec. 13 the Bengal Legislative Council gave leave to the Hon. Kristo Das Pal to introduce a bill to authorise the making and to regulate the working of street tramways in Calcutta. The Hon. Kristo Das Pal, in moving for leave to introduce the bill, alluded to the first experiment to introduce tramways into Calcutta, the failure of which was attributed to the action of Government. The first venture was undertaken by the municipal authorities at the suggestion of Government, but in the present case the work would be undertaken by a private company, and the municipal corporation would have no direct money responsibility in the matter. The work would be undertaken by Messrs. Parish and Co., a firm which had already achieved much success in the same line in the United Kingdom. The bill, the hon. member stated, followed the lines of the Bombay Tramway Act, and the experience gained in Bombay showed that, given the same conditions, the project ought to succeed in Calcutta. The rules were suspended, and a motion having been passed that the bill be read in Council, the measure was referred to a select committee, with instructions to report in four weeks.—Ibid.

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE FAMILY PENSION FUND.—The Government of India has been in correspondence with the directors of the Bengal Uncovenanted Service Family Pension Fund about the inconvenience which arises to the public service from the absence of any provision in the rules of the fund for the surrender to a withdrawing subscriber of the actual value of his interest in the fund. It is understood that the directors are considering the subject, and that possibly the subscribers may eventually be invited to amend the rules of the fund in this respect with or without retrospective effect. There seems, however, to be an impression abroad that, if the amendment in question were made, a retiring subscriber would receive back the whole of his subscriptions with interest. This impression, if it exists, is based upon a misunderstanding of the principles of a family insurance fund and upon forgetfulness of the fact that, in return for the annual subscriptions of a subscriber, his family has all along been protected. Their protection ceases only when his subscriptions cease. A subscriber has no more claim to a refund of his subscriptions, because happily he has not died, than a man who insures his house against fire would have a claim to a refund of his premia if his house is not burnt. The value of the stake of a subscriber in the mutual family pension fund at any particular moment bears no relation to the amount of his past subscriptions, but is only the excess, if any, in the value of the liabilities of the fund on his account over the value of his future subscriptions under the rules of the fund. Practically this excess is never likely to be large. Its exact amount would depend in each case chiefly upon the relative values at the moment of the several lives of the subscriber and his beneficiaries. It is considered to be important, in order to prevent possible disappointment, that these facts should be understood. A and B both subscribe for twenty years for the same pensions for their family. A's wife dies, while, by the death of her husband, Mrs. B becomes a pensioner of the fund. Clearly A has, nevertheless, benefited as much as B and cannot in reason or truth say he has had no return for his money. Even, therefore, if the subscribers to the uncovenanted service fund see their way to arrange for the payment to a retiring subscriber of the surrender value of his policy, it is very unlikely that such value would in any case be found to be large.—Ibid.

THE Caledonian ball at Calcutta was very successful. There were about three hundred persons present.—Ibid.

EXTRAORDINARY TELEGRAM.—The Statesman publishes the following extraordinary telegram from Peshawur, dated Dec. 12 :—"Last night Mr. Muntz, civil engineer, was shot at by Surgeon Moodie, who fortunately missed his aim. Moodie, who is supposed to have been drunk, has been arrested."—Times of India.

THE CAPTURE OF KONOMA.—The brigadier general commanding the Eastern Frontier Division has issued an order most heartily congratulating the troops under his command on the capture of Konoma on the 22nd ult:—"All the troops engaged did their duty to their utmost, and Brigadier General Watson offers them all his most sincere thanks for their exertions on that day. He feels convinced that no body of men could have behaved better or have carried out his orders more efficiently. But the brigadier general commanding especially wishes to place on record his high sense of the bravery and devotion displayed by Col. Nuttall, C.B., and the officers and men of the 44th N.I. The task allotted to them was to storm a series of almost impregnable positions, consisting of stone forts protected by entanglements and obstacles of all kinds, every approach of which was commanded by the heavy fire of the enemy. Lieuts. Ridgeway and Forbes both fell seriously wounded whilst gallantly leading the stormers. The subadar major Nurbeer Sai was killed at the same time, and Col. Nuttall himself was wounded. Forty-three men of the regiment fell dead or wounded. The regiment simply covered itself with glory, and have added one more to their already long list of gallant feats of arms. The brigadier general on this occasion can but give them his thanks, but he need hardly say that he will not fail to represent their valour in the strongest terms to his Excellency the Commander in Chief and to the Government of India. The detachment of R.A. and the party of the 44th N.I. attached to the guns rendered the greatest assistance during the assault, serving them (their guns) with the utmost coolness under a heavy fire from the enemy. Major Evans and the detachment of Assam Light Infantry and Frontier Police, under the command of Capt. Williamson, inspector general of police, executed with precision the duty assigned them of cutting off the retreat of the enemy, and capturing a samgah in the rear of the position. The medical staff, headed by Deputy Surg. Gen. A. C. C. De Renzy, performed their most trying duty under a heavy fire in the most cool and courageous manner. The brigadier general only regrets that the brilliant success of the day was so heavily purchased. In Major Cock, deputy assistant adjutant general, the force has lost a most gallant officer. He fell mortally wounded when charging in the final assault on one of the enemy's strongest positions."

TOBACCO IN NORTH WEST PROVINCES.—The progress of tobacco cultivation in the North West last year was very encouraging, and we may soon find the enterprise conducted on an extensive scale. Five Europeans, or Americans, were engaged on the operations connected with experiments at Ghazipur and Pusa, the area cultivated being 239 acres, and the estimated outturn of cured leaf 165,000lb. During the latter portion of the year natives were instructed in the various and complicated details for manufacturing, and at the present time every class of manufactured tobacco is being turned out. It is said that there is no kind of tobacco, smoking mixture or cake, which cannot be manufactured of a quality equal to that of the same class of American, while for this country the Indian brands are likely to prove superior to the American, since it is well known that America does not ship her best qualities to the Indian market.—Times of India.

CALCUTTA FREIGHT MARKET.—At date of mail the disengaged tonnage in port was 9,062 tons, and the quotations for London, vid Canal, were—Rice, £3 15s. to £3 17s. 6d.; jute, £4 2s. 6d.; hides, £4 10s.; indigo, £4 15s.; vid Cape, saltpetre, £2 12s. 6d.; wheat, £3; jute, £3 15s. to £4; light, £3 10s.; Liverpool, vid Canal, unchanged; vid Cape, wheat, £2 15s.; linseed, £3; jute, £3 12s. 6d.; castor oil, £4 5s.—Englishman.

THE MUNIPUR AUXILIARIES.—Captain Williamson, having ascertained that two more villages—Merrima and Phuchama—not far from Kohima, had been implicated in the outbreak, had them burned and thoroughly destroyed by the Munipuris. In attacking the village of Merrima the Munipuris were commanded by the Tangal Major, the commander in chief of the Munipur army, who took with him to receive his "baptism of fire" the young Doobraj, heir-apparent to the Munipur guddee.—Pioneer.

THE TOUNGHOO COMMISSARIAT SCANDAL.—The Rangoon correspondent of a Calcutta paper gives the following particulars regarding the scandal into which Col. Weldon has gone to Rangoon to inquire:—Three days of the Recorder's court has been given up to hearing evidence of two brothers of the insolvent Cohen and a clerk of his. The disclosures implicate almost everyone in the Tounghoo Commissariat office with the receipt of bribes. One of the brothers explained a system at once profitable to contractor and the department, but somewhat the reverse to the public who have to pay. Ten thousand pounds of rice, for instance, are indented for, but the contractor is told 9,000lb. will be a sufficient quantity to supply. The bill is made out for 10,000lb. and paid. The 1,000lb. short supplied represents in itself a large profit to the contractor even after he has paid all the harpies of the department. This commissariat scandal is the worst thing we have heard of in Burma for years, involving, as it does, if true, disgrace and ruin to officers holding her Majesty's commission as well as a host of subordinates; if false, a system of keeping false accounts over a long series of years on the part of the contractor, supported by the perjury in the witness-box of three individuals. Too much has come to light now to admit of the matter being hushed up, and the guilty parties—either the contractor or the commissariat officials—will no doubt be tried criminally. Col. Weldon, the Madras magistrate, who has been sent here by the Government of Madras, was in court the whole time the evidence was given, and has been making minute investigations of the books of the insolvent firm.—Bombay Gazette.

SOME misunderstanding having arisen regarding the silver coins called in under the late notification of the Government of India, it is officially notified that all silver coin bearing the device of the head of his late Majesty King William IV. or of her present Majesty the Queen-Empress Victoria, are equally current and legal tender. The silver coins called in are said to be those issued before the Act of 1835, and none of them bear either the device of the head of the sovereign or any words or figures in English characters.

LADAKH NEWS.—News comes from Ladakh that a few pilgrims and some trading caravans are again beginning to arrive from Yarkund. Ten families have arrived in the Tanksi district of Ladakh from Gartok in Chinese Tibet, and are taking up land in order to settle under Kashmir rule, while several more families have come into Ruchee for the same purpose. The reason for this emigration is the severe taxation and other forms of oppression now prevalent in Gartok. A Ladakhi official who has just returned from Gartok states that discontent is general in that province, and that it is chiefly directed against the native local authorities on account of their extortions, which are believed not to be authorised by the Government at Lassa. Reports from Yarkund, which are said, however, to require confirmation, are to the effect that the Governor of Kashgar had gone to Kizil Yar with a Chinese force for the purpose of attacking and retaking Sarikol. From Kizil Yar he sent forward a column of 700 men under Tokhta Niaz of Kashgar and Ahmed Beg, the Hakim of Khotan. This column proceeded towards Sarikol by way of a defile called King Yul, above the village of Chabil Gumbaz, but were surprised by a party of Kirgis and Andijaris, who were posted in an advantageous position in the defile, and were severely beaten, only 200 out of the 700 returning to Chabil Gumbaz. The two leaders above named both fell into the hands of the Kirgis and were hung. Hakim Khan Turah and the former Dadkhwah of Yarkund are said to be at Sarikol, and a letter received at Yarkund from the latter stated that he had been seized by the former while on the way to Andijan from Kashgar and forcibly carried to Sarikol.—Bombay Gazette.

IT is announced that, owing to the death of Mr. James Carlyle, the last surviving partner of the firm of Messrs. Carlyle Brothers and Co., managers of the Ducal line of steamers for Colombo, Madras, and Calcutta, a general meeting of the shareholders has been held, when Messrs. M'Diarmid, Greenshields, and Co., the brokers for the line, were appointed managers.

THE LICENSE ACTS.—When the Trades and Professions Bill was introduced at Calcutta in December it was stated that, as the existing License Acts require the assessment lists to be made out in the beginning of January, it was desirable that the present bill should be passed before December 31, although no payments would be due until after April 1 next. As, however, the Legislative Council has not yet met in Calcutta, it has not been possible to refer the bill to a select committee for consideration of its provisions, and it is clear that it cannot be passed by the end of the year. The local Government will be able, pending the decision of the Legislature on the new bill, to suspend, by an executive order, the assessment and collections under the existing Acts, and they have been instructed accordingly. The Legislative Council will be asked as soon as possible to proceed with the consideration of the bill.—Bombay Gazette.

RAILWAY FIRES.—Six cases of fire occurred on the Madras Railway during the quarter ending 30th September, two of which occurred on the south west line and four on the north west line. In one case the damage was great, the whole of the woodwork and contents of a wagon being destroyed; the permanent way also suffered slightly. Three cases of fire occurred on the South Indian Railway, but in none was the damage important. The engines, when wood-burners, were always fitted with spark arresters, which, with their ashpans, are reported to have been in good working order at the time of the occurrence. The Governments in their order on the report of the consulting engineer, which gives the above facts, observe that "in the case of fire which occurred on the Madras Railway near Guntakal on the 10th August the burning of the wooden keys shows want of attention on the part of the line coolies in not covering them with ballast when it was found that the fire could not be extinguished. The delay on that occasion, of nearly five hours, appears excessive if proper measures had been promptly taken. The attention of the agent will be drawn to these points."—Madras Times.

THE PONDICHERRY RAILWAY.—The following notification is published in the Fort St. George Gazette Extraordinary:—"Under Section 12, Regulation VI. of 1844, the Governor in Council is pleased to declare the railway from Villupuram to Pondicherry to be a route by which goods may be allowed to pass into or out of French territory; and, under Sections 8 and 9 of the said regulation to constitute the railway stations of Villupuram, Vallavanur, and Kandamangalam, Customs Chaukis, and to appoint the stationmasters for the time being of those stations, to be officers authorised to receive money on account of customs duties, and to grant certificate of the payment thereof at their respective stations. The Governor in Council is further pleased, with the consent of his Excellency the Governor of the French Settlements in India, already obtained, to authorise the stationmasters for the time being of the Pondicherry and Villenour Railway stations to exercise the same powers at their respective stations on behalf of the Madras Government. This notification will take effect from Dec. 15, 1879, the date of the official opening of the said railway.

OPENING ANOTHER CANAL FOR TRAFFIC.—Sir Arthur Cotton's brilliant idea of converting the Madras Presidency into a second Holland, so far as canal communication is concerned, really bids fair to be realised to some extent. We know what has been done on the Buckingham Canal of late in the way of despatching troops to Rampa, and how a project has at last taken shape for connecting Madras with Calcutta by a coast canal. A further step in canal communication has now to be reported, and it must be considered an important step, inasmuch as the canal in question is an inland canal, which has been supposed to exist, so far, only in Sir Arthur Cotton's lively imagination. We understand that an intimation has been received by telegram that the Secretary of State has given authority to the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company for the expenditure necessary to work the canal between Kurnool and the railway at Cuddapah cantonment for one year. The length of the canal is 177 miles between these points. The branch line at Kristnapuram, running from the Madras Railway to the intended covered wharf, is already far advanced; and the excavation of the canal basin is in progress. It is expected that the canal will be opened, with regular daily boats, in July next. The plan will be to work the goods traffic in twenty steel cargo boats, of about eighteen tons burden, and the passengers' traffic in twelve saloon passenger boats, carrying two classes of passengers under cover. The boats will be drawn by one or two horses and a tow rope. The passage between Kurnool and Cuddapah has already been repeatedly made by barges carrying material belonging to the company. Care will have to be taken to keep the canals from silting up. On the Buckingham Canal several Madras merchants have had their cotton so delayed by stoppages in the canal that they prefer to go back to the old method of having the cotton brought down to Madras by coast steamer. It is to be hoped the Madras Government will insist on the canals being kept in thorough good working order.—Madras Mail.

NATIVE AID IN RAMPA.—The Inspector General of Ordnance and magazines, Madras, has received instructions to supply the Raja of Pittapore with 200 muzzle loading carbines and 2,000 rounds of ammunition, to enable him to make a stand, if necessary, against the Rampas.—Indian Daily News.

WINDING UP OF SURVEY OPERATIONS.—We understand that the operations of the great trigonometrical survey of India, in Southern India, are drawing to a close. Mr. Potter, a surveyor of the party, is now in Madras, in quest of a suitable station whereon to close operations. It was intended to make the Observatory the Greenwich of the survey of Southern India, but it seems that Mr. Pogson has raised objections to this scheme, so it is not improbable that St. Thomas' Mount will have to be made the closing station, as there is scarcely any other blank spot available in Madras. The G. T. Survey party will, we believe, proceed from Southern India to Afghanistan, where extensive surveys are being executed. We hear that engineers, surveyors, overseers, &c., are in great demand in our new North West acquisition, and East Indians of the profession, out of work in Madrae, would do well to push their fortunes in the direction alluded to.—Madras Athenæum.

CINCHONA PLANTATIONS.—The Commissioner of the Nilgirris has hit on a new way of procuring manure for the cinchona plantations under his charge. Having failed to collect enough cattle-manure for the Neddivuttum and other estates he has suggested to the Madras Government—so his report on the plantations for 1878-79 says—the advisability of purchasing a few herds of cattle to be grazed on the plantation, where their contributions towards the welfare of the plants will be collected and utilised as manure.—Bombay Gazette.

DISTRAINT ON IMPLEMENTS.—During the famine collectors of revenue were prohibited from distraining upon cattle and agricultural implements. This prohibition has now been abrogated. The Board of Revenue, however, is to instruct collectors, when distraining movable property for arrears of revenue, to leave ploughing cattle and implements of husbandry to the last, only seizing and selling them when the sale of other movables would not make up the whole sum in arrears.—Bombay Gazette.

A REWARD TO A DEAD MAN.—In recognition of the services rendered by Subadar Gregory of the Madras Sappers and Miners, the Supreme Government, we hear, have conferred on him a reward sanctioning the grant of the 2nd class Star of the Order of British India. The reward comes too late, as Subadar Gregory was one of the killed in the recent railway accident near Chinnamapett.—Madras Times.

THE MADRAS ARMY.—As to the necessity for maintaining the present large number of forces in the Madras command, a correspondent sends us the following memorandum showing the active service in which Madras troops have been engaged:—1862, Russelkondah Khond Rebellion; 1865, Parley Kimmedy Insurrection; 1868, trouble given by hill tribes, Kronghom; 1873, Kolatur Moplah Rising; 1876, Bustar Insurrection; 1879, Rampa Rebellion. This does not, however, include services rendered by the troops across the bay in Burma.—Madras Times.

PEONS AND BRIBES.—The judicial commissioner of Mysore has given notice that any suitor giving bribes to any court officer is liable to fine and imprisonment. It is earnestly requested that any person asked for money by any peon or official will give notice of the same to the registrar.—Times of India.

THE GOVERNOR'S VISIT TO PONDICHERRY.—The Duke of Buckingham has been on a visit to Pondicherry to open the railway. His Grace was received by M. Laugar, the governor, who expressed his appreciation of the honour conferred on Pondicherry, and his hope that the railway would be a mutual advantage to the French and English subjects. The Duke made an appropriate reply in French, and hoped that M. Laugar would honour Madras by a visit. A salute of nineteen guns was fired on his Grace's arrival.—Ibid.

THE Hon. P. Macfadyen, of Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co., has been re-elected chairman of the Madras Chamber of Commerce.

A BRAHMIN GOING TO ENGLAND.—The Madras Mail hears that Mr. C. Akilandaiya, B.A., late secretary and dewan to the Jaghirdar of Arnee, intends leaving shortly with his family for England, for the purpose of qualifying himself for the bar. This is the first instance of a pucka Brahmin gentleman going with his family to England.

MR. R. C. WALKER has been appointed sheriff of Madras for the ensuing year.

THE RAMPA REBELLION.—The Pioneer says that nothing new has happened recently in the Rampa country. The rebels have not been so active lately, but have not quite subsided into a peaceful life. Fever still largely prevails among the troops. To-day's telegram from the Rampa district is that 200 of Chendriah's gang have looted a village and killed several of the inhabitants.

IT is reported that Sir Edwin Johnson has been offered and refused the Madras command in chief in succession to Sir Neville Chamberlain, who retires in the spring.—Times.

COURT-MARTIAL.—At a general court-martial held at Secunderabad, Nov. 17, Private E. Wright, 2-16th Regiment, was found guilty of insubordination with violence and sentenced to five years' penal servitude, commuted by his Excellency the Commander in Chief to two years' imprisonment with hard labour.—Madras Times.

THE LATE MR. BINGER.—We regret to record the death, at the General Hospital, on Oct. 14, of Mr. Binger, assistant traffic manager of the Madras Railway. The deceased gentleman, who was only twenty-six years of age, came to Madras on the 9th inst. from Ghooty, suffering from fever, and as he became worse he was taken to the General Hospital.—Madras Times.

THE GOVERNOR AT CUDDALORE.—At the recent visit of his Grace the Duke of Buckingham to Cuddalore the municipality presented an address in which they said, inter alia:—"We trust we may be pardoned for bringing to your Grace's notice one or two little grievances in hopes of obtaining redress from your Grace's Government. The first is that we have to pay a tax on trades and professions to the municipality besides an Imperial License Tax to Government. We are aware that the former was imposed, with the sanction of your Grace's Government, for the purpose of meeting the cost of the town police, but we submit most respectfully that this double taxation bears hardly upon us, whatever may be its object, inasmuch as we never before had to pay any special tax on the above account, and the circumstances of the inhabitants of this municipality are generally much poorer than those of the people of other municipalities. The other matter which we wish to submit for your Grace's consideration is the management of the Hindu Devastanams. During the time of the Hindu rajas, whose place the British Government now supplies, the entire control over these institutions was retained in the hands of the ruling authority, and it is the absence of such control at present that has led to much abuse in the management of these institutions and the misappropriation of the valuable funds forming their endowments. Your Grace, fully recognising the importance of this matter, has already taken steps in the direction of legislating for their better administration, and we only hope that this work of reform may be speedily brought to a completion, and that we may have the pleasure of seeing, during your Grace's administration, our beloved religious institutions restored to their former efficient condition. In conclusion, we cannot but express to your Grace our sentiments of appreciation for the good your Grace has already done to our community by elevating some of its members to positions of high trust and responsibility in the public service."—Madras Times.

MAURITIUS.—The assistant conservator of forests in Bengal, Mr. J. S. Gamble, M.A., is expected in the beginning of the year in order to reorganise the forest system or rather to introdnce some system in reference to the protection of the woods against indiscriminate felling. It is acknowledged now that the destruction of the forests here has been the cause of the droughts experienced, and also in a great measure of the insalubrity of the island.—The shareholders of the Mauritius Commercial Bank assembled on Nov. 5 to hear the result of the operations of their establishment for the half-year to Oct. 5 last. The net profits, after deducting a considerable sum for doubtful claims, amounted to Rs.75,309; and the directors decided to give a dividend of 4 per cent. for the six months.—Indian Daily News.

UNIVERSITY PREMIUMS.—The Senate of the Bombay University, on the motion of Mr. Principal Wordsworth, has accepted the offer of the Cobden Club to award a silver medal annually to the candidate who passes the B.A. examination with the highest marks in political economy. At the same meeting, on the motion of Mr. Telang, seconded by Mr. Serjeant Atkinson, Major General Sir George Le Grand Jacob's offer to hand over to the university £1,000 stock in the British India Tea Company (Limited), as the endowment of an annual prize for an essay on some subject illustrating or relating to the advantages derived by India from the British rule, was accepted with the best thanks of the Senate. It was proposed by the Hon. Mr. Morarjee Gokuldas, and seconded by Mr. Sayani, that Major General Sir George Le Grand Jacob's offer to hand over to the university Rs.2,000 in Byculla Club Six per Cent. Debentures for the foundation of a scholarship of the value of Rs.10 a month, and tenable for one year, to be awarded to the candidate who passes the matriculation examination with the highest number of marks from among the candidates from Sawant Waree, Kutch, Kolapore, or Kattywar be also accepted with the best thanks of the Senate.—Indian Daily News.—The examiners for the B.A. degree at the University of Bombay have awarded the Cobden Club's Silver Medal for Political Economy to Rustain Kharshedji Cama, of St. Xavier's College.

THE PERCIVAL FOUNTAIN.—A correspondent at Bhaunagar sends a description of the opening of the "Percival Fountain," a testimonial raised there in commemoration of Mr. Percival, late Political Agent in that State, in which H.H. Tuktsingjee presided. The fountain is in the Indo-Saracenic style, with a cupola and two basins. A square block of marble in the lower basin bears a medallion profile of Mr. Percival. The smaller spouts are carved in the forms of birds, and the four principal spouts represent the heads of quadrupeds. The fountain is elaborately carved, and has been placed near the Rovayooree Gate in a small plot of ground tastefully laid out as a garden. All the Ministers, and Mr. Proctor Sims, the executive engineer of the State, were present, besides a large gathering of the Bhounagar notability.—Times of India.

MR. G. MACDONALD has been elected chairman, and Mr. J. M. Graham deputy-chairman, of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce.

AN EARTHQUAKE.—We learn from Idor, in the Mahi Kanta, that a slight shock of earthquake was felt there about 3 a.m. on the 12th Dec. It passed from east to west.—Times of India.

SIR R. MEADE, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., the resident at Hyderabad, held a durbar of the nobilities of the West Berar on Dec. 16 to invest Dustoor Byramjee Jamasjee, assistant commissioner, with the insignia of the Order of Companion of the Indian Empire.—Ibid.

SINDH VOLUNTEER RIFLES.—A general meeting of the residents of Sukkur and Rohri interested in the volunteer movement was held at Sukkur on the 4th Dec. Mr. T. G. Pudan having been called to the chair, the meeting proceeded to elect officers for the Sukkur company, with the following results:—To be captain, Mr. T. G. Pudan; to be 1st lieutenant, Mr. P. Duncan; to be 2nd lieutenant, Mr. Scott M'Kenzie. It is to be hoped that no time will be lost in appointing the required sergeant instructors in order that the present drill season may be made the most of.—Karachi Gazette.

EXTENSIVE CONFLAGRATION IN BOMBAY.—One of the most extensive fires which have taken place in Bombay for some time occurred on Dec. 16 near the Crawford Market in a shop where the manufacture of bedding is carried on. The block of buildings in which the fire broke out is situated immediately opposite the Crawford Market, and is bounded on one side by the Esplanade, on another by Shaik Abdool Rahimon-street, on a third by Pinjari Mollah, and on a fourth by the street leading to the Cloth Market. The fire broke out between seven and eight o'clock, and quickly extended to the adjoining buildings, which within a very short time were in flames. The alarm was given at the fire-engine stations, and three steam and two manual engines were soon on the spot, and, connections having been made with the hydrants, the engines commenced to play upon the burning buildings. At first the supply of water procured from the Vehar main was insufficient, and the Tulsi water was then brought into requisition, and an ample supply was then forthcoming. The fire was prevented from spreading, and, fortunately, the wind, which was light, blew from the north.—Times of India.

SICKNESS AT ADEN.—We regret to hear that much sickness prevails amongst the men of the 6th Foot at Aden. The regiment only arrived at Aden on Nov. 20, having previously been stationed at Peshawur and Delhi, where the men suffered from fever. Six men died on the voyage from Bombay, and we hear that six deaths have occurred since the regiment landed at Aden.—Times of India.

THE Secretary of State has confirmed the grant made by the Government of India of an honorarium of Rs.2,000 to Mr. F. W. Peterson, deputy assay master, Bombay Mint, for remedying errors in the weight of blank discs by the electrolytic process. Mr. Peterson's experiments have resulted in a considerable saving of expenditure to Government.—Press Commissioner.

THE DECCAN DACOITIES.—The number of thefts decreased by 51 per cent. in the Southern Division and by 23 per cent. in the Northern and Central Deccan, whilst in Gujerat they increased by 42 per cent. In Sindh this offence very frequently takes the form of cattle lifting, of which 1,847 cases occurred. Bobberies, both ordinary and in gangs, increased in Gujerat, but decreased to a large extent in the Southern and Central Divisions. The latter tract, however, was the scene of several daring raids by organised gangs of the predatory classes, such as Ramosis and the lower ranks of Kolis, necessitating the employment of several parties of native infantry and cavalry under European officers to aid the ordinary police force in pursuing these gangs and establishing confidence in the power and determination of Government to repress them. The only considerable gang still about is being completely hemmed in, and will, it is believed, be very soon overpowered. One of the first gangs was organised and for some time directed by a Brahmin named Wasudev Balvant Phadke, who had been in the service of Government, and shortly before he joined the gang was holding an appointment in the Military Finance Office at Puna. He relied at first on raising the general community of Ramosis and Kolis by beginning operations with some successful gang robberies, and thereby holding out the prospect of obtaining a large and valuable booty. He soon found, however, that the sole object of the men he had got together was to plunder, and that they left him as soon as they had made a little money in that way, whilst his own aim was the wild one of raising the country against the British Government. He struggled for some little time to keep his band together and increase its numbers, but at length, baffled and disappointed, he suddenly deserted the gang he had collected, and, going first to a shrine in the Bellary District of the Madras Presidency and from thence into the territory of his Highness the Nizam, he opened negotiations with the leaders of some Rohilla gangs with a view to obtaining their assistance in his enterprise. But, just at the time that the Rohillas were agreeing to join him, information of his whereabouts was obtained by the Puna police, and he was soon after captured in a temple in a village of the British district of Kaladgi in this Presidency. He was tried at the Puna Sessions on charges of conspiring against the Government, as well as of engaging in dacoities, and, being convicted by the unanimous verdict of the jury, was sentenced to transportation for life. The only Brahmin accomplices he had (three or four in number) were mere schoolboys, one of whom has been already punished, but the others are still at large. The most energetic of the other gangs were in a short time dispersed and their leaders captured. Amongst other notorious offences during the period under review was the setting fire to two of the largest and most valued historical public buildings in Puna, used of late as Government offices, and containing records of importance, both judicial and educational, which were all destroyed. The perpetrators of the offence were discovered and admitted their guilt.—Government Report, 1878-79.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, JANUARY 12, 1880.

A YEAR'S REPORTS ON THE CROPS AND HEALTH.

THE weekly reports which the Government of India publish as to the season and crops are somewhat late by the time they appear in our columns. That is inevitably due to the process of collection and tabulation. Their value is, however, none the less, and, although a telegram every now and then comes to startle the public with the temporary fear of a local famine or a partial failure, the regular series of reports from all parts of India form a consecutive history after they have served as instructive monitors. Looking back on the past twelve months, we are able to compare the end with the beginning, and find a gradual, but certain, disappearance of the grim phantoms of want which week by week hovered before our eyes. There were gloomy anticipations founded on want of delay of the needful rains. In Bengal, in the North West Provinces, already sorely tried, and in Bombay, there were, during the first few months of the year, serious fears expressed as to the damage done, or likely to be done, to the crops. The winter rains held off, and were especially late in the Upper Provinces, the reports from which, up to the beginning of March, were of an ominous character. In several districts of the Dekkhan and the Southern Mahratta country the crops were so menaced by a plague, not of drought or of excessive rain, but of rats, that a regular campaign had to be undertaken by the Government, promises of reward and admonitions being sedulously brought to bear on the people to induce the destruction of several millions of these pests. As the year advanced there was a manifest improvement in the reports throughout India. In the Western Presidency the calamitous commercial failures combined with other causes to cast a gloom over the prospects, and the closing of mills, as well as the failure of the capitalists, caused a certain amount of actual distress, which, however, was speedily relieved. The chief complaints of the latter months arose from damage done by excessive rain, and from Eastern Bengal there were reports of local hardship, which, however, was alleviated by local benevolence. The year did not, however, pass without being marked by one famine, although it cannot be said to form part of the history of British India. The people of Kashmir suffered so terrible an invasion of the enemy that seems always to lie in wait to attack Indian populations as to raise in many minds the question whether the ruler had not been guilty of such neglect as to call for the interference of the British Government. Without crediting the horrible tales circulated as to the destruction of the population, it is certain that a large proportion of the subjects of the Maharaja suffered the extremity of famine, but for some time past the pressure of want has been removed and we hear no more sad tidings from Kashmir. The report that, on the whole the prospects of the winter crops are good, while the spring crops also promise very well, is the pleasant summary from the entire Empire of India, and amply bears out the statements of the Financial Minister, as we may term him, as to the general prosperity and the increasing wealth of India. We as yet expect the results of the inquiries made by the Famine Commissioners into the causes and possible prevention of periodical scarcity. But there have not been wanting measures which tend to the lessening, so far as experience teaches, of the causes of drought. Everywhere attention has been paid to the all-important question of preserving or restoring the forests, which play so important a part in the attraction and preservation of rainfal and springs. Mr. Hume's thoughtful and suggestive pamphlet, which we noticed some weeks ago, contained valuable hints on this subject, as well as on the great need of provision against the increasing loss of agricultural cattle. The several local Governments have adopted schemes of afforestation which will in due time produce excellent results. The steady increase of the population, dependent on the direct agriculture as a means of livelihood, demands the utmost care that science and experience can apply to the devising of means to guard against neglect or waste of the productive powers of the land. A careful reader of the voluminous reports which contain the recorded proceedings of the various Governments will find good reason to scorn the reproach of indifference or neglect so often cast against the administrative powers in India. The measure recently carried through the Legislative Council for the relief of the Dekkhan raiyats is an instance of the resolute zeal which is ever at work to render the life struggle of the poorest agriculturists easier. It may be found advisable to extend, as suggested by Mr. Hume, the operation of such a measure beyond the limited area where it will now operate as an experiment. But year by year it becomes plainer to all who, with unbiassed minds, seek rerum cognoscere causas, without trying to find in them matter either for abuse or adulation of the rulers, that we cannot make the vast population of India other than agricultural, and that we cannot guard against the apparent, but fatal, irregularities of the seasons, any more than we can shut out the cyclone wave from its coasts or forbid the desolating march of cholera or fever. As regards the public health of the Empire, the year that has passed will stand marked as one of great sickness and mortality far above the average. The brief weekly summaries which the Gazette of India furnishes show with a mournful recurrence the word "prevalent" as applied to fever, cholera, and small-pox in various districts. The outbreak of cholera at the Hurdwar Fair was the commencement of the spreading wave of that plague which affected almost every part of India. Our returning troops from Afghanistan, and our newly arrived soldiers in Burma, alike suffered greatly. The loss among the former was, as will be remembered, far greater, during the peaceful journey home, than had been suffered during the campaign. It is not possible, however, to attribute blame to those responsible for the movements of the troops, inasmuch as cholera raged from Cabul to the border, and there seemed to be more chance of escape in the homeward movement. The Asiatic pestilence prevailed with unusual intensity throughout Northern India, while in Sindh for several weeks the death rate of Hyderabad averaged over one thousand. The exaggerated accounts of the waste of life among the returning pilgrims were sensational, but the prosaic, but too accurate, figures of the enumerated deaths would, if presented, show an appalling total, which would prove that, if the outbreak and ravages of this fell disease are preventible, there is an immense task yet to be accomplished in the way of preventive sanitation. The most recent reports have mentioned the prevalence of cholera in the cyclone-stricken tract of Chittagong. The cyclone wave which destroyed several hundreds at one blow has left behind it a still more destructive agency at work, though only over a limited area. In due succession to the cholera months came the autumnal period of fever. Throughout all parts of India the reports week by week told of unwonted sickness and mortality. In the North Western Provinces, Oudh, and in the Punjab, fever was rife in September and October, so much so that, for the week ending October 7, "half the inhabitants of Allahabad were reported as down with fever, though not of a fatal type." The reports from Rajputana, Bengal, and from most parts of the Bombay Presidency, bore testimony to the unusual and fatal prevalence of fever. The third principal scourge of India has in like manner shown the peculiar insalubrity of the expired year. The statistics of all parts show that the proposed measure of compulsory vaccination would be a material boon. The grim goddess, whose vain cultus we elsewhere mention, seems to have made an abiding home for herself in the Central Provinces, whence an excessive tale of victims has been required. The proposal of the Hon. Sayad Ahmed would save many lives if it could be carried into effect. In Calcutta the number of deaths by small-pox exceeded 2,000 in eighteen months. It is indeed of great importance that violence should not be done to the deep-seated religious prejudices of the Hindu population. If, however, it is an acknowledged duty of the Government to endeavour to save life; if, in view of horrible outbreaks of cholera, it can be proposed to limit or forbid the melas, which, crowded by pilgrims, are the hotbeds of disease, the demands of those who point to the terrible array of the victims of Shitala cannot be silenced by the protestations of pandits who reflect the antiquated prejudices of ignorance.

LIEUTENANT GENERAL WILLIAM FREDERICK MARRIOTT, C.S.I., of the Bombay Staff Corps, and President of the Egyptian Railway Administration, and formerly of the Bombay Engineers, died at Cairo on Dec. 17, in his 61st year. He obtained his first commission in 1836, and in 1838 and 1839 served with the Bombay column of the Army of the Indus in the campaign in Sindh and Afghanistan. He was slightly wounded at the storm and capture of Ghuzni, for which he received a medal.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL G. E. WATSON, late of the Bengal Engineers, who died at Eton-villa, The Park, Cheltenham, on the 28th ult., in his 52nd year, entered the service in 1846 and served with Havelock's force during the first advance on Lucknow, and as brigade major of Engineers at the relief of Lucknow by Lord Clyde. He was present at the siege and capture of Lucknow, for which he received the medal with two clasps and the brevet of major. He retired with the rank of lieutenant colonel in 1868.

THE HON. GERALD NORMANBY FITZGIBBON, whose death is announced as having occurred on Saturday, Jan. 3, was in the 57th year of his age. He was the youngest son of Henry Augustus, 13th Viscount Dillon, by his marriage with Henrietta, eldest daughter of the late Mr. Dominick Geoffrey Browne, and sister of the first Lord Oranmore. He was born in November, 1823, and was educated at Wadham College, Oxford, whence he was appointed to a clerkship in the office of the Board of Control. He subsequently became assistant secretary in the India-office, and he held a captain's commission in the Oxfordshire Militia, and was also an officer of the Oxfordshire Yeomanry Cavalry. He took the name of Fitzgibbon, by Royal license, in 1873, on account of his marriage with Lady Louisa Isabella Fitzgibbon, second daughter of the last Earl of Clare, whose Irish estates she inherited on the death of her aunt, Lady Isabella Fitzgibbon.

AN EVENTFUL VOYAGE.—The fine iron ship Cathcart, which has arrived at Liverpool, has had an eventful voyage, resulting in the loss of the captain and three of the crew. She left Rangoon under the command of Captain Crawford, bound for Queenstown for orders. On Aug. 15, when in the Bay of Bengal, the captain was missed from the cabin, and after a fruitless search had been made for him, it was concluded that he had either fallen or jumped overboard. The chief officer took command, and the vessel proceeded on her voyage to Queenstown. All went on well until the 1st ult., when the ship enconntered a heavy gale, which increased to a hurricane. Three of the crew, who were out on the jibboom taking in sail, were thrown into the water and drowned, and the cargo of rice having shifted, the vessel was for some hours on her beam ends. Several of the crew had narrow escapes of being washed away. Ultimately the vessel arrived at Queenstown, and afterwards at Liverpool. The names of the crew who perished were William Swan, a German named Radki, and an Irishman named Baker. Captain Crawford was a native of Arran.

A DESTITUTE ASIATIC.—At Middlesex Sessions on Wednesday, Mr. Fletcher released a prisoner named Mohammed Ishmael, a native of India, who had been convicted at these sessions of stealing some clothes from the Sailors' Home, and who, it was said, had been left destitute in London, and sent him away under the care of Mr. Salter, who has been for niueteen years missionary to the Asiatics in London. On Thursday, at the assembling of the court, Mr. Fletcher read to the jury the following letter from Mr. Salter:—"Asiatic Rest, East India Dock-road.—My Lord,—It will interest you to know that the prisoner Mohammed Ishmael, whom this morning you released, requests me to thank you heartily for your very kind consideration of his case. He is now on board the steamer Gwalior, with seventy of his countrymen. He has served eight years in our Indian Army and received four wounds—three from the sabre and one from a bullet—at the taking of Cawnpore from the insurgent troops of Nana Sahib during the Mutiny. He lost his ship through losing his way in London, but reached the docks on the day it sailed." Mr. Salter concluded by again expressing the prisoner's deep gratitude to Mr. Fletcher for the course which he had adopted.

EXTRADITION TO CEYLON.—At Bow-street, Alfred Brenner was re-examined, on Thursday, before Sir J. Ingham on the charge of having embezzled £1,500 from his employer in Ceylon. Mr. Poland conducted the prosecution, instructed by Mr. Abrams; Mr. Besley, instructed by Mr. Bristowe, defended. The prisoner, who was employed as manager of the receiving and forwarding stores of Mr. Elphinstone, in Ceylon, and was authorised to make and receive payments, entered upon the situation at the end of the year 1876, and absconded in November, 1878. His accounts were examined, and it was ascertained that he had received about £1,500 beyond the amount acknowledged in his accounts. Mr. Poland asked for the committal of the prisoner on this evidence, in order that he might be removed to Ceylon for trial there. Mr. Besley took several objections to the jurisdiction of the court, in order that, if the case came before another tribunal, the fact might be recognised, and asked that an opportunity might be given for the proper discussion of these points before the extradition of his client, and eventually it was agreed that the prisoner should be again remanded.

BOTANICAL EXPEDITION.—Dr. Balfour, professor of botany in the University of Glasgow, is expected to start shortly at the head of an expedition sent by the British Association and the Royal Society of London to investigate the flora and fauna of the Island of Socotra, east coast of Africa. Professor Balfour will return to this country about the end of April, in time to commence his classes in the university in May.

THE SOCIETY OF ARTS.—The programme for the meetings of the Society of Arts has been issued. The session reopens on Jan. 14 with a paper on "Modern Autographic Printing Processes," by Thomas Bolas, F.C.S. Among the other papers to be read at the ordinary meetings previous to Easter are:—Feb. 4, "Trade and Commerce with Siberia, viâ the Kara Sea," by Henry Seebohm, and Feb. 18, "The Euphrates Valley Railway," by W. P. Andrew. In the Indian Section, Professor Vambéry, the great Eastern traveller, has undertaken to read a paper on "Russia's Influence over the Inhabitants of Central Asia during the last Ten Years," and he has promised to come over from Buda-Pesth expressly for the purpose. The other papers to be read in this section for which dates are fixed are:—Jan. 30, "Herat," by Colonel G. B. Malleson, C.S.I.; April 2, "The Best Route for a Line of Railway to India," by Mr. B. Haughton, C.E.; May 7, "Agriculture in India," by Mr. Robertson, superintendent of the Government Farm, Madras.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

The ordinary general meeting of the shareholders of this company was held on Jan. 2, at the City Terminus Hotel, under the presidency of Mr. R. W. CRAWFORD.

The CHAIRMAN, in moving the adoption of the report, said that the shareholders had met, under peculiar circumstances, unparalleled perhaps in commercial enterprise. On the last day of the closing year the contract by which the relations between the company and the Government had been regulated for more than thirty years came to an end under the provisions of the Act passed last session, and the Secretary of State having, on the part of the Government of India, created the large annuity with which they were now familiar, the whole of the vast property created by the judicious expenditure of a capital of more than thirty millions, had passed into the hands of the Government of India. They now, on the first day of the new year, had entered into a new contract to regulate the relations between the Government and the company for another period of time. They had again entered into possession of the railway, not as owners, but under a contract. To work and maintain this contract he was confident would result to the advantage of all those who had the power and the will to place their money in what was called the deferred annuities. The result of this great transaction, he believed, was satisfactory to all parties. There were few persons connected with the company who did not consider that they had received a fair equivalent for their capital, and the Government, on the other head, thought that they had got a very good bargain. The board had done its best to get all they could, and the Government must have been satisfied as to the value of that which they were taking over. After giving a lengthy explanatory statement of the several items mentioned in the report, he said that the annuity granted some years ago to Sir Macdonald Stephenson had been submitted to an actuary, who had valued it at £34,600, and this amount it was proposed to pay out of the surplus funds of the company. There was, he thought, a great future before them. They had a railway 1,200 miles in length, besides the line which went to Central India, serving the chief part of that rich country. This year there was a prospect of abundant crops, and they heard from all parts of the country that the produce of the soil would this year be an ample recompense for the deficiency of the past two or three years. The profit which they would derive from that must, however, depend upon the extent of exportation. That the Government was satisfied with what the company had done in the past was shown by the fact that the Government had left the administration of the line with them. The chairman then alluded to the officials to whom the company was indebted, especially noting the services of Mr. Freshfield and Mr. Noad. There were other parties in England who deserved honourable mention. Sir James Melville, secretary of the old East India Company, was appointed to represent the company at the board. The services of this gentleman were lost much too soon both to the board and to the shareholders. He was succeeded by Mr. Juland Danvers, and for many years Mr. Danvers had been the representative of the Government at the boards of the East Indian and other companies; and it was only on the previous day that notice was received from the Secretary of State of the formal appointment of Mr. Danvers as Government director of the company under the new arrangement. Mr. A. M. Rendel had for twenty-three years been consulting engineer of the company, succeeding his lamented father in 1856. Turning to India, their first agent there was Sir Macdonald Stephenson, of whom he had said something, but probably not enough. He was succeeded by Mr. Palmer, who occupied the post of agent for sixteen years. Upon his leaving India Mr. Cecil Stephenson became agent, but he did not long retain the post. Mr. Stephenson was succeeded by Mr. Bradford Leslie, the present agent and chief engineer, in whose hands the affairs of the company were perfectly safe and secure. Their chief engineers had also been men who had done justice to them. The first, Mr. Turnbull, had the merit of being one of the first persons to apply to the peculiar exigencies of India methods of railway construction practised in England when he went out. He was succeeded by Mr. Power, who unfortunately died; and in turn he was succeeded by Mr. Sibley, to whom a tribute of acknowledgment was due for the eminent services the company had received at his hands. The traffic manager, Mr. Batchelor, had served them for twenty years, and never was a company better served. Mr. Roberts, their chief auditor and accountant, long and faithfully performed his duties, but fell a victim to the climate, and died on his way home. There were two other gentlemen, Mr. Campbell, the locomotive superintendent, and Mr. Pearce the carriage and wagon builder, both of whom, he (the chairman) was happy to say, were still with them, and, he might add, it was impossible to say too much of the valuable services the company had received at the hands of those gentlemen. They would meet once more, he said, to present an account of the operations of the closing half of the last year, but on the present occasion he thought it well to take a sort of farewell of the present company.

Mr. G. LYALL seconded the motion.

In the course of a discussion which followed, Mr. KING asked for information relative to the position in which the company stood with regard to the collieries.

The CHAIRMAN, in reply, said that the question of the collieries was a matter for the deferred annuitants who would have an interest in the future working of the company. In the contract entered into between the company and the Secretary of State it was provided that a separate contract should be entered into for the working of the collieries.

The report was adopted, and a dividend of £1 3s. 9d. per cent. having been declared, the board was authorised to capitalise the annuity of £2,500 per annum to Sir R. M. Stephenson. A cordial vote of thanks to the chairman and the other officers of the company concluded the proceedings.

THE NEW DIAMONDS, DIAMANTÉ BRILLIANTS,

have created an extraordinary sensation in Paris, and are rapidly and deservedly superseding real diamonds. Their cost is about 1-300th less. These magnificent Stones first attracted notice at the Paris Exhibition last year, where they were exposed side by side with real diamonds of great value, and they are now introduced into England for the first time. They are absolutely identical in size, brilliancy, lustre, and durability with real diamonds of the first water, and defy detection even by jewellers and experts. They are immeasurably superior to real diamonds of second-rate quality. THE MANUFACTURER GUARANTEES THE SURPRISE AND PLEASURE OF PURCHASERS. These brilliants can be worn in the strongest daylight, which is practically the real test of perfection, and the most sceptical will be utterly deceived. They can be mounted side by side with real diamonds of the first quality, and will be found undistinguishable therefrom. They are worn at the Court Balls, and upon all occasions in Paris and St. Petersburg. The prohibitive prices charged in England for real diamonds render their acquisition impossible to the middle classes, and the imitation diamonds hitherto sold are worthless, the imposition being manifest to the most careless observer. The DIAMANTÉ BRILLIANTS can, on the contrary, be worn with absolute and entire confidence at all times and for a lifetime, and, as we have said above, defy the closest scrutiny. Purchasers invariably repeat their purchases. The investigations and labour of two generations have been expended in bringing these remarkable jewels to their present state of perfection.

£300 size, 20 shillings.
200 ,, 15 ,,
50 ,, 6 ,,

Smaller stones at a uniform price of four shillings. These diamonds cannot be obtained elsewhere at any price.

They were awarded a Prize Medal at the Paris Exhibition, 1878.

These diamonds can be supplied ready mounted, in 18 Carat Gold or in Silver-gilt. Designs and Estimates for Mounting submitted to purchasers of the diamond Free of Charge.

The diamonds will be forwarded packed in a box, registered by post, the same day upon receipt of order and remittance. Remittances may be made by cheques, post-office orders, postage stamps, or Cheque Bank cheques, direct to

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE,

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 22, 1880.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Jan. 3; Madras and Allahabad, Jan. 1; Calcutta, Jan. 1.

THE reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending Dec. 16 and Dec. 23 are:—Dec. 16: Slight rain fell during the week in Madras, and also in parts of Bengal, doing much good in Cuttack. The outturn of the autumn harvest is generally good, and the spring crops are promising, but require rain in the Punjab. The general health continues to improve. Dec. 23: Rain has again fallen in the Madras Presidency; in the other provinces there has been little or none. Some rain now would be of benefit to the spring crops, the prospects of which continue so far satisfactory. The winter harvest is progressing with a favourable outturn. The public health has much improved.

THE health reports for the week ending Dec. 23 are:—Bombay: Public health improving, but fever prevalent in Karachi and Ahmedabad, also in Kanara, with cholera at Honore. Bengal: Cholera and fever still reported in many places, and smallpox in Cuttack. N. W. P. and Oudh: Fever abating; general reports good. Punjab: Good. British Burma: General health good; some fever. Hyderabad: Fever prevalent. Central India: Fever prevalent in Nowgong. Rajputana: Fever prevalent in Ajmir, abating in Bhurtpur.

WE have received the following telegram from the India-office:—

"FROM VICEROY, JAN. 16.—Hostile Mohmands, who had crossed Cabul River near Daka to the number of nearly 5,000, were yesterday attacked, defeated, and driven across river by troops from Daka and Lundi Kotal. Our loss, one killed, seven wounded. Other Khyber tribes perfectly quiet. All well at Cabul."

THE alteration in the despatch of the Indian mails, necessitated by the service under the new contract coming into operation, has caused an unusual interval to elapse since our last publication. The telegraphic news from Afghanistan, as well as from India, has been exceedingly meagre, the principal fact being the hostile demonstration and consequent defeat of the Mohmands, who are, however, likely to need and suffer further lessons. The government of the city of Cabul has been entrusted to Sirdar Wali Mahomed, and the appointment is expected to have an excellent effect in pacifying the country. Other telegrams are as follow:—

"The arrival of General Gough's brigade and its location in the Bala Hissar have caused General Roberts to extend his position. The high hill to the west of Cabul city, called Shahr Darwaza, on a spur from which stands the Bala Hissar, is being crowned with a strong block-house. This and a corresponding work on the Koh Asmai will protect the city from the west and give a certain command of the Deh Mozang defile. Communication between Sherpur and the Bala Hissar and between both and the rear will be rendered safe by the erection of a fortified post on the Siah Sang Hills. The river will be bridged between Sherpur and Siah Sang, the bridge being protected by another post. All forts and walls within 1,000 yards of Sherpur have been levelled, and roads made in all directions. All the positions have been vastly improved and the defences of Sherpur strengthened. The health of the troops is fair, though both British and natives are suffering much from pneumonia. General Hugh Gough has been appointed to the charge of the whole line of communications from Jamrud to Cabul, with Colonels Low and Heathcote as deputies, and a despatch from General Roberts, dated the 18th inst., announces the arrival of the convoy of ammunition and clothing recently despatched from Gandamak. The sons of Mustaufi Khan have come into Cabul. Frauds to a large extent on the part of a Parsee commissariat agent have been discovered by our political and commissariat officers. The man, it is found, was remitting Rs.20,000 monthly to India through native bankers."

A REUTER'S telegram says that intelligence received at Calcutta on Jan. 20, from Afghan Turkestan, states that the rebellion has greatly weakened the power of Solum Hyder. There is no news of Abdurrahman Khan, and the report of his arrival at Balkh is unconfirmed. Daoud Shah was to be brought to Calcutta yesterday.

THE Daily News correspondent telegraphs that Mahomed Hassan, the ex-Governor of Jellalabad has raided in the Hazara country on the road to Ghuzni, destroyed many villages, and killed men, women, and children. Six regular regiments at Ghuzni are drilling. They are paid by Mahomed Jan at the rate of five rupees a month. The news that will be looked for will relate to Ghuzni, which stronghold must be reduced before the pacification of the country can be considered practicable. From Candahar we hear of the occupation of Farah by a small body of Heratee horse sent by Ayoob Khan, and their subsequent defeat. A caravan, the first for many months, arrived last week at Candahar, but the reports of the state of things there were conflicting. In the province of Candahar all is quiet; no rain had fallen up to the 17th; the troops were in a healthy state except for a few cases of pneumonia. The first passenger train has arrived at Sibi. The line has so far been completed at the rate of a mile and a third daily, a feat perhaps unequalled in the history of railway construction. The Puna Horse and three Bombay Native Infantry regiments have been ordered to proceed to the Sind frontier.

THE Bombay papers are mainly filled with reports of festivities, commencing with the opening of the Prince's Dock; and the ceremony and speeches at the banquet, when Mr. Kittredge declared that what India only wanted was capital, fill several columns. The Governor made several speeches, and happily announced that the decoration of C.I.E. had been conferred on Mr. Ormiston, the engineer. The marriage of the Bishop of Bombay to Miss Moultrie was celebrated on Dec. 27, but, owing to a recent bereavement, was private, and only attended by a few select friends. The double marriage at Baroda of his Highness the Gaekwar to the Princess of Tanjore, and of the little Princess Tara Bai to the Sir Desai of Sawantwari, have been the occasion of three weeks of high festival. A long list of State guests, entertained with lavish hospitality, are mentioned, and it is said that fifteen lakhs have been devoted to the expenses. The correspondent of the Times of India hears that "It has been a matter of remark among the natives that very few natives of influence have been invited to take part in one of the most important festivals ever held by any native State. We may regard this as a satisfactory sign of the growing influence of the English in Baroda and as a compliment to ourselves. But the fact remains that none of the neighbouring Kattywar chiefs, none even of the tributary chiefs of the Rewa Kanta and Mahi Kanta, and none of the representative native gentlemen of Bombay are present to celebrate the Gaekwar's wedding. The only exceptions to this rule are, I am informed, the Dewan of Holkar, a native judge from Madras, and two or three noted Madrasses. This lavish and spontaneous entertainment of English guests is an historical fact of some importance in the chequered history of Baroda."

After the banquet succeeding the marriage of the Sir Desai and the Princess Tara Bai, H.H. the Gaekwar "in a firm and clear voice proposed first the health of Her Gracious Majesty the Empress of India, and next the health of the Prince and Princess of Wales."

THE Times of India says that Sir Neville Chamberlain has at last been compelled, by reason of ill health, to resign the Madras command in chief. He retires in a couple of months or so, and the military member of the Governor General's Council, Sir Edwin Johnson, K.C.B., C.I.E., R.A. (late Bengal), is to be his successor.

THE following gentlemen have been nominated Companions of the Order of the Indian Empire:—Attaur Singh Sirdar, Dr. A. C. Burnell, Dr. W. R. Cornish, Sir P. Cunliffe Owen, Major General Sir Henry Daly, Pundit Ishwara Chandra Vidja-Sajara, Father Lafont, Mr. S. P. W. V. Luke, Mr. C. J. Lyall, Mr. C. G. W. Macpherson, Hon. Mir Hamayun Jah Bahadoor, Mr. De Nanquette, Mr. T. Ormiston, Mr. C. E. Pitman, Lieut. General Sir F. S.

Roberts, Pundit Sarup Narain, Kazi Shahabuddin, Mr. G. Sibley, Sonvindoo Mohun Tapoore, Mr. Ronald Thomson.

THE Government of India have ordered that their thanks should be conveyed to Syud Wilayet Khan, C.I.E., and Moulvie Fazl-ul-Rahman, of Patna, for the loyal spirit which induced them to offer a contribution of Rs.5,000 each towards the expenses of the Cabul expedition. The offered donations have not been accepted, "as no precedent exists for the acceptance of such contributions to the general revenues."

LAST September the Governments of Madras, Bombay, Bengal, the North West, and the Punjab were invited to nominate a number of native gentlemen from whom, under the rules sanctioned in 1869 by the Secretary of State, the Viceroy might select probationers for posts of a kind hitherto reserved for covenanted civilians. The names were submitted in less than a month, and six probationers have been selected—viz., Messrs. Sorabji Pudumji Pestonji for Bombay; Nanda Krishna Bose and Suttya Shree Gosal for Bengal; Kunwar Bharat Singh and Muhammed Abbas for the North West and Oudh; and Sirdar Gurdial Singh for the Punjab. No names appear to have been proposed by the Madras Government. The above-named gentlemen are all under twenty-five, and are well versed in English as well as in their respective provincial languages. After passing the doctor they will begin their two years' probationary service on Rs.200 a month.

THE Lord President of the Council has appointed Mr. Caspar Purdon Clarke to the charge of the India Museum, and Dr. Birdwood, C.S.I., of the India-office, professional referee for the India Museum. Dr. Birdwood has also been desired to prepare a popular handbook on Indian art, to be published at the reopening of the museum on the 1st of May next.

ALTHOUGH the accounts, which have not been contradicted in St. Petersburg, are still uncertain, and vary as to the particulars, there seems to be little doubt that the Russian force retreating from Geok Tepe sustained further reverses at the hands of the Tekke Turkomans, who are even asserted to have seized Tchikislar, with the accumulated stores. The accounts chiefly differ as to the losses inflicted en route on the retreating columns, the Turkomans being stated by one correspondent to have left the retreat unmolested, but to have seized Tchikislar by a rapid march; by another, to have pressed the Russians hard, and blockaded that post (or landing stage), which had consequently to be abandoned with all its supplies. It does not appear whether Noor Virdi Khan, the Akhal chief, for an account of whom we refer our readers to Mr. Boulger's new work, led the attack, or has since joined the victorious Tekkes. Their victory will surely attract all the malcontent warriors of Central Asia to their standards, and accounts, perhaps exaggerated, state that already many Khivans, and even Persians, have joined them.

UNDER the revised arrangement of the Transport Department of the Admiralty, Admiral William R. Mends, K.C.B., continues as director of transports; Mr. W. F. Baughan becomes assistant director; and Messrs. S. J. Graff, F. L. Vaux, and Gordon W. Miller, senior clerks. The Imperial and Indian branches will be amalgamated, Capt. Cruttenden, I.N., remaining as "consulting officer for the Indian troop service."

A MEDICAL officer, lately returned from India complains to the Army and Navy Gazette of the very inadequate provision which is made in the Indian transports for officers who are invalided to England, and expresses an opinion that the death of a young officer the other day was entirely due to the defective arrangements on board the troop-ship on which he was provided with a passage. We quite agree with our contemporary that the matter is one of serious moment, and we feel that we have only to draw attention to it to secure the consideration of the authorities, who, we rest certain, will adopt steps to prevent a recurrence of circumstances which have robbed the service of a valuable life, and have cast into mourning the family of a distinguished officer who has served his country in India for a long term of years.

THE transfer of the Assyrian and Egyptian objects belonging to the Indian Museum to their future home amongst the cognate treasures of the British Museum has been accomplished. A large Assyrian slab with the figure of Deity, and an Egyptian mummy in three coffins, are noted as the most remarkable. A large nember of Buddhist bas-reliefs from Amravati have also been received.

COMMANDER V. L. CAMERON, C.B., will deliver a lecture at the Royal United Service Institution on the afternoon of Friday, Feb. 20, on his recent travels in Mesopotamia, especially with reference to the proposed Euphrates Valley Railway.

CONCURRENTLY with the establishment of the fortnightly service to Australia, the directors of the Peninsular and Oriental Company have decided to reduce their rates of passage money. Commencing with the s.s. Cathay, sailing on Feb. 19, the fares will be, from Southampton, 1st class, £70; 2nd, £45; and £5 less from Venice or Brindisi.

WITH reference to the recent order granting passage to England in troopships, if available, to the families of officers on field service, the Government of India have extended the concession to such relations of an officer on service as may be bonâ fide members of his family and dependent on him for a home. The Government have also sanctioned the grant of free passage by troopship, if available, to widows of officers killed in action, or who have died of wounds, or illness contracted on field service, in addition to any passage money they may be entitled to from funds to which their husbands had been subscribers. It will be useful to our military readers to know that certain alterations have been made in the troopship regulations. Liquor is not issued now as part of the saloon messing, but is treated as an "extra," the passengers having to pay for it as on private steamers. A corresponding reduction, however, has been made in the charge for messing. Orders have been issued from the Horse Guards that all military baggage must in future be carried in rectangular boxes to be made according to sizes laid down. No baggage will be accepted for shipment with troops after April 1 next which does not conform to the regulations. Casks, vats, crates, hampers, are altogether prohibited.

THE Shanghai correspondent of the Times writes "that the horrible sentence passed by the Chinese Government on the children and grandchildren of Yakoob Beg is not to be carried out, and that orders have been sent to Tso Tsung-tang and the judicial authorities of the province of Kan Suh to keep them in close confinement in the provincial capital."

HISTORY OF THE GODDESS OF SMALL-POX.

THE following is said of Shitala the goddess of small-pox in Skandapurana. As small-pox invariably attends the goddess, it may be called the goddess herself, and the fever which accompanies it is called violent fever. There are seven kinds of small-pox. Fever is generally felt beforehand, then within a week the eruption comes out, in the second week it becomes mature, and in the third it dries. But if the pustules break, the smoke of the dung of a wild cow should be taken. The branches of the nimb or neemb (Melia-azaderata) tree should be waved in order to drive out the flies. Cold water should be used and the body should not be rubbed even at the time of fever. The man suffering from it should be placed in a clean (well ventilated), cold and lonely room. A dirty or unholy man should not touch him or go to him during that time. Almost all the physicians do not prescribe medicine at all, but a few only do so. The only treatment for it, as prescribed in the Shastras, is Japa (prayers), boma (oblation), dana (donation), sedastayana (aversion of evil), and the worship of Brahmin, cow, Shiva (the well-known god) and Gauri (the wife of Shiva), and a holy and faithful Brahmin should recite the praise of the goddess Shitala before the patient, and the eruption will be cured. Skanda (the son of Shiva, requested his father thus :—"O great god of gods (Shiva) kindly recite fully before me the auspicious praise of the goddess Shitala, which, being uttered, cures the small-pox for ever." Shiva said, "I bow before the goddess Shitala, riding on an ass, having the points of the compass for her clothes (i.e., quite naked) holding a broom and jug with both hands and her head is adorned with a winnowing basket. I pray the goddess Shitala, the destroyer of all diseases and by whose grace no fear of small-pox exists any more. If a man suffering from burning sensation utter the word 'Shitala' 'Shitala,' the fear of eruption will suddenly disappear from him. O goddess Shitala, if a man placing you within cold water, worship thereby, he and his descendants have not to fear the eruption any more. O goddess Shitala, you are the only medicine to men suffering awfully from inflammatory fever, having an ill smelling body and losing eyes for ever. O goddess Shitala, you are the infallible curer of all pains arising in the human body and you shower the heavenly nectar over the man who suffers from eruption. No Mantra (incantation) nor medicine can effect any benefit to the man who is suffering from bad diseases but only you, and no other goddess is the curer of the same."

THE TRADES AND PROFESSIONS BILL.—The modification that has been made by Sir John Strachey in the Trades and Professions Bill, which it is not proposed to pass until after the publication of the budget, gives general satisfaction. The changes were announced at a meeting of the Supreme Legislative Council on the 24th ult., the principal alteration being the exemption of all persons with income below Rs.500, and the limitation of the tax upon non-officials to the maximum of Rs.800. In other respects the existing Acts will remain essentially unchanged, but in Bengal and Northern India one class will be added to the present schedule, and traders and professionals included therein will pay an annual fee of Rs.800. In Bombay two new classes will be added paying Rs.500 and Rs.800. In Madras there is no change in the present maximum fee, which is thus applied throughout India. Officials will pay one and a half per cent. on salary without limitation. The Viceroy, Governors, Commanders in Chief, Lieutenant Governors, and members of Council will thus pay more than any traders, an anomaly which can hardly be avoided when the latter are not taxed on actual income. Sir John Strachey declared the necessity of permanently maintaining taxation on the richer traders and official classes who have hitherto paid little or nothing. He repudiated the assertions that fresh burdens were being imposed on the country, and said that the result of the present measure would be an equitable readjustment of taxation by which one and three-quarter millions of relatively poor persons will be exempted from taxation, and the greater part of the burden be transferred to 35,000 persons, mostly comparatively rich officials. The financial result of the whole measure will be a loss of £100,000 revenue.—Times of India.

THE Governor-General in Council has sanctioned the publication, in separate monthly circulars, in assimilation with the practice obtaining at the War office, of such instructions and regulations relating to financial and administrative subjects of the army as the Government of India may see fit to promul gate for general information. From the 1st of January all-rulings and orders, which from that date will cease to be published in the Gazette of India, and which will, in future, be contained in army circulars, are to be considered as authority from the date of their publication, unless otherwise directed. The circulars will not be republished in the orders of the Government of Madras or Bombay, or in those of the Commander in Chief in India.

THE INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—At the first ordinary meeting after the Christmas recess the newly-elected president, Mr. W. H. Barlow, F.R.S., delivered an inaugural address. He drew attention to the great changes in engineering which had arisen since the institution received its Royal Charter, and mainly to the improvements in the means of communication, both on land and on sea, and by the utilisation of some of the powers of electricity in the transmission or intelligence.—At the meeting on Tuesday, the 13th inst.—Mr. W. H. Barlow, F.R.S., president in the chair—it was announced that the monthly ballot resulted in the election of twenty-three candidates, of whom six were members, including Mr. Henry Robert Pasley Carter, deputy chief engineer of the Madras Railway; fourteen associate members, and three associates.—At the meeting on Tuesday, Jan. 20—Mr. W. H. Barlow, F.R.S., president, in the chair—a paper was read on "Movable Dams in Indian Weirs," by Mr. R. B. Buckley, Assoc. M. Inst. C.E. This paper commenced with a brief description of Indian weirs, and then proceeded to show the necessity for having portions of these weirs movable, so that the silt and deposits of different kinds might be swept away from the heads of the canals supplied from the rivers above the weirs. A description was given of the movable weirs which had been adopted on the Mahanuddee and Cossye rivers and on the Sone. The paper described briefly a system of double-tumbler shutters, proposed by Mr. Fouracres, who introduced the system of the Sone weir, but not as yet adopted in practice.

ROYAL HUMANE SOCIETY.—The annual general court of this society was held on Tuesday, Jan. 13, at the offices, Trafalgar-square, when the Stanhope gold medal, which is annually awarded for the most praiseworthy case of saving life, was bestowed. Mr. J. M. Case presided. The report, which was read by the secretary, Captain Home, stated that 286 cases, in which the lives of one or more persons had been placed in jeopardy, had been dealt with during the past year, and 269 rewards of various descriptions were given; 333 persons were successfully treated, but 22 were beyond recovery There had been nine cases of attempted suicide, and ten cases had been referred to the general court for the award of the silver medallion; 71 applications had been rejected as not eligible. During the year, of the 53 cases which occurred in the Serpentine 47 had been successfully treated; six persons had been found drowned. There had also been four cases of suicide in the Serpentine. On the motion of the chairman the report was unanimously adopted and the officers of the society were re-elected. The secretary reported that during the past year the number of bathers in the Serpentine had been estimated at 97,000. During the late inclement season the society had employed icemen for 27 days, distributed in Hyde, St. James's, Regent's, and Finsbury Parks, the Long Water, and Round Pond at Kensington, and also at Clapham-common, the Crystal Palace, and Hendon. The Stanhope gold medal was then unanimously voted to Mr. Kristo Chunder Chuckerbutty, a native medical practitioner in India, who was instrumental in saving the life of a woman from drowning in the River Hooghly, off British Chandernagore, in February of last year, being, in the opinion of the committee, the most praiseworthy case brought before them during the year. Mr. Chuckerbutty also receives the society's silver medal.

ANCIENT MYTHOLOGY.*

WE would not presume to say that any of our readers have personally ever experienced the want of some current knowledge of the mythology of Greece and Rome. It may, indeed, sometimes happen to visitors to the Royal Academy or the museums, whether at Bloomsbury or South Kensington, to be somewhat puzzled by questions as to the identity or story of Clytie, or the precise distinction between Aphrodite Pandemos and Aphrodite Urania. Fauns and Satyrs present puzzling resemblances, while Nymphs vaguely represent all Naiads, Oreads, and Dryads alike. A more serious want is necessarily experienced by the instructors of youth. The legendary cultus of "the fair divinities of old religion" cannot be altogether omitted from even "modern" school teaching, and the difficulty that the author of the unassuming but excellent work before us dwells on, evidently from experience, is a common one. To use the prefatory words: "It is hardly necessary to dwell on the importance of the study of Mythology; our poems, our novels, and even our daily journals teem with classical allusions." We feel, in reading the condensed but lucid expositions of the myths and religious legends of Greece and Rome, that the work is that of an accomplished woman, with thoroughly poetic appreciation of the exquisite beauties of the old creations of the Hellenic imagination and faith. Very skilfully, too, with sensitive, but not obtrusive, delicacy are the difficulties of the too "undraped" legends avoided, and while the stories are told with almost historical realism, so that the successive figures in her gallery are faithful word renderings of the "stones that breathe and burn, the brass that seems to speak," the original idealism, the symbolic heritage of Aryan thought, is sufficiently indicated without being pedantically intruded. We must not omit to notice that the arrangement of the work presents the mythical history of the successive dynastic deities in due order, without confusing the reader or student as to the identity or difference. Thus the myth of Helios precedes that of Phœbus Apollo, and both are charmingly told; but we fear that the Olympian registries would be searched in vain for records of the successive marriages attributed to the Cynthian god. There are some slight errors, such as "ancilliæ," which can be corrected in a second edition; some disputable etymologies, as might well be expected, and some few, but not important, omissions; one, indeed, the birth of the roses in the legend of Rhodes, so beautiful that it should have found place. The volume includes short but instructive accounts of the public worship and festivals of Greece and Rome, while in the second part the principal legends of the heroes are epitomised. We congratulate the author on the production of a valuable aid to the labours of masters and pupils, and an introduction to the study of mythology, which will perhaps content the superficial seeker of knowledge made easy, but is well designed to awaken a spirit of inquiry into the more abstruse study of the ancient religions. It occupies a worthy place in a comprehensive school series; is well got up, and enriched with numerous vignettes, illustrations of ancient art, and deserves our best commendation.

THE ROYAL KALENDAR.*

THE new year has brought to us the accustomed new issue of the Royal Kalendar. This handy and well arranged compendium of information is as complete and as correct as heretofore. Turning over its pages, we see from the rolls of the Order of Knighthood that the roll of the Star of India shows two losses by death from among the Grand Commanders, Lord Lawrence and his Highness the Prince of Arcot, while the additions are General Sir F. P. Haines, his Highness the Raja of Nabha, and as an honorary K.G.C., his Highness Mir Khodadad Khan. The Maharaja of Vizianagram and Major Sir Geo. Wingate have left vacancies among the knights, while the new cavaliers are Sir R. E. Egerton, Col. Sir Owen Burne, Sir T. Sandeman, and the Nawab Gholam Hussun Khan Bahadur. Five Companions of the Order, besides the distinguished and lamented Pierre Cavagnari, have been removed by death, and nine have been added. The former are Sirdar Mangal Singh Ramgharia, Babu Degamber Mitter, the Dewan of Cashmir, and Raja Hurder Bux, to whom we must add General Marriott. The new names are those of R. A. Dalyell, Esq., J. B. Peile, Major O. St. John, R.E., the Maharaja Jotendo Mohun Tagore, Sirdar Bikrama Singh, the Maharaja Pertab Singh, Sahibrada Obed Ali Khan, Lieut. Col. W. G. Waterfield, L. H. Griffin, Esq., and Lieut. Col. Browne, R.E. The Order of the Indian Empire has lost one who would have lived to earn higher honour, R. B. Shaw, Resident of Mandalay, and gained the addition of sixteen companions whose names recall varied services to India well deserving of their distinctions. Although corrections for the Kalendar are scarcely invited at so early a period of the ephemeral life of the new volume, we cannot but point out that, besides the Orders of Knighthood, at least a nominal list o those on whom the Victoria Cross has been bestowed, with perhaps the dates and local names, distinguishing the deeds of valour so rewarded, would be a most acceptable addition to the pages of this excellent book of reference.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE ENGLISH CHURCH IN CAIRO.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—We have a pretty little English church in Cairo, and a worthy and energetic chaplain in the Rev. G. W. Collins, and the condition of our little church urges me to beg you to admit this letter into your hospitable columns.

I am a loyal Englishman, knowing Egypt for the last twenty-two years, and I am grieved to find that our English church in Cairo, in its unfinished state, and with a heavy debt upon it as well, should be the subject of disparaging remarks here both from the natives and the members of the other creeds and colonies. Every religion has its temple of worship here now, and they are all of them in a finished and flourishing condition, with the exception of our own, the English church.

England is considered here as the richest and most Christian nation of the world, and natural surprise is expressed that her church here is the only exception of prosperity amongst the others. And yet it might be made the prettiest church in Cairo if it had the funds. It is situated in a fine road, in the best quarter of the city, immediately between the two principal hotels; it stands upon a plot of valuable ground, the gift of the Moslem ruler of the country, and yet there it stands, with no garden, no trees, no shelter from the burning sun, no proper pathway over the sand and stones, no finished walls, no railings, and no gates. In fact, there stands our naked English church, in the most appealing condition, adjoining one of the handsomest town houses of one of the highest officials, and within a stone's throw of the German church, to which it stands in very pitiful comparison indeed! I have often heard a passing Arab remark to his friend: "What! is that the church of the great, rich English people?"

The few English residents here have given and are giving what they can afford, but the weekly Sabbath collections are but small, and our church is entirely supported by voluntary contributions. It is in the utmost need of funds to render it worthy in appearance of the name of "English," and as no one else seems disposed to take the trouble to plead its cause I hope that you will favour it by publishing this letter, trusting that our poor little English church in Cairo will likewise receive a few Christmas contributions from our sympathising countrymen at home.

Post-office orders and cheques can be easily changed here, and will be duly acknowledged.—I have the honour to remain, Sir, your obedient servant, E. ST. JOHN FAIRMAN.

GHAZNI.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—A few days ago the Times contained an article on "Ghazní," one of the daily doses on Afghanistan. The readers of that journal would naturally conclude that the compiler of that account was well up in his Muhammadan history before he attempted to write it, and that something might be learnt from it. But it contains some errors so great and so sure to mislead that they ought to be promptly corrected. Here are specimens. The writer begins with saying that:—"Mahmoud was the first person who cast off the tie which bound him to the ruler of Bokhara." And then adds: "One of his (Mahmoud's) successors, Bahram Khan, the brother of that Alp Arslan, whose great qualities have been enumerated in immortal language by Gibbon, was driven out of Ghazni by the Afghan prince of Ghor, who destroyed Ghazní."

It was Alb-Tigín, the Turk, the slave of the Sámání rulers of Máwará-un-Nahr and Khurásán, who, when governor and commander of the troops in Khurásán, threw off allegiance and established himself at Ghazni, having first expelled Abu-Bikr-i-Lawik, the feudatory of that province. Alb-Tigín was subsequently confirmed in that fief, which the Sámání sovereign was not strong enough to dispossess him of. Alb-Tigín was succeeded at Ghazní by his son, Is-hak, who soon after died, and Amír Pírey, one of Alb-Tigín's slaves, succeeded to the fief. He was soon deposed by the people and killed, and then Sabuk-Tigín, the Turk, another of Alb-Tigín's slaves, was set up, and confirmed by the Sámání sovereign. Sabuk-Tigín, as is well known, was succeeded by his son Ismá'íl, who was speedily deposed by his brother Mahmúd, who became completely independent on the breaking up of the Sámání power. Therefore, Mahmúd is not "the first person who cast off the tie which bound him to the ruler of Bukhara, but Alb-Tigín who died nine years before Mahmúd was born.

As to "Alp-Arslán" and "Gibbon's immortal language." Alá-ud-dín, Mas'úd, Al-Karím, or the Beneficent, the eleventh ruler of the Ghazní dynasty, had several sons; two of whom were Melik Arsalán and Baharám Sháh (there was no ruler styled "Khán" in those days but the rulers of Turkistán.) Malik Arsálan succeeded at the death of his father in 509 H. (1115 A.D.), upon which his brother, Bahrám Sháh, fled to the court of Sultán Sanjar (the grandson of Gibbon's Alp Arslan), the Saljúk, for Bahrám's mother was Sanjar's sister. Sanjar, to aid his nephew, marched to Ghazní, defeated Malik Arsálan, and installed Bahrám two years after. This Ghaznáwí ruler has been mistaken by the Times writer for Alb-Arsalán, the Saljúk, who is a totally different person. The Alb-Arsalán respecting whom Gibbon wrote was a Saljúk Turk-mán, the dynasty which deprived the Ghazníwí sovereigns of great part of Khurásán, and whose capital was Marw, which excites such interest at present. The father of Alb-Arsalán was Dá'úd-i-Jaghar Beg, brother of Tughril Beg. Alb-Arsalán succeeded his father to the empire of the Saljúks in 451 H. (1059 A.D.), and was assassinated in 465 H. (1072 A.D.), before Malik Arsalán was born, and Ghazní was not taken by the Ghúrí Prince until nearly a century after Alb-Arsalán's death. Thus the "Alp Arslan" of Gibbon, and supposed brother of "Bahrám Khan," was dead forty-five years before Bahrám Sháh came to the throne, he having died during the reign of the latter's grandfather. I am quite ready to give my authorities for these statements. The Ghúrís were not Afghāns, but Tájníks, according to the historian brought up at their Court, and whose official he was, and his father before him, and whose mother was the school companion and favourite attendant of a Ghúrí princess who had that history written.

Unfortunately for "Gibbon's immortal words"—error is said to be immortal—what he calls "the inscription on Alb-Arslan's tomb" is nothing more than half of one of the verses contained in the dirge composed by the Hakim, Sanā'ī, on Alb-Arsalán's death, and which is as follows:—

"Thou sawest the head of Alb-Arsalán elevated to the sublimity of the seventh heaven;
"Come to Marw, that thou mayest see the body of Alb-Arsalán buried in the dust,
"Attended neither by train or guards, nor the moon-faced, dimple-chinn'd;
"Nor the steed pressed by his thighs, nor the reins within his grasp."

The third line may be also translated, according to another reading, "Neither with the glittering blade by his side," &c.—

Yours &c.,
H. G. RAVERTY, Major.

THE FAMINE MORTALITY IN MADRAS.

IT has been broadly stated that three millions of people perished during the famine of 1877 within the single Presidency of Madras; and this statement has been repeated and magnified by the ill-wishers of British rule. So far as we are aware, there is no real foundation for the assertion that three millions of people died of starvation in that year. Dr. Cornish, the sanitary commissioner of Madras, makes up a grand total of 3,250,000, and comes to the conclusion "that the actual losses of population in that Presidency alone, from causes connected with the famine, have not fallen short of three millions." But Dr. Cornish takes a few selected areas, and finds that a certain percentage of persons were "missing" in each after the famine. Then he applies the percentages thus obtained to the whole famine area, district by district. Finally, he adds to the total an extra million or so, which he allows for the growth of the population between 1872 (the year of the last census) and 1876. It is obvious that this process rests upon the assumption that all who were "missing" from his selected famine areas had perished. But this assumption is opposed to the ascertained facts in our great Bengal famine of 1866. The population swayed about in that year from one district to another, the main stream being from the rural parts to the great towns, and from the districts where food was dearest to those where employment could be had, and where food was cheapest. Dr. Cornish leaves this great factor out of his calculations, and his remarks upon the unlikelihood of such movements of the population on any large scale strike us as inconclusive.

After a careful perusal of Dr. Cornish's paper we see no reason to believe that 3,250,000, or anything like 3,250,000, perished in Madras. Several causes contributed to render the death registration imperfect in Madras in 1877; but a great many other causes acted in the opposite direction, and tended to render the registration of deaths as complete at least as in ordinary years. There was a great deal more attention paid to the subject, and the extra number of European officers employed placed the village accountants, who act as the rural registrars of Madras, under a more than usually stringent supervision. The great concourse of the population at the various relief depots, and the exact record of the numerous deaths which there occurred, introduced another element of completeness in the registration of the death rate in 1877 which is absent in ordinary years. We believe that the death registration was, at least, as accurately conducted in 1877 and 1878 as it was in the period preceding the famine. The total number of extra deaths recorded in those two years was under 1,330,000. Unless, then, the whole system of registration in Madras is a farce, it disproves the vast hypothetical total which Dr. Cornish has summed up of the 3,250,000 who perished during the year of famine up to March, 1878. We do not think that 1,330,000 during two years can be regarded as a very excessive addition to the deaths from all causes after a great strain such as a famine implies. That increase means a temporary addition of 650,000 deaths per annum in a Presidency with a population of 31,500,000—a very serious addition, but a very different one from 3,250,000.—Englishman.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

MEETINGS OF COMPANIES.—At the general meeting of the Bengal Coal Company, held Dec. 13, a dividend at the rate of Rs.85, per share was declared.—At the first meeting of the Darjiling Steam Tramway Company, held Dec. 17, the accounts were passed, and it was resolved that Mr. Prestage be paid the sum of Rs.10,000 on completion of the line, as an honorarium for his services.—Englishman.

EMIGRATION.—During the month of September last 1,528 emgrants left the port of Calcutta, of whom 511 went to Demerara, 536 to Trinidad, and 481 to the French West Indian colonies.—Ibid.

THE ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.—The following gentlemen have been appointed members of the committee of management of the Zoological Gardens:—Lieut. Col. G. Fergus Graham, and Messrs. C. W. Bolton, H. M. Kisch, J. Lambert, G. Miller, and R. H. Wilson.—Ibid.

THE ALIPUR SCHOOL.—The appointment of a superintendent of the reformatory school at Alipur, on pay of Rs.300, rising by annual increments of Rs.10 a month, with retrospective effect from Feb. 20, 1878, to Rs.400, has been sanctioned by the Secretary of State.—Press Commissioner.

WE hear from North Cachar that the tea season in that district has this year ended very quickly, in consequence of an early cessation of the rains. The rainfall has been about 133·26 inches, against 137·37 last year—not a very large difference; but last year tea had the benefit of some good showers in November. Besides an early break in the rains, North Cachar has this year suffered much from blight, and a few of the gardens have not made more than a little above half their estimated outturn. At the end of the first week in December the weather in the district was clear and cold. The temperature at midday is given as—max. 83°, min. 62°; but one night it fell to 58°.

THE BURMESE IN THE AENG PASS.—The rumour of a Burmese gathering near the Aeng Pass led to the despatch of the deputy commissioner of Kyouk-Phyoo to the frontier to learn the truth. His report was that the Burmese people near the border had heard of King Theebaw's death, and the Burman officials, in consequence of this report being current, feared there would be a stampede, and a large outrush of the more peace-loving portion of the Burmese population for safety into British territory. The officials, therefore, collected as many people as they could and armed them to prevent an emigration into Arakan. It was this armed body which rumour exaggerated into an approaching Burmese force.—Indian Daily News.

THE PRESIDENCY COLLEGE.—We hear that the following arrangements have been sanctioned for the teaching of law at the Presidency College for the calendar year 1880:—Mr. J. G. Apcar, barrister at law, to be lecturer in English law; Mr. C. H. Reily, barrister at law, to be lecturer in English law; Baboo Trailackya Nath Mitra, M.A., D.L., to be lecturer on Hindoo law; and Mr. G. S. Henderson, barrister at law, to be lecturer in Mahomedan law.—Ibid.

THE ZAIMUKHT EXPEDITION.—The following details have been received by Government regarding the Zaimukht expedition:—On Saturday, Dec. 13, Gen. Tytler moved out from Camp Chinarah, against Zawar, the Zaimukht stronghold, distant about eight miles, with 1,350 infantry, two mountain guns, and two screw guns. The road lay through an open valley, which, at about two-and-a-half miles from Zawar, and narrowing to a very cramped gorge, wound between the hills, lofty, precipitous, and very difficult to climb. Col. Gordon, with four companies of the 85th and the 29th N.I., and two mountain guns, was sent to clear the heights held by the enemy on the right of the advance parties. The 4th P.I. and the 20th N.I. were sent to crown the heights on the left, Gen. Tytler moving with the remainder of the force and the screw guns along the bed of the ravine. Owing to the very steep and rocky nature of the ground, the guns with Col. Gordon's force were unable to follow; but, later on, came up the ravine, and moved to the second height, whence they shelled the enemy, who had collected in force on the higher height in front. The 29th N.I. took the enemy in flank, while the 85th advanced up the almost perpendicular face of the cliff. The enemy fled in confusion.

Gen. Tytler bivouacked in a village, called Bagh, below. Our casualty was one native officer of the 29th N.I. severely wounded. It is estimated that the loss of the enemy amounted to twenty. On the 14th Gen. Tytler continued to advance. The enemy stoutly defended the pass near Zawar. The 4th P.I. on the ridge, and the 85th in the ravine, beat them back, killing twenty or thirty. The screw guns made excellent practice. All the villages in the Zawar Valley were burnt, and along the line of retirement. Gen. Tytler returned unmolested to Bagh at five o'clock, and bivouacked. Our casualties were Lieut. Renny, 4th P.I., very dangerously wounded-one havildar severely, and one sipahi mortally, wounded.—English man.

SURGEON-MAJOR S. B. PARTRIDGE, doing duty in Bengal, retired from the service at the beginning of the year on a pension of £456 per annum.

THE Indian Church Gazette announces the death of the Rev. J. Welland, for many years secretary of the C.M.S. at Calcutta Mr. Welland was a powerful preacher, and in his death he is mourned by a large number both of Europeans and natives.

A DANGEROUS SHORT CUT.—Henry MacConoille, a private soldier of H.M.'s 90th Light Infantry, quartered at Calcutta, was killed on Christmas night by a fall from the upper story of the barracks. Some of the men living on the upper stories have a habit of saving the journey up and down stairs when wishing to visit adjoining rooms by climbing over the verandah railings, holding on by the spouts and projecting parts of the building. The deceased wished to visit the library at about eight o'clock, and, while he was crossing as above described, the waterspout which he was clinging to as a support gave way, owing to the brickwork having started.—Times of India.

SHIPPING.—A Calcutta paper says that the paucity of the arrival of ships in Calcutta during the present busy season has been unprecedented. There are so few ships in Calcutta that the superintendent has no work for even the permanent preventive officers. The extra or supernumerary officers have literally been doing nothing for the past fortnight.—Ibid.

THE VICEROY ON THE AFGHAN WAR.—At the annual State banquet to celebrate the assumption of the Imperial title, on Jan. 1, in proposing the health of the Queen, the Viceroy spoke at some length, and touchingly referred to the loss of Sir L. Cavagnari and his companions. While regarding it as natural, he affirmed that in some of its aspects the anxiety felt about recent affairs in Afghanisan was not altogether reasonable, in so far as it involved a disregard of reassuring facts or the advocacy of measures which, if adopted, would have augmented the dangers incidental to chance and diminished the securities available to skill. The Viceroy acknowledged the assistance received from his military colleagues, affirming that the problem they have had and still have to deal with regarding the operations in Afghanistan is disregarded or misunderstood by those who suppose that the success of British troops can be best secured or promoted by their employment in overwhelming numbers, citing in support the opinion of the Duke of Wellington on the former conditions of Afghan warfare, that a force operating in a country like Afghanistan must always be strictly limited in exact relation to its carefully ascertained means and the conditions of supply. The Viceroy referred to the completeness of the success recently achieved by General Roberts as showing the high military capacity and skill of that officer and the power of the small, well-equipped, and disciplined force to hold its own against, and eventually defeat, immensely superior numbers of irregular troops. He reiterated that the object of the operations was not the acquisition of territory, but firm foundations for the establishment of a durable peace for India in the future, and solid self-acting guarantees for the future good behaviour of India's neighbours. The Viceroy, in concluding, referred to the recent illness of the Queen.—Ibid.

THE ATTACK ON LORD LYTTON.—It is said that the Government of India has, through the Government of Bengal, called upon the commissioner of police for an explanation as to the reasons why De Sa had been allowed to discharge his revolver three times, as has since been ascertained to be the case, without attracting the attention of the police constables who were on duty on the spot. The occurrence took place not far from the Hooghly-bridge, where were drawn up in line a body of European constables, and both sides of Strand-road were lined with the native constabulary. It appeared to the Government rather strange that a madman should be allowed to fire so many shots without being at once arrested. Had it not been for Captain Rose and Sir Pomeroy Colley, one of whom had very narrowly escaped, as the whiz of the shot had passed very close, De Sa would have in all probability escaped. They did not see the person who fired, but alighted from their carriage and went in the direction where they saw the smoke. Even when they arrived on the spot they would not have known who the person was that had discharged the firearm but for a West Indian named Nelson, by profession a stevedore, who pointed him out to Captain Ross. It was the opinion of his Honour the Lieutenant Governor that the police had been guilty of a gross dereliction of duty, and the constables on the spot deserved to be punished for the apathy shown by them. The commissioner of police has submitted his explanation, from which it would appear that the constables had neither seen De Sa fire nor heard the reports, owing to the noise caused by the crowd of vehicles and the usua hubbub of the spectators. The spectators who had seen De Sa fire were panicstricken, and, either from fear or excitement, had made no attempt to arrest him. The attention of the police on all such occasions was wholly and entirely directed to what was passing before them, and to keep away the crowd so that the road was not obstructed. Even the spectators who were close to the man appeared to have been so very attentive in looking at the cortége that they had neither seen nor heard the shots. It is said that the mother of De Sa had been in the Calcutta Lunatic Asylum (not Allahabad) for about twenty years, and was discharged because the payment of the fee had been discontinued. She is now living with one of her sons, Mr. Henry De Sa, and is still a lunatic. We understand that the doctor under whose observation the prisoner has been kept believes him to be of unsound mind.—Englishman.

CALCUTTA FREIGHT MARKET.—On Dec. 31 the disengaged tonnage import was 5,665 tons. The closing quotations were:—London, via Canal: Rice or wheat, £3 2s. 6d.; jute, £3 10s.; linseed, £3 10s.; hides, £3 15s.; tea, £4; cotton, £3 15s.; indigo, £4 15s.; via Cape: Saltpetre, £2 12s. 6d.; others nominal. Liverpool, via Canal: Rice, £3 10s.; oil, £4; via Cape: Linseed, £3 3s. 9d.—Englishman.

MADRAS.

THE MADRAS LUNATIC ASYLUMS.—The Acting Surgeon General's report on the three lunatic asylums in this Presidency, states that the number of insane under treatment in Madras asylums in 1878-79 was 491, giving a ratio of 1·68 per 100,000 of the population under registration. In Bengal proper the corresponding rate in 1877 was 2·42. In Scotland, on the 1st January, 1878, the number of lunatics officially known to the commissioners was 247 per 100,000 of population. The corresponding figures for England are not known, but of pauper lunatics alone the ratio per 100,000 population in 1877 was 240. Nothing certain is known regarding the comparative frequency of insanity in India and Europe, but the great disparity in the rates given above indicates that only a tithe of the subjects of insanity in India is under official cognisance. It will be observed that the proportion of lunatics to population in asylums in Bengal is larger than in Madras, the ratio per 100,000 of population being 2·42 in the former and 1·68 in the latter Presidency. The recoveries last year, though less than in 1877-78, were above the average of the five preceding years, being 46·02, and the percentage of deaths to the daily average strength was 21·73. During the past three years the percentage of deaths has been very high as compared with that of previous years, and Dr. Oswald remarks that there is reason to believe that this increase was largely due to causes which have similarly influenced the death-rate of the population generally during those years, for in many cases the health of the lunatics on admission was found to have been broken down by previous hardships.—Madras Times.

FISH CURING OPERATIONS.—The Board of Revenue, in submitting the report for the half year ending last June to Government, remark:—"Comparison with the past shows that the fish-curing operations are progressing both in the quantity and the quality of the fish cured. In the past six months 7,309 maunds, in the past twelve months 18,400 maunds, say 676 tons, have been added to the wholesome food supply of the people. It is hoped that continued encouragement may lead to a continued growth and establishment of the trade. The exertions of the Tanjore salt deputy collector, P. Rajaratna Mudliar, are commendable. The board are aware how much depends, at the commencement of an enterprise like this, on the tact and energy of the local authorities. The returns from South Canara are blank. The board would desire an explanation of the reluctance to use the yard, and rely on the collector evincing an interest in the matter."—Ibid.

RELEASE OF PRISONERS.—A release of prisoners took place recently. The Governor, by the exercise of his powers of clemency, ordered the release of all such prisoners throughout the Presidency as were neither dacoits, highway robbers, burglars, nor murderers, who had completed three years of their sentence, or who were in the last year of the same; provided they bore good characters in their respective gaols. From the European prison in Ootacamund two men were discharged under this order, and from native prisons sixteen.—Ibid.

MULE BREEDING.—We understand that the mule-breeding establishment finds great difficulty in commending its usefulness to the native community. The natives are holding entirely aloof, and they say they do not see how the offspring of horses and donkeys can be so good as the pure breed of either. The difficulty has been met with before in other parts of India, and overcome by demonstrative experiments, wherein the entire expense of purchasing and keeping mares was borne by the Government. The scores of miserable "tats" and the hundreds of small donkeys to be seen on the hills, carrying burdens, lead us to hope that the experiment may be eventually successful.—Ibid.

THE WYNAAD PLANTERS' ASSOCIATION.—The Supreme Government has declined to interfere with the decision of the Madras Government relating to the extension of the Act for the prevention of coffee stealing to the low country. If the Supreme Government had granted the request of the planters a public slight would have been inflicted upon the Madras Government without good and sufficient cause. The planters should, if they found the Madras Government declined to extend the provisions of the Act to the low country, have addressed that Government again, reiterating all the arguments they had used on previous occasions, and embodying in their letter every scrap of additional information they possessed with regard to the robberies that take place in the low country. That the provisions of the Act should be extended few can be found to deny, for those who have any personal knowledge of the facts are well aware that frequent robberies of coffee take place on the roads that run from the foot of the ghaut to the coast ports. If the planters will only take the trouble to collect accurate information as to the number of the robberies that took place last year, and the quantity of coffee stolen, and send the facts to Government, they may rest assured the Madras Government will not turn a deaf ear to their prayer. Special legislation we abhor, but we are well aware such legislation was absolutely necessary to lead to the suppression of coffee stealing, which had grown into a profession, and, if sufficient cause can be shown, the planters must know that their last desire will be complied with. They have reason to rejoice that a resident engineer will be placed at Vythery with an efficient staff of overseers, and that the collector is anxious that planters should take up contracts for the repair of the roads in the district. This new line of policy should lead to the redress of one-half of their grievances. The money for the repairs of roads is to be found by the local funds board, and the planters themselves, by taking up the contracts, can see that every piece of it is expended as it ought to be. With good roads, the suppression of coffee stealing, and the prospect of good crops, we may hope that the planters will soon be in better spirits than they have been for a long time past, and will likewise be at peace with every official in the district.—Madras Times.

THE ARMS ACT.—In exercise of the power conferred by the Indian Arms Act, the Governor General in Council has sanctioned the exemption of residents in the French town and territory of Pondicherry, being Europeans, from the payment of import duty on their guns when holding passports from their own authorities (countersigned by the proper British magistrate) certifying that they are entitled to carry such arms for sporting purposes.

PUBLIC INSTRUCTION IN MYSOR.—In the Mysor public instruction report it is stated that the province did not, during the past year, altogether recover from the effects of the famine. This naturally told on the attendance in the lower classes of schools, and educational operations were also much retarded by a severe form of fever which was generally prevalent throughout the year. 131 candidates appeared for the matriculation, and thirty-eight for the first-in-arts examination, of which twenty-six and seventeen respectively were successful. This unfavourable result, which was also general in the Madras Presidency, is attributed to the character of the examination held, and not to any defect in the instruction given. There were under instruction in all the schools 30,636 boys and 3,742 girls, and the aggregate expenditure on education amounted to Rs.4,22,950.

HOMICIDE BY A CIVILIAN.—The Madras Mail much regrets to learn that Mr. T. J. Maltby, acting head assistant collector, Ganjam, has, while in a state of mental aberration, shot two natives, one of them fatally. He has been placed under proper restraint pending the receipt of instructions from the Government. Mr. Maltby entered the Madras Civil Service in 1867, and has served in the Chingleput, Trichinopoly, Godavery, and Ganjam Districts. Early in 1877 his health, which had for some time given him cause for uneasiness, compelled him to take furlough, and he remained away for two years, a large portion of which time he spent travelling about the United States of America.

BOMBAY.

THE BOMBAY PRESS.—The Lahore paper publishes the following paragraph:—"We are given to understand that the Bombay Gazette will change hands in the beginning of the new year. The present proprietor and editor of the paper, Mr. Maclean, retires and goes to England, being succeeded in both capacities by Mr. Grattan Geary. The latter gentleman has been known hitherto as the editor of the Times of India, which post he has very recently vacated. We are inclined to think the change will tell chiefly against the Times, though the ability and straightforward common sense and uncommon resolution which distinguish Mr. Maclean will be hard to replace for the Gazette."

WARM CLOTHING FOR THE CANDAHAR FORCES.—The commissary general, Bombay, makes the following report, dated Dec. 6, regarding the warm clothing for the troops and followers on the Candahar line:—"In returning your memorandum, No. 1,138 O.A., of 3rd instant, with accompaniment, I have the honour to report, for the information of his Excellency the Governor in Council, that the clothing required for the use of the British and native troops and followers on the Candahar line at Quetta, and onward, was as under, as the remaining articles of warm clothing for troops and followers were on hand, or procurable at Quetta and Candahar:—1,500 pairs of mittens; 1,500 jerseys; 9,600 caps, Balaclava; 450 long wadded coats, Turkey red, for guards; 500 pairs of putties; and that of the above—560 jerseys; 1,500 pairs of mittens; 1,974 red mirzais; 298 long wadded mirzais—have been despatched from Sukkur, but had not reached Quetta up to the last accounts. The balance—1,026 red mirzais; 152 long wadded mirzais; 940 jerseys; 9,600 Balaclava caps; 500 pairs putties—would be forwarded on from Jacobabad as soon as received. There left Bombay—1,026 red mirzais; 152 long wadded mirzais; 500 pairs of putties—Oct. 30; 4,078 jerseys, Nov. 22; 4,250 Balaclava caps, Dec. 4. The remainder of the Balaclava caps, now being landed from steamship Bokhara, will be despatched as soon as possible. No English clothing was in store here, and, under instructions received, the clothing as received from England was to be first applied to meet the requirements of the troops on the Khyber Kuram lines, and when these were satisfied the wants of the troops on the Candahar line were to be considered. It was not, therefore, possible to send the jerseys, mittens, &c., earlier. For the troops of the Bombay Brigade in the Bolan, the brigade under orders to assemble on the Sukkur Mooltan line, and for the transport, commissariat, and other army and regimental followers, the following supplies of warm clothing have been provided, and are now in store at Sukkur and Jacobabad, or in transit there, and indents from regiments and transport train are being met therefrom—4,000 blankets, Europe; 4.498 jerseys, 10,440 pairs of mittens, 300 pairs boots, English; 500 waterproof sheets made at Calcutta, 28,342 pairs warm socks, including 6,234 purchased at Karachi; 3,000 wadded mirzais, red Turkey, for troops; 9,400 wadded mirzais, Khakee, for followers; 9,400 warm pyjamas, pairs; 17,100 putties, pairs; 8,100 shoes, country, pairs; 2,000 boots, country, pairs; 2,904 boots, ammunition, country made, pairs; 750 long wadded coats, red, for guards; 8,627 blankets, country (in addition to 3,000 made available for Bombay followers from the clothing store at Quetta, small balances from last season at Sukkur and Karachi); 2,000 coolie suits, containing 2,000 pairs of pyjamas and 2,000 coats, warm; 3,400 poshteens. Balaclava caps and waterproof sheets for the Bombay troops, and waterproof sheets for followers, will be despatched to Sukkur as landed from the steamer bringing same from England."—Press Commissioner.

SENSE AND INSENSIBILITY.—In the discussion on the proposed memorial from the Bombay Chamber of Commerce on the Factory Bill we see that Mr. Hector succeeded in carrying resolutions to give the work-people in mills one hour for their meals in every working day of twelve hours, and one day of entire rest out of every seven. He mentioned, in support of this latter motion, the interesting fact that, in the mill with which he is connected, the experiment of working only six days in the week has been tried with the best results, the people employed doing their work so much better for the one day's rest that the outturn of the mill was quite as large as it had been when work was continued through all the seven days. A native gentleman objected to letting the operatives have an hour for their meals, as, he said, it only took him ten minutes to eat his dinner.—Englishman.

VILLAGE MUNSIFS.—A series of rules for regulating the procedure of village munsifs has been prescribed by the Governor of Bombay in Council, in accordance with the Deccan Ryots Act lately passed by the Supreme Legislative Council. One of the rules directs that when the village munsif has admitted a plaint he shall fix a convenient day, if possible, within seven days from its institution for the trial of the suit. He is also forthwith to send for the defendant and personally explain to him the nature of the claim, informing him of the day fixed for the trial, and requiring him to be present in person on that day, unless he admits the correctness of the claim and his own liability, in which case, of course, there would be no trial. Rule 12 prescribes that the village munsif shall examine the parties and their witnesses, if there are any, at the trial daily, and it will not be necessary for him to take down their evidence in writing or even make notes thereof. But if he does not do so he shall embody in his first order the substance of the evidence, together with the points in dispute, and his decision thereon specifying the amount awarded to the plaintiff. If his decision is in favour of the plaintiff, either wholly or in part, he may direct the defendant to pay the amount found due by instalments not extending over a longer period than twelve months. In no case, says another rule, shall he award more than seems to him, on a full consideration of all the circumstances and past history of the debt, to be justly and equitably due. No costs can be awarded. The munsif is entitled to hold his court in the village chowri.—Government Gazette.

THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—The following gentlemen have been elected as members of the committee for the year 1880:—Mr. G. A. Barnett (agent, G.I.P. Railway), Mr. O. Fiedler (Gaddum and Co.), Mr. J. G. Russell (Benn, Ashley, and Co.), Mr. R. Roberts (Owen and Okell), and Mr. James Hutton.

CHOLERA AT PUNA.—The late Ranee of Akulkote has died of cholera in the city of Puna. There have been many very virulent cases of cholera in the city, several of which have proved fatal. The present weather is trying, as the poor people are unable to protect themselves from the cold. Fever has also been very prevalent for some time in Puna city, and there have been many fatal cases.—Deccan Herald, Dec. 31.

RUTLAM.—We learn from our correspondent at Rutlam that the installation durbar was held on New Year's Day, Sir Henry Daly, General Forbes, and a large number of other officers being present. On the right hand of his Highness Generals Daly and Forbes and the officers were seated. Both the political agents, Colonel Martin, and Mir Shahimut Ali Khan Saheb, C.S.I., and the State jaghirdars occupied seats in order of their rank to the left. Interesting speeches were made by General Daly and the Raja Saheb. The chief presented a nuzurana of fifty-one gold mohurs for the Viceroy and Governor General, and in return received a khillut consisting of a necklace, sirpech, and twenty-one pieces of cloth. The raja and his guests afterwards drove to the Chandall Chowk to see the illuminations. A similar installation at Dewas, in the same part of India, has just taken place.—Times of India.

TROOPS FROM BURMA.—The Indian Government steamship Tenasserim, 1,760 tons, Capt. H. A. Street, arrived on Jan 2, from Rangoon Dec. 14, vid Madras Dec. 22, with the following military officers and troops :—Major and Mrs. Warren, and Lieut. Hillyar, 8-8th R.A., Capt. Richmond, Lieut. Staufield, and Lieut. Nash, 9-8th R.A., Lieut. Bernard, 44th Regiment, and 350 rank and file 48th Regiment. —Ibid.

ACCORDING to a Puna paper Major Daniell has been recommended by the Bombay Government for a C.S.I. as a reward for capturing Wassudew Bulwant Phadke.—Ibid.

THE FRERE COMPANY'S BUNDER.—We are informed that on Friday last the Collector of Bombay made his award of eight lakhs of rupees in Port Trust bonds, bearing interest at 4 per cent. per annum, for the Frere Land and Pier Company's bunder, taken under the Land Acquisition Act, and that the Port Trust took charge of the same.—Ibid.

REWARD OF GALLANTRY.—In recognition of the gallant services rendered by Ressaldar Hassan Khan, of the Biluch Guide Corps, in March last, in an affair with the Utman Khels in the Kudaina Pass, the Viceroy has conferred upon him the title of "Khan Bahadur" as a personal distinction.—Ibid.

THE MOONDWA RIOTERS.—Dr. Fraser, railway magistrate, delivered judgment in the case of the two European soldiers, Privates Frame and Elton, of H.M.'s 78th Highlanders, who were assaulted by natives on Nov. 23 in the Moondwa garden. The accused numbered six, and were arraigned on charges of rioting and using violence, and voluntarily causing grievous hurt, under sections 147 and 325, respectively, of the Indian Penal Code. His Worship was of opinion that the soldiers had committed no disturbance in the garden; and three of their comrades, who had left previous to the assault, testified to the fact. The complainants were attacked by a party of natives armed with sticks, and were finally overpowered and knocked down, Frame having his skull fractured and being otherwise bruised, Elton being wounded; while both were rendered insensible. The moanings of these two brought some men of the Light Cavalry to the spot, and the latter succeeded in making a few arrests. His Worship found the whole of the accused guilty on the charges laid against them, and ordered them to pay a fine of Rs.100 each, or in default to be rigorously imprisoned for six months; and further that they should each suffer rigorous imprisonment for two years, No. 1 alone being sentenced to simple imprisonment on account of his advanced age.—Ibid.

THE PRINCE'S DOCK.—A succinct official account of the great undertaking so happily concluded on New Year's Day has been prepared as follows :—After a discussion lasting over twenty years, Mr. Ormiston's project for a wet dock on the Elphinstone estate was sanctioned by the Secretary of State for India —the Right Hon. the Marquis of Salisbury—on July 18, 1875. The first stone was laid by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, with Masonic honours, on Nov. 11, 1875; his Excellency Sir Richard Temple, the Governor of Bombay, laid the last stone on April 10, 1879, and the dock opened for traffic on New Year's Day, 1880. The estimated cost of the dock and its appurtenances, including interest during construction, is Rs.76,00,000. The dock has an area of thirty acres of water; it is 1,460ft. long and 1,000ft. wide, with a jetty at one end 700ft. long and 240ft. wide. The length of the berthage in the dock is 6,049ft., and along the outer wall next the harbour 1,590ft. There are two entrances, one of 66ft. in width and one of 55ft. The gates and sluices are worked by hydraulic machines. A bridge 180ft. long spans both entrances. The sills of both entrances are laid 58·00 on Bombay datum which gives 22ft. at half tide, 25ft. at high water of ordinary neaps, 28ft. at ordinary springs, and 30ft. at high water extreme tides. The bottom of the dock has been excavated three feet under the sills. A substantial house has been erected for a pair of compound engines of 125 actual horse-power, by which all the machinery in the dock is worked. There are twenty movable hydraulic cranes for working cargo that can lift 30cwt. through a height of 60ft. At the head of the jetty a crane has been erected capable of raising 100 tons through a height of 40ft. A 5-ton hydraulic capstan has been erected at the head of the jetty for warping vessels into the dock, there are also two of 5 tons and two of 11 tons for warping vessels at the entrances. Seven close sheds have been erected on the wharf, each 120ft. wide, and 1,584ft. in length, besides one on the jetty 480ft. by 108ft., in all an area of 5½ acres. The Tulsi water is laid all round the wharf, and is available from numerous hydrants to supply drinking water and in case of fire. The dredger has compound engines of 300 indicated horse-power to remove the material dredged, and is attended by three steam hoppers, each with a capacity of 9,240 cubic feet, propelled by compound engines of 180 indicated horsepower. The contractors for the excavation and masonry were Messrs. Glover and Co. The hydraulic machinery, gates, &c., were supplied by Sir W. G. Armstrong and Co. The dredger was made by Messrs. J. and G. Rennie, and the hoppers by Messrs. John Elder and Co. The chairman of the Trust at the commencement of the works was Colonel Ballard, C.B., R.E., and at the completion Colonel Baker, R.E.; consulting engineer, Thomas Ormiston; resident engineer, George E. Ormiston; assistant engineer, A. G. B. Bedford; chief inspector, Thomas G. Mullen.—Times of India.

CEYLON.

THE Ceylon Times of 19th ult. contains the following :—

COFFEE EXPORTS.—Our advices from the coffee districts do not vary much from those previously received; there is a marked difference of yield not only in districts but on estates in the same district. On the whole, however, there can be no longer doubt that the season's yield will be smaller than for some years past. From Ouvah, however, the accounts of crop are very favourable, with excellent prospects for the ensuing year. To date our exports of coffee amount to 81,854cwt. as againt 103,717cwt. at the same period last year. A considerable quantity of ready coffee is delayed in Colombo godowns owing to the unusual scarcity of tonnage. It is expected that our exports by Dec. 31 will be about 110,000cwt. as compared with 200,000cwt. at the end of the previous year.

THE GAZETTE.—His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to make the following appointments, with effect from the 5th proximo :—W. J. S. Boake, Esq., to be police magistrate and coroner for the district of Colombo; F. J. de Livera, Esq., to be district judge, commissioner of requests, police magistrate, and coroner for the district of Negombo, and visitor of the Negombo Prison.

From the Ceylon Times of Dec. 25 :—

WEATHER.—There have been a few showers in the Northern Province, but the rainfall is, so far, inadequate for the requirements of the land under paddy cultivation. The valego crop, which requires but a moderate amount of moisture, will turn out well.

PEARL FISHERY.—Notice is given in the Gazette that a pearl fishery will take place at Silavatturai on or about March 1, 1880, and that the bank to be fished in the North West Cheval is estimated to contain oysters sufficient to employ 100 boats for twenty days, with average loads of 10,000 oysters each per day.

THE GAZETTE.—William Henry Jackson and Colville Eardley Wilmot, Esqs., having been appointed by the Secretary of State for the Colonies, to be writers on the civil establishment of the colony his Excellency the Governor has been pleased to direct that they be attached to the Colombo Kachcheri; and that Herbert White and John Herbert Fearnley Hamilton, Esqs., be attached as writers to the Candy Kachcheri; and William Rutherford Bogle Sanders, Esq., be attached to the Galle Kachcheri.

A NEW CHURCH.—Mr. Francis de Mell, sen., a wealthy merchant, known for his munificence and public spirit, has offered to bear the entire cost of a church at Koralawella, the foundation-stone of which was laid on Saturday, Dec 13, by Bishop Coplestone.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 22, 1880.

THE FINANCIAL PROSPECTS.

THE most capable and uncompromising critic of Indian budgets and expenditure is unquestionably Mr. Fawcett. He, however, gave a most convincing proof last session that, in his mind, the Indian finance does not afford a fair field for party debate. The progress of India belongs to no political party in England. A defeat or loss in the Indian Empire is not to be credited to productive capital by the governing or opposing side of the Legislature. Yet it may be accounted as an advantage derived from the hostile criticism to which the Indian policy of the Government has been remorselessly subjected that Hackney itself was selected by Mr. Stanhope to receive the cheering news of the improvement in Indian revenues, of which the formal statement is thus anticipated. The exposition at Hackney was, however, only an expansion, supported by facts and figures, elsewhere announced, of the statement made on Dec. 24 by the Financial Minister, Sir John Strachey, that the financial prospects generally were highly encouraging. The statistical accounts issued for the past quarter of the current financial year, and published in the Gazette of India, showed a steady advance in revenue and receipts and a corresponding decrease in ordinary expenditure. The predictions or assurances of coming or actual bankruptcy of the Empire of India, and of the soil of the country, are by no means supported by the satisfactory calculations which are so far justified by the known results. The Under Secretary of State could well rely on the known facts to disprove the charges of financial failure brought against his colleagues. But there is a much sounder basis for a higher self-gratulation in the fact that a year which, at first, threatened to partially repeat the scarcity and suffering of its two predecessors, has proved one of increasing prosperity for the people of India. There has recently been a good deal of paper controversy concerning the form of the Indian public accounts, but no form can either invent or hide an increase or falling off in those items of revenue which are the index to the growth or decay of the substantial wealth of the population; several of these items cannot furnish grounds for defending a Government to its friends; for they arise out of that increment of national abundance which is due to the harvests, and, though the rulers are to be felicitated on seasonable rainfall and bumper crops, they can hardly be given credit for them. One important item of increased revenue is, however, at once a mark of the improved condition of all parts of India, and may be availed of as a ground of praise to the Government which successfully carried through a great fiscal reform. The salt revenue is often attacked by some of our friends, though no one is bold enough to suggest a way of dispensing with it. The test by results, furnished by so much as we have hitherto heard of the salt returns of the current year, gives an eminently successful answer to the enemies of the salt reform. The income of the country shows a probable increase on the March estimates of nearly £300,000, and this is accompanied or caused by a considerable increase in the consumption in all districts. The injurious effects which were foretold as sure to follow in Madras do not seem to have resulted. Elsewhere we publish a notice of the fishcuring returns for the half-year ending last June. A comparison with the previous year shows that the fishcuring operations are progressing both in quantity and quality. This is a fact illustrative of the general statement as to the steady increase of consumption and revenue, and the framers of the change in the salt taxation will doubtless be able to furnish details from all parts to show that the general improvement is not marred by local hardship. Other proofs of general revival of prosperity appear in the increase of the land revenue, which is considered to be due to payments of arrears. It is to be hoped that the indulgence of years of famine has not been immediately succeeded by pressure upon the slowly recovering population on the part of over zealous officials. The first three months showed an increase of £196,000, and the Times estimate of six months adds about £150,000 to that amount. An increase also in excise and stamps, as well as in assessed taxes is shown. One important item cannot be regarded as other than a windfall. The proceeds of ten sales and nine months' pass duty brought the revenue from opium up to nearly 78 lakhs in excess of the estimates, so that the expectation of a gain of at least a million sterling is well founded. Thus in all we are enabled to accept the probable increment of the year's revenue as two-and-a-half millions, if not three, more than the estimated amount. Turning to the expenditure, this side also shows a substantial gain to the Exchequer, which is altogether outside of the control of the administration. It is true that we are constantly told, both in articles and pamphlets, that Government might, could, and should regulate the exchange so as to lessen the loss. But as yet there has been no plan which, in the opinion of financial experts, would do ought but mischief. Therefore the advance in silver, which has so much reduced the estimated loss on exchange, is to be placed alongside of the seasonable rainfall, a thing to be thankful for and not proud of. We may, in one sense, say the same of the reduction in the public works expenditure. The resolution so uncompromisingly carried out to reduce the outlay on public works is, as being needful, creditable to the Indian administration. To have cut off £600,000 of expenditure is a feat of retrenchment which is notable in the history as in the accounts of the year. It is impossible to avoid the reflection that the public works and the establishments suspended or reduced must either have been utter mistakes, or else useful both as giving employment and effecting improvements. We can hardly, in view of the latter, which most readers will agree to have been the case, rejoice greatly over the temporary gain. Economy of waste is a true source of advantage to private or public purses; retrenchment of useful and profitable works may be necessary according to circumstances, but is a proof of comparative poverty, not an item of increasing revenue. The increased expenditure necessitated by the frontier railways will, according to men's opinions, be regarded as a wasteful extravagance or as a needful and productive improvement. For our part we have on several occasions advocated the extension of railway communication to Candahar. The expenditure of two-and-a-half millions, which goes far to neutralise the gains of a prosperous year, will in time prove a profitable investment for English as well as for Indian trade; and on this head we may fairly congratulate the Government, that has not feared to undertake the long-neglected task of securing the North West frontier, on having a financial success to counterbalance the labours and anxieties of the political year. The heavy burden of relieving famine-stricken districts, which in former years has weighed so heavily, is removed. For that neither they nor their predecessors were responsible. Pessimists abound to charge our rule in India with the recurring results of the natural conditions of the country. Past neglect has, they say, intensified or permitted the evils that past precaution could have diverted or lessened. We believe that of the war expenditure, which will form a large item against the year's surplus, the neglect of a past succession of statesmen and rulers is the real cause. The outlay in Afghanistan was no more to be avoided by the British Government than the expenditure for famine relief. But history will lay the gravamen of its necessity at the door of those who suffered the evil to grow unchecked, and the danger to wax unregarded, until it became necessary to expend on war the accumulations of a year of plenty.

H.M.S. "EURYALUS."—A Reuter's telegram from Malta, dated Jan. 14, says :—Her Majesty's ironclad Téméraire has proceeded to Port Said for the purpose of convoying her Majesty's corvette Euryalus, the flag-ship of the East Indian station, now at that port, which has been ordered to Malta for repairs.

THE BANDA AND KIRWEE PRIZE MONEY.—An application was made in the action of Kinloch v. The Secretary of State for India in Council for an account of army prize trust funds, at Vice-Chancellor Hall's chambers on Friday, for an order to compel the Secretary of State for India in Council, who is the defendant, to put in an affidavit of the documents in his possession bearing on the case. The solicitor to the India-office resisted the application as involving immense labour, and also contended that the papers were privileged. Mr. Kinloch, the plaintiff, denied that the plea of privilege, which Sir C. Hall's judgment had already destroyed, could be in any shape sustained, and he affirmed that very little labour in collecting the documents, most of which were already printed, could be necessary; but that any extra labour, even it needlessly inflicted on the India-office, could not for a moment be weighed against the injury which any material delay in supplying the essential evidence might inflict on the prize claimants.

SIR PIERRE CAVAGNARI.—A meeting was held on Thursday last in the grammar school of Christ's Hospital to devise means of perpetuating the memory of Sir Pierre Cavagnari, who, when a boy, was a pupil at the school. Mr. C. N. Wilkinson occupied the chair, and various suggestions were made as to the form the memorial should take. A tablet was decided upon, and a subscription list opened, £60 being subscribed in the room.

THE NAWAB NAZIM'S CLAIMS.—The Pall Mall Gazette understands that the Government have decided to offer the Nawab Nazim of Bengal a sum of Rs.100,000 (equivalent to about £8,500 at the present rate of exchange) in satisfaction of his claims on the State, besides making provision for his family.

The Professor will be assisted by Pandit Syāmajī Krishna Varma. All who wish to attend are requested to call on the Pandit at 8, Broad-street, between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

NEW LINE OF STEAMERS TO BOMBAY.—The success which has attended the enterprising efforts of the Cunard Line in the Western part of the world has led them to direct their attention to the East, and it is expected that during the next few months a line of steamers belonging to Messrs. Burns and MacIver will be established between Liverpool and Bombay. The regular sailings have not yet been definitely settled, but the pioneer vessel will be the Batavia, a steamer which is well known on both the New York and Boston routes. She is a vessel of over 2,500 tons register, and is intended to leave the Mersey for Bombay on the 14th of next month.

DEATH OF MAJOR GENERAL SCUDAMORE, C.B.—We have to record the death of Major General Arthur Scudamore, C.B., which occurred at Darmstadt on Sunday, Jan. 11, aged sixty-three. He entered the army as cornet in May, 1835, and obtained his commission as lieutenant in February, 1838. He had seen considerable active service in India, and served with the 14th Light Dragoons when commanded by Lieut. Col. William Havelock, K.H. He served throughout the campaign of 1838-39 in Afghanistan, including the siege and capture of Ghuznee; also throughout the campaign of the Punjab in 1848-49, including the action of Ramnuggur (when he was wounded), the passage of the Chenab, battles of Chillianwallah and Goojerat, where he was dangerously wounded. He commanded the regiment during the campaign of 1858 in Central India, under Sir Hugh Rose, and was present at the siege and capture of Rahutghur, action of Baroda, relief of Saugor, capture of Gurrakota, commanded the detached force sent against Malthone, present at the siege and capture of Jhansi, and commanded the outposts during the investment; was present at the battle of Koouch and all the affairs during the advance on Calpee, including the action of Golowlie; also at the action of Morar and recapture of Gwalior and Jhansi districts. He was three times mentioned in despatches. For his gallant services in India he was promoted to the brevet rank of lieutenant colonel, and was made a Companion of the Order of the Bath. He had received the medal for Ghuznee; medal and two clasps for the Punjab campaign; and the medal and clasp for India, and was one of the general officers receiving a reward for distinguished or meritorious services. He commanded for some time the Brigade Depot, Exeter. His commissions bore date as follows:—Captain, 22nd October, 1847; major, 1st June, 1854; lieutenant colonel, 20th July, 1858; colonel, 9th November, 1862; and major general, November, 1875.

THE LATE SURGEON MAJOR PORTER.—Referring to the death of the late principal medical officer of the Cabul Field Force, the British Medical Journal says that since his arrival in India at the end of 1878 he has been constantly employed on service with the troops operating in Afghanistan, one of the most important duties which devolved on him being that of organising the hospital arrangements, in concert with an officer of the Quartermaster General's Department, for the return of the troops in successive detachments from Gandamak through the Khyber Passes to Peshawur. On the conclusion of the treaty of peace with the Ameer, Surgeon Major Porter received great praise from his military superiors for the energy and skill with which he accomplished this trying and difficult task. After the perpetration of the massacre of the British Embassy at Cabul, Surgeon Major Porter was suddenly ordered to proceed from Allahabad to join the headquarters of General Roberts at Ali Kheyl. Arriving there on Sept. 22, he found he had to organise the field hospitals, with the necessary transports, preparatory to a move of the force towards Cabul. He was now in the position of surgeon in charge of the divisional hospital; but on the first march of the force, on Sept. 27, when it was about ten miles on the road, an attack was made upon it by one of the hill tribes, and in this encounter Dr. Townsend, the principal medical officer of the division, was badly wounded in the face and compelled to retire from the field. The casualty left Surgeon Major Porter the senior medical officer, and from that date he has acted as principal medical officer of the Cabul Field Force; all the hospital arrangements for meeting the necessities arising from the various conflicts with the enemy in which the force was engaged from the time it fought its way into the city to Cabul to the last attack on the Sherpur cantonments, as well as the arrangements for the sanitary care of the troops, having devolved upon him. Both the official and private reports which have reached England from time to time have shown that, in all such matters, the professional recommendations of Surgeon Major Porter have been received with the greatest respect by the military authorities, and that they have been invariably acted upon whenever the means have been able to be found for putting them into execution. It may well be said, therefore, that the Cabul Field Force has "sustained a great public loss" in the death of Surgeon Major Porter, and it may be asserted with equal truth that in him the Army Medical Department has lost one of its ablest and most distinguished officers. The death of Surgeon Major Porter will be long mourned by a very large circle of warmly attached friends and admirers.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received on Wednesday, Jan. 14, at the Bank of England for Rs.40,00,000 in Government bills on India. The amounts allotted were :—To Calcutta Rs.27,49,000 and to Bombay Rs.2,51,000. Tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 8 1/16d. received about 15½ per cent. Compared with the previous week this price shows no alteration. Yesterday (Jan 21) tenders for Rs.45,00,000 were received. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, Rs.35,37,000, at an average rate of 1s. 8·276d.; and to Bombay, Rs.9,63,000, at an average rate of 1s. 8·250d. Tenders on both presidencies at 1s. 8 1/16d. will receive about 81 per cent.; all above, in full. Notwithstanding that the amount offered was nominally higher by Rs.5,00,000, the India Council have been able to sell the bills at ½ per cent. more than was obtained last week. On the face of it this is certainly a most satisfactory result, but we (Times) are inclined to suspect that speculation, aided by the extreme facility with which money can now be obtained, has been the chief, if not the sole, cause of the advance, and, in that case, the result is not so reassuring, for trade in India does not seem to be sufficiently active to legitimately use all the money which these weekly sales of bills will let loose. Next week 45 lakhs more are to be offered.

ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.—At the meeting on Jan. 19—Sir H. C. Rawlinson, president, in the chair—Professor Dowson read a paper "On a curious litigation between the Smartava Brahmans and the Lingayats, when two copper plates were produced," in which he stated that the Smartava Brahmans in the south of India have twelve maths or monastic establishments of high antiquity. The chiefs of these maths are held in high honour, and among the marks of their dignity is the privilege of being carried in a palki crosswise so as to sweep the road. These Brahmans are much troubled by the Lingayats, a dissentient sect some six or seven centuries old, who are very numerous in their neighbourhood. The chief of these Lingayats, to assert his own dignity, caused his palki to be thus carried, the result being riots and disturbances. At length the head of a Brahman math brought an action against the Lingayat for damages in compensation for the loss of the honour he deemed due to him, at the same time producing two copper plates dated in the 12th cent. A.D., and purporting to be grants of this privilege from a monarch of the time. The Brahman having lost his suit, appealed to her Majesty in Council, translations of the two copper plates being sent home with the appeal. As these, however, were unintelligible, the case was referred back to India; but though many years have passed no more has been heard of it. The impressions of the copper plates then sent were very indistinct, but Professor Dowson suggested that endeavours should be made to obtain more accurate copies, as the originals are certainly of some antiquity and contain many curious references. He added that there was reason for suspecting them to be forgeries, as there occurs on them the name of Madhava, a teacher who lived two centuries later than the date ascribed to them. Moreover the words rendered "cross-palki" do not bear this meaning.

MOYAR COFFEE COMPANY.—At an extraordinary general meeting, held on Monday, Jan. 12, at 34, Nicholas-lane, E.C., it was unanimously resolved to wind up the company voluntarily, for the purpose of transferring its estates, assets, and liabilities to a new company of the same name, but with enlarged powers, enabling it to acquire and deal with mining rights, and to sell or lease land on the properties through which the gold reefs run. It was elicited at the meeting that the directors, on their own responsibility and at their own expense, some time back secured the mining rights—a circumstance which met with the hearty approval of the shareholders, present. It now appears that all difficulties have been removed, and the value of the company's property must be considerably enhancedt The company possess nearly 3,000 acres in the district of Devalah. India, where there have been recent gold discoveries.

CEYLON COMPANY.—The adjourned general meeting was held on the 13th inst., at the offices, Palmerston-buildings. The directors announced that they had found it necessary to make calls on the proprietors. The first call would be made in two portions, one in February and one in August next. In the case of the former, £3 per share was to be called up from the preference shareholders, and 30s. per share from the others. The nominal value of these assessments would be £60,802. In the case of the August call the amounts were £2 and £1 respectively on the "A" and ordinary shares, and these would yield nominally £40,535. Thus a total of £101,337 was asked within the present year, and it was further proposed to call up similar sums in 1881 and 1882, or in 1881 alone, if circumstances should render it necessary. It was hoped that these calls would enable the directors to pay off all debentures falling due within the next three years. Mr. G. S. Simpson, the chairman, presided, and said they had prepared the report which the shareholders had received in consequence of the amendment carried at the last meeting. They were unanimous on every point of it; they earnestly recommended what it contained for their adoption, and they considered it desirable and necessary He was glad to say that by the last accounts the drought at Mauritius had ceased, and as to Ceylon, since the last meeting he had had the pleasure of conferring with gentlemen who had knowledge of the island, and who said that the company's prospects were favourable His predecessor (Mr. Lawford Acland) had resigned not only his office as chairman, but also his seat at the board. They had appointed Mr. C. J. Braine to fill the vacant seat at the board. He had also consented to an arrangement by which his remuneration as manager would be reduced, and they would save £200 a year in this way. The articles of association compelled them at present to have not less than seven directors or upwards, but they would ask hereafter for power to reduce the number, as vacancies arose, to five or upwards. The directors hoped that at Ceylon they might have in the future a part, at all events, of their capital doing good. That was only the half-yearly meeting. They had no accounts from Ceylon or Mauritius that could justify them in giving any further information than their last accounts. He then moved the adoption of the report of the 5th ult. as modified by the report of the 3rd inst. The motion having been seconded, Mr. R. Taylor thought that in view of the amount of the calls to be made the company was starting afresh, and that they should have fuller information, and know what the real value of their assets was. They had a paid-up capital of £370,000, and they had lost from £350,000 to £360,000 of that amount. They were, therefore, he said, bankrupts, and he thought the proper mode would be to wind up. The chairman pointed out that their capital was £750,000, including the unpaid capital. Mr. Taylor, continuing, moved an amendment to the effect that before sanctioning the calls an estimate should be made on the market value of the assets of the company and its actual financial condition, and that the meeting should be adjourned for eight weeks. Mr. Purdy seconded the amendment. The solicitor, Mr. Atlee (of the firm of Druce, Sons, and Jackson), who said he had been appointed only three days, stated the legal objections to the amendments, and suggested whether the following would not meet the views of the shareholders :—"That this meeting desires to impress on the directors the necessity of giving to the shareholders fuller information, and invites them to consider whether they could not do so at the next meeting of the company, and with this expression of opinion it receives and adopts the resolution." The resolution was unanimously carried, as amended by the solicitor, and the proceedings terminated.

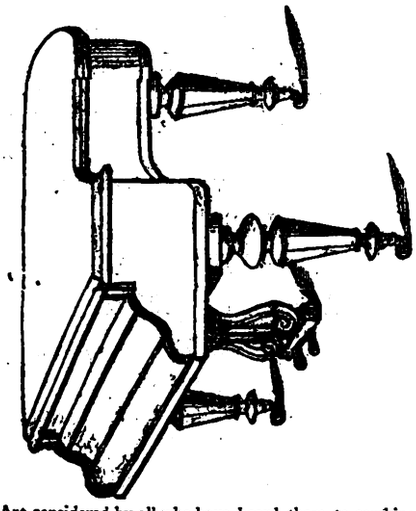
KIRKMAN AND SON,

ESTABLISHED NEARLY 150 YEARS.



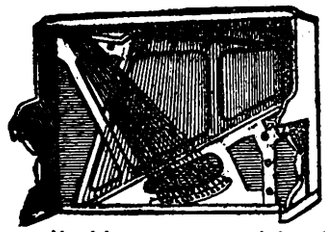
3 and 9, SOHO-SQUARE, LONDON, W.

KIRKMAN AND SON'S

PATENT STEEL FRAME

SHORT GRAND PIANOS,

SIX FEET LONG, IN ELEGANT ROSEWOOD OR WALNUT CASES,



Are considered by all who have heard them to combine a greater amount and resonance of tone, consistent with adaptability of size, shape, and elegance of appearance than those of any other manufacturer.

KIRKMAN AND SON'S

OVERSTRUNG

GRAND AND COTTAGE PIANOS

Is being considered by some competent judges that the German method of over or cross-stringing Pianos is attended with great advantage, Messrs. Kirkman and Son are now manufacturing both Grand and Cottage Pianos on this principle, the latter having the plain Sticker Action, which is not the case with Pianos of this class manufactured by other makers; in fact, the extreme simplicity of the action used by Messrs. Kirkman and Son in all their Pianos render them eminently suitable for exportation to the Colonies, where skilled workmen are few and far between All useless checks and complications are carefully avoided, thus enabling any tuner, with however superficial a knowledge of the business, to regulate them or repair any damage they may sustain.

KIRKMAN AND SON

Have a reputation extending over nearly a Century and a-Half.

There are now in the possession of the house Harpsichords and Virginals dated 1758 and 1778, manufactured by Jacobus and Abraham Kirckman.

The present members of the firm beg to call the attention of shipppers and exporters to the fact that in ordering of this house they are dealing with a firm who manufacture on principles derived from experience of this almost unprecedented length.

KIRKMAN AND SON

Have at present a Fine Selection at their Extensive Show Rooms in Soho-square.

NO MORE CHICORY IN YOUR COFFEE!!!

MOCHARA, CAFE DE SANTÉ.

MOCHARA, the pure produce of finest ripe figs, roasted and powdered, known as "COFFEE OF HEALTH," has long been used in the East as a supplement for mixing with Coffee.
MOCHARA imparts to Coffee that beautiful dark brown, yet transparent, colour, mellow flavour, and rich body so much admired in French Coffee.
MOCHARA neutralises the heating properties of Coffee, and is recommended by the Faculty as a remedy against indigestion, &c., (if used in larger proportions), the sanative properties of figs being well known.
MOCHARA, to improve even the best Colonial Coffee, which is empty and watery without it, may be mixed to the extent of 10 to 20 per cent. to 1lb. of pure Coffee, according to taste. For invalids, nervous persons, and children, from 25 to 50 per cent., with MILK FREELY used. Condensed milk preferable where good country milk or cream cannot be had.
MOCHARA, if well stored and kept dry, the air being excluded, will keep any length of time—at least, for some years.
MOCHARA is sold by Grocers and Chemists in 1lb. tins, at 1s. per lb. retail. Wholesale in 28lb. tins, and in barrels of 2 to 4 cwt. Half-pound Sample Tins sent for 10d. free by post.

THE MOCHARA COFFEE COMPANY, 60a, Watling-street, E.C., London.

 MOCHARA IS WARRANTED FREE FROM CHICORY.

PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators; also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates

Her Majesty's Representative the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

Says page 13:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheik, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 29, 1880.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Jan. 10; Madras and Allahabad, Jan. 8; Calcutta, Jan. 7.

RAIN has fallen and done much good in parts of Madras, over the whole of the Punjab, and in parts of the North West, Oudh, and Rajputana. Elsewhere rain is wanted for the spring crops, which, however, promise well. The winter harvest has been good everywhere. Prices have fallen. The public health continues to improve.

THERE is little definite news from Cabul; the telegrams chiefly quoting reports, among others, that efforts are being made to negotiate with Abdulrahman Khan. The following are the most important statements:—

"Deputy Surgeon General Porter was buried on the 11th January. Dr. Keith died of pneumonia on the 13th. There have been several fatal cases both among Europeans and natives. The 10th, 12th, and 14th Bengal Cavalry are returning to India to repair the wear and tear of the campaign, which has been very severe on the cavalry arm. The line of communications has been rearranged. The reserve division takes all the posts and duties as far as Fort Daka, relieving the 2nd Division to that extent. This and the addition of the 25th Borderers to General Bright's Division enables two small movable columns of 1,500 rifles and two squadrons to be formed at Jellalabad and Gandamak without unduly weakening the posts. The following is said to be the disposition of troops to be made along the Khyber line:—Headquarters 3rd Brigade 3rd Division to Lundi Kotal, relieving headquarters 3rd Brigade 2nd Division, which moves to Jellalabad; 2nd Brigade 3rd Division to Jamrud; all posts up to Daka to be held by the 3rd Division. The 25th Foot and 30th Punjab Native Infantry have marched for Jellalabad. Reinforcements are being pushed on from Bombay, with the object, it is believed, of relieving the division now stationed at Candahar. In addition to the troops already mentioned, the 7th Fusiliers, 66th Foot, and two batteries have been ordered to embark for Karachi, and it is stated that two batteries which recently arrived at Bombay from Burma, en route for England, have been stopped and will be sent to the front. It is reported, apparently on good authority, that Mr. Lepel Griffin, secretary to the Punjab Government, has been appointed chief political officer for Northern and Eastern Afghanistan, and that he starts for Cabul immediately. Daoud Shah, ex-commander in chief of the Afghan Army, has arrived in Calcutta. He drives about daily, and is said to have expressed himself highly pleased with the Zoological Gardens and other sights of the capital. Vitakri, the most unpopular and unhealthy station on the new frontier, has been at last definitely abandoned, and the last troops there have been removed to Dera Ghazi Khan. A movable column under Colonel Boisragon was to start on Tuesday from Jellalabad into the Lughman Valley, and after exploring the valley was to return to Jellalabad by Jagdalak and Gandamak. This valley is under the influence of Asmutullah Khan, who harassed our communications at Jagdalak during the late pressure put upon us at Cabul, and the presence of our troops in Lughman will have a good effect. The Hissarak Ghilzai chiefs near Gandamak are still standing aloof, but it is probable that if our operations in the Lughman have the effect of permanently blockading Asmutullah in his mountain retreat at Kashmun they will come in."

THE Bombay correspondent of the Standard telegraphs the following:—

"It is stated that General Haines, the Commander in Chief, will personally command the campaign in the spring. The Army Corps of the Bombay Army starting from Candahar will be under the command of General Phayre. It is generally believed that the division will advance to Herat, and that that city will be handed over to Persia. The Bengal troops now at Candahar under General Stewart will, it is believed, march vid Ghuznee to Cabul. All officers of the Cabul Division absent on leave are ordered to rejoin on the 15th of March, when renewed operations throughout Afghanistan will commence. The Bombay Corps consists of E and D Batteries of B Brigade Royal Horse Artillery, C and F Batteries 2nd Brigade Royal Artillery; the 2nd Battalion 7th Fusiliers, the 66th, the 2nd Battalion 11th, the 2nd Battalion 15th, the 4th Battalion Rifle Brigade, the Puna Horse, the 3rd Light Cavalry, the 1st and 2nd Sind Horse, and one other cavalry regiment, not as yet definitely named, and the 3rd, 5th, 9th, 10th, 16th, 23rd, 24th, and 28th Native Infantry. Sir Richard Temple starts at once from Bombay with Col. Sandeman. The Governor has just started a public subscription for the Duchess of Marlborough's Relief Fund."

THE period of service of Lieut. General Sir Francis Roberts, V.C., K.C.B., commanding the Cabul Field Force, as quartermaster general of the Indian Army, expires on the 31st instant. General Roberts will not return to his former duties, but it is not thought advisable to provide a successor pending the issue of the report of the committee sitting at Simla on the subject of Indian army organisation.

A REUTER'S telegram of yesterday states that a report has reached Cabul of the death of Mahomed Jan, but it is at present unconfirmed. General Roberts visited Lataband on the 26th inst. Orders have been given to provision all posts for one month. Another attack from the tribes is expected about Feb. 24. This shows that the Intelligence Department at least is active, but it is thoughtful of the tribesmen to give such precise notice.

ACCORDING to a Reuter's telegram from Calcutta, the Nagas made a raid on the night of the 27th upon the Balahhun Tea Garden in Cachar, killing the manager of the garden and burning down the houses on the estate. They afterwards proceeded to the Dicksea Garden.

THE Times correspondent telegraphs from Calcutta that Sir Andrew Clarke, who is about to leave India, has been entertained at dinner by the officers of the Royal Engineers. Replying to the toast of his health, he alluded to the peculiar position of the members of the Indian Government in being obliged to sink all individuality and to act only as a homogeneous body. He then went on to say that of all that has been done by the Public Works Department during his term of office nothing gave him greater satisfaction than the service that department had rendered towards the prevention and mitigation of famine.

THE Secretary of State for War, on the recommendation of the Director General of the Army Medical Department, has consented to allow Surgeon General J. H. Kerr-Innes, C.B., to retain his appointment as principal medical officer of the Army of India beyond the period when retirement is rendered compulsory. Mr. Innes attained the age of sixty years on Tuesday last, and should, therefore, at once retire; but his exceptional ability has brought him so frequently to notice that it is considered for the good of the service that he should be retained.

THE Raja of Nabha has offered the sum of a lakh of rupees as a free gift to the Government in aid of the expenses of the Cabul campaign. This patriotic spirit is spreading; and similar offers are being made from all classes of native society.

A REUTER'S telegram states that intelligence received at Berlin from St. Petersburg gives an account of the attack made by the Tekke Turcomans on the 7th inst. on a large transport escorted by several hundred Russian troops on the road between Tchikislar and Chatte. The transport was cut off and captured by the Tekkes, the Russians retreating to Tchikislar. This is the only foundation for the report of the capture of Tchikislar, which was perfectly safe according to the last advices.

THE Queen has been pleased to approve the appointment of Sir William C. F. Robinson, K.C.M.G., Governor of the Straits Settlements, whose health requires a change of climate, to be Governor of Western Australia, in the place of Major General Sir Harry Ord, R.E., K.C.M.G., C.B., who has resigned that government, having completed the term for which he was appointed.

THE Persian Government has notified officially that, in consequence of threatened scarcity, the exportation of all kinds of provisions from every part of Persia is interdicted from Jan. 8, 1880.

THE Secretary of State has expressed his approval of the general scope and object of the Tenancy and Land Revenue Bills for the Central Provinces as revised in the Legislative Department. His lordship considers that the bills are likely to be exceedingly beneficial to the provinces concerned.

THE Press Commissioner gives the facts regarding the ammunition with the Cabul force as follow:—On the 30th December, after his constant conflicts with the enemy for fourteen days, General Roberts had with his own force 380 rounds of Martini-Henri and 307 rounds Snider ammunition per rifle. He has now indented for forty-two and 113 rounds for each arm respectively. At the same time he had 306 rounds per 9-pounder gun, and 300 rounds per 7-pounder gun, and has indented for seventy and eighty-one rounds for each gun respectively. General Gough, who moved light, had on the same date 120 rounds per gun, and 218 Martini and 208 Snider ammunition per rifle.

IN the Legislative Council the Religious Congregations Bill was passed on the 9th inst. Mr. Stokes obtained leave to introduce a bill to amend the Bombay Civil Courts Act, 1869. Mr. Thompson introduced the bill to provide for the survey and demarcation of land in British Burma. The select committee's report on the bill to amend the law relating to district cesses and rural police in British Burma was presented.

THE appointment of Mr. Purdon Clarke to the charge of the Indian Museum ensures the success of the new and, we hope, enlarged institution as regards the technical interests of India. His Persian experience has given him an intimate knowledge of Oriental art. Dr. Birdwood Smith, as professional referee, will render good service to the Science and Art Department in their development of a great and attractive Indian Museum, which will be watched with jealous eyes. For the due reception of the official reference collection at Kew a sum of £2,000 has been granted, and a further sum of £400 a year has been allowed for contingent expenses, including the continued employment of Dr. M. C. Cooke as cryptogamist, as importance is attached to his researches in connection with the fungoid disease of the coffee plant. Whenever he may cease to be employed at Kew the annual sum granted will be reduced to £200, which will then be the only charge borne by India on account of the museum.

A MORNING paper states that the board of directors of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, who have taken an active part in seeking the remission of the duties on cotton goods exported from this country to India, had the subject under discussion at a meeting yesterday. Not being fully satisfied with the partial concession which has been made, they determined that Lord Cranbrook, the Indian Secretary, shall be solicited to receive a deputation from the chamber next week in order to confer with him on the subject. This seems like applying the principle of cotton packing by means of a screw press.

IT is stated by our Bombay contemporary that letters in the Australian journals show that Major Clementi, the Indian Commissioner at the Sydney Exhibition, has been treated with grave discourtesy by the executive, and that the Indian Court has been almost ignored. This needs explanation, and that speedily, in view of the efforts now being made to represent India worthily at the Melbourne Exhibition.

THE Bombay Gazette has changed hands, but it has not changed its principles in regard to the long-delayed Factory Act. Want of space precluded our previous mention of a memorial addressed to the Government of India by a large number of the native inhabitants of the city, who are eye-witnesses, and appeal to the ruling powers for an amelioration of a state of things described as follows:—

"Your memorialists are eye-witnesses to the sufferings of the poorer classes, more especially young women and children of tender age, employed in the numerous mills in Bombay. While they rejoice to see the increase in the number of mills and factories in the country they cannot be blind to the fact that utter disregard is manifested by the millowners to the health and comfort of the multitude of women and young children who are obliged to work from five in the morning till seven in the evening, with but half an hour's intermission in the middle of the day. It is a pitiful sight to see these poor people rise at four o'clock in the morning, prepare a scanty breakfast, swallow it down hurriedly, and run while it is yet dark and dusky to the mills, which are in many instances situated one, two, and, in some instances, three miles from their abodes. Children of very tender age, both male and female, are actually dragged out of their beds very early in the morning at all seasons of the year, and beaten by their relatives to attend to their duty in the mills. It is equally pitiful to see these poor, helpless creatures return home very late in the evening. All their marketing is done under cover of the night, and then later on the grinding, and then the cooking. It is not before eleven in the night that most of the members of the working classes retire to rest. Their night is turned into day. They have no time to enjoy home comforts, and no time even to breathe the free and fresh air which a gracious Providence has given to mankind. And this must go on from week to week and from month to month with the exception of a few holidays and one Sunday in a fortnight, and even then the hands are required to work for several hours to clean the machinery," &c.

We heartily endorse the words of our contemporary, and trust no unnecessary delay will occur in passing the Factory Labour Bill into law.

THE Crown Colony of Ceylon enjoys good credit. The 4 per cent. loan of £700,000 was subscribed for seven times over within an hour and a-half. The list opened at 10 a.m. yesterday and closed at 11.30. Applicants will get about one seventh of their tenders.

THE annual cost of the Bombay Survey Department, inclusive of Sind and of the amount expended on the survey of native States, is now over 5½ lakhs of rupees. This is considered a heavy charge which it is desirable to reduce. The general progress report for 1878 has been submitted to the Secretary of State, and shows that the results of the year compare not unfavourably, in respect both to work done and its cost, with those of 1876-77, and show, in the Secretary of State's opinion, that the department has been supervised with care by Col. Anderson. The survey operations were to some extent impeded by the absence on famine duty of some officers and other causes. In the Deccan and South Mahratta Country Survey Department much has been done in establishing uniformity of procedure; greater economy in working has thus been secured, and still further improvement in the future is looked for. In Sind considerable difficulties were met with, and it is considered evident that survey and settlement operations in that province demand constant and vigilant attention.

IN the programme of the Easter course of lectures at the Royal United Service Institution there is set down for Friday, March 19, "From Bamean to Soumiani Bay," by Major General Sir F. J. Goldsmid, K.C.S.I., C.B.

"HERAT" will be the subject brought before the Indian section of the Society of Arts to-morrow evening, when Col. G. B. Malleson, C.S.I., will read a paper on that topic, and an interesting discussion may be expected. The chair will be taken by Admiral Jasper Selwyn.

WE have received a pamphlet entitled "A Proposal for re-establishing and maintaining the value and position of silver." The title excited false hopes. Mr. L. C. Probyn's panacea turned out to be the "practical abolition of the half-sovereign." He admits the "fancied inconvenience," but "it might be obviated by the issue of a ten-shilling paper note!" He points out that "with silver at 52d. an ounce worn half-crowns can be made of silver of the proper standard for a trifle over 1s. 9d." He had better try it.

DURING the present year ninety officers of the Staff Corps and cavalry and infantry of the Indian Army will be permitted to retire from the service, receiving, in addition to the pension to which they may be entitled by length of service under existing regulations, not exceeding the full-pay pension of a colonel (£456 5s. per annum), an annuity representing the estimated value of their prospective claim to the colonel's allowance, or its capitalised value, as they may prefer. The offer is restricted to substantive lieutenant colonels who shall have completed twenty-eight years' service from the date of first commission, on or before the date from which they apply to retire, who may either, first, have been appointed to one of the staff corps on or before Sept. 12, 1866, and can claim the colonel's allowance under the provisions of G.G.O. No. 808 of Sept. 28, 1866; or, secondly, may be entitled, under G.O.G.G. of Sept. 12, 1862, to the colonel's allowance after twelve years' service in the rank of lieutenant colonel. The number allowed to retire under these conditions will be distributed as follows:—For Bombay 20, Bengal 40, and Madras 30. In the event of the whole of the retirements allotted to a particular presidency not being taken up in that presidency, those remaining will be distributed in such manner as may be determined by the Government of India. Officers wishing to retire under the terms of this order must, whether in or out of India, submit their applications to the office of the adjutant general of their respective presidencies, naming such prospective dates for their retirements as will admit of the receipt of their applications by the adjutant general on or before the date named, such date not to be earlier than April 1, 1880. Officers retiring under these arrangements will forego both the good-service pension, it they are in receipt thereof, and all claim to bonus compensation under the terms of the despatch of August 8, 1866, No. 160. Applicants to retire will find full information in the Gazette of India of Jan. 10, together with a table showing the rates at which the expectation of the colonel's allowance will be calculated in carrying the order into effect in the case of officers of various ages and service.

THE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

UNDER instructions from the Secretary of State a number of changes have been made in the organisation of the medical administrative staff for the army in India. From the 31st March both the British and the Indian Medical Departments will form one department for the medical administration of the army in the three presidencies. The establishment for the Bengal army is to consist of one surgeon general, Army Medical Department, one secretary to surgeon general, Army Medical Department, and one secretary to surgeon general, Indian Medical Department. These will be at headquarters. The statistical duties for the army, British and native, will be performed by the statistical officer attached to the Sanitary Commission with the Government of India. Each of the eleven circles of medical superintendence will be held by a deputy surgeon general. For the Madras army there will be at headquarters one surgeon general, Army Medical Department, and 1 secretary to surgeon general, Indian Medical Department, each of the six circles of medical superintendence being held, as in the case of Bengal and Bombay, by a deputy surgeon general. For the Bombay as for the Madras army there will be at headquarters a surgeon general, Army Medical Department, and a secretaty to surgeon general, Indian Medical Department. The four circles of medical superintendence will be distributed as follows, each being held by a deputy surgeon general:—Presidency district, Belgaum, and Aden, 1, I.M.D.; Puna Division, 1, A.M.D.; Northern Division and Mhow Division, 1, A.M.D.; Sind District, 1, I.M.D.

With the exceptions of the deputy surgeons general of the Eastern Frontier District, the British Burma Division, the Punjab Frontier Force, and the Sind District, all the above officers will be relieved from any civil administrative duties they may have hitherto performed. After making provision for the civil medical administration of the remaining provinces of British India, the establishment for which will be duly notified in the proper department, there will remain, below the rank of surgeon general, in excess of the establishment to be maintained for all duties—

ARMY MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.—Two deputy surgeons general, three superintending surgeons major, two secretaries to surgeons major, one statistical officer to surgeon general.

INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.—Six deputy surgeons general.

Orders have been already issued by her Majesty's Government for the withdrawal of the surplus administrative officers of the Army Medical Department. With a view to provide for the retirement, on favourable terms, of the surplus officers of the Indian Medical Service, the Governor General in Council offers to the surgeons general and the deputy surgeons general of the three armies their retirement on the extra pension of their grade, with an honorary step of rank, notwithstanding that they may not have completed the qualifying service for these pensions. The number of retirements in each army will be restricted to two. The option of retirement will be given in order of seniority; but applications to retire cannot be accepted after March 1.

THE ACCIDENT TO THE CARABINEERS.

THE following fuller particulars of the accident by which five men of the Carabineers were drowned while crossing a ford in the Cabul River, on the 5th inst., are supplied by a correspondent of the Allahabad journal at Jellalabad. A reconnoitring party, consisting of seventy-five sabres of the Carabineers, and seventy-five sabres of the 3rd Bengal Cavalry, under the command of Major Cracroft, of the 3rd Bengal Cavalry, and accompanied by Major Boyes, assistant adjutant general, Capt. Dutton, assistant quartermaster general, and Capt. Warburton, political officer, left Jellalabad in the morning to examine the country towards the Lughman Valley on the left bank of the Cabul River, which was crossed at the ford opposite the fort at Jellalabad. The party, having seen all that was necessary, returned, arriving about 1 p.m. at the Daranta ford, some seven miles west of Jellalabad city, which had to be examined in view of future operations. The ford was pointed out, and was seen to be perfectly easy, as natives were crossing it on foot; it lay in a straight line some thirty or forty yards above a rapid. After a few minutes' halt the party proceeded, headed by the nephew of Sirdar Khalik Khan, and led by Major Cracroft. The Carabineers followed, and in some way, as yet unexplained, five men, who were about the centre of the second troop, left the line of the ford and fell over the rapid into deep water below, where they sank. One horse also was lost, the remaining four reaching the bank. A court of inquiry has been assembled to investigate the particulars. A later message states:—The following are the names of the men who were lost:—Corporal Eaves and Privates Fraiars and Salter, C Troop; Private Woods, A Troop; and Private Stonecliffe, F Troop. Search is being made for their bodies, but as yet without success.—Bombay Gazette.

THE ACTION IN THE CHARDEH VALLEY.

THE four Horse Artillery guns, under Major Smith Wyndham, which had been left behind at Kila Afshar with two squadrons of cavalry, were ordered to move in the morning along the Argandeh road to rejoin the infantry, and they started, with this object in view, under the command of Colonel Gordon, R.A. Brigadier Massey, with another squadron of the 9th Lancers from Sherpur, overtook them soon after starting, and took command of the whole. He had then as escort to the guns two squadrons of the 9th Lancers, under Lieut. Colonel Cleland, and one squadron of the 14th Bengal Lancers, under Captain Neville—in all between 250 and 300 lances. After marching five or six miles from Kila Afshar General Massey saw the villages near the foot of the hills full of armed men, and his guns opened fire upon them. The country about, like all the Chardeh Valley, was a splendid "infantry country," the plain being intersected by deep watercourses, fringed with closely-set willows which would check any cavalry. After a few shells had been thrown the enemy showed themselves in full force and advanced in skirmishing order upon the guns and cavalry. The line of advance was fully two miles in extent, and of good formation. There were about 4,000 men thus extended in the shape of a crescent, and in rear of them was an irregular body, numbering 6,000 more. Thus Mahomed Jan's force was found to be 10,000 strong, instead of 5,000. It was admirably led, and boasted thirty or forty standards, mostly common red, white, or green cloth, floating at the end of a rude staff twelve or thirteen feet long. Though the shells from the four guns were pitched into the thick of the enemy no effect was produced in the way of breaking the line of advance. It never wavered, but came steadily on; and as General Massey had no infantry with him he was obliged to retire. This was most difficult work; the guns could only be got by much care and steady driving off the watercourses, and such delay took place that the enemy got dangerously near. Their bullets at 1,500 yards fell among the cavalry, showing that they were armed with Sniders and Enfields; and to save the guns it was seen that the Lancers would have to charge. While the artillery was thus in action, Sir F. Roberts and staff, with Sir Michael Kennedy and party, joined General Massey, having ridden out from Sherpur to watch the movements of the brigade. The fire from the steadily-advancing line of the enemy was well sustained, and to check their forward movement the cavalry were ordered to charge. 300 men against 10,000 were odds that could scarcely be expected to turn in our favour; and, as the ground was all against the cavalry, the Lancers had no option but to risk a heavy fire in the hope of saving the guns. The squadrons disappeared in a cloud of dust as they headed for the masses of the enemy, and nothing could be seen for a few moments of the fight. Then riderless horses came galloping back, followed by scattered parties of troopers and sowars, evidently quite out of hand. They had been received with a terrific fire which killed many horses and men; and, upon trying to force their way through the enemy, had been surrounded, and their progress blocked by sheer weight of numbers. Men and horses went down in the melée, and, once down, there was but a faint chance of being rescued. In one or two instances, however, men were dragged from under their dead horses, mounted on others, and got well away out of the ruck. Even among Sir F. Roberts's party watching the fight bullets fell rapidly, killing three or four horses under their riders and wounding others. When the dust cleared away it was seen that the cavalry charge had made no impression upon the enemy, who were still advancing steadily across the fields, waving their knives and tulwars, and carrying their banners more proudly than ever. Mounted men were galloping about from end to end of their line, directing their movements and keeping them well together. The fire from their Sniders and Enfields was deliberate and well directed; and though the wing of any of our English regiments would with their Martinis have checked them in a few minutes the broken ranks of the cavalry could not hope to stand against them. The two squadrons of the 9th Lancers had suffered terribly in the charge—sixteen of their troopers, with two officers, Lieuts. Hearsey and Ricardo, had been left on the ground, dead; their colonel had come out badly wounded by a sword-cut and a shot through the side; Lieutenant Stewart Mackenzie had been disabled by his horse rolling over him; and seven troopers had received wounds more or less severe. With this loss of officers it was not surprising that the troopers got out of hand and continued their course across country even when out of fire. The "rally" was sounded again and again, but, with no officers visible, the men would not answer to the "call." Colonel Macgregor (chief of the staff) rallied a few, and some of the officers of Sir Michael Kennedy's party did good service in checking others and reforming them. The squadron of the 14th Bengal Lancers had lost but one officer, Lieutenant Forbes, whose body is still missing, and two sowars wounded, and were able still to keep between the guns and the enemy, now only 1,000 yards off. A second charge of this squadron and the troopers of the 4th Lancers who had been collected was made in a half-hearted way, the country being heart-breaking for horses, and the enemy swarming behind every tree and the bends of the higher water channels. By this time the guns were in difficulties; and one stuck firmly in a watercourse, Lieutenant Hardy trying vainly to drag it out with such horses as had got over. This was found to be beyond the strength of the horses, already worn out by the severe work of the morning; and as the enemy were closing around on both sides, 800 or 1,000 yards away, the gun was spiked and abandoned. Lieutenant Hardy was killed by a shot through the head while near this gun. The remaining guns had been got 400 or 500 yards further on to a village, but were stopped by a channel deeper and steeper than any yet crossed. Guns, men and horses floundered into this, and the guns at least would not come out again: they also were spiked and left in the water and mud, and drivers and gunners moved off with the cavalry, while the long line of the enemy came straight on, passed through the village, shrieking and waving their knives, and put their faces towards the kotal which leads from the Chardeh Valley to the western gate of our cantonments.—Times of India.

IRRIGATION IN AJMIR AND MHAIRWARA.

A RECENT Gazette of India contained a Government resolution on the progress and revenue reports of irrigation works in Rajputana for 1874-5 to 1876-7, which have been compiled according to the rules approved in the latter year. The arrangements for storing water in Ajmir and Mhairwara are of vital importance to the country; there is little or no water in the rivers except in the rainy season, and no permanent supply in the wells. All is dependent on the rainfall, which is precarious and generally small. The necessity for retention of the rainfall by artificial means is and was very great, and the construction of embankments dates from an early period, the oldest, or Bisalaga tank, being believed to date from 1050 A.D., but all but four or five of the old embankments had fallen into ruin before 1818, and the revival of irrigation in these tracts has been under British rule. The gross area of Ajmir and Mhairwara in 1873-4 was 2,753 square miles, of which 1,238 yielded revenue; 235 square miles were held on rent from jaghirs, and 1,280 on feudal tenure. Of the Government area 171,416 acres were cultivated, 139,898 were uncultivated, and 448,749 were barren. Of the cultivated area, 33,488 acres were dependent on wells, 18,461 were irrigated from tanks, 16,438 were in the beds of tanks and cultivated for the spring crop (nearly all the tanks being dry in March), and 103,029 acres were dependent on the rainfall. Existing wells numbered 13,061, of which 3,001 were disused, and 10,060 irrigated an average of thirty-three acres each. Up to the close of the period dealt with, 621 tanks were registered, of which 458 were constructed through the exertions of Col. Dixon before 1869; 159 have been constructed by the villagers, and the Public Works Department, since 1869, have restored the old Rajosi tank and made three other new ones, the four being calculated to irrigate nearly 7,000 acres. The advantages derived from the tanks besides direct irrigation are the elevation of spring levels and the increasing number of wells, which latter seem to outweigh in many cases the former result. This is important in view of the direct financial results. The aggregate capital outlay at the close of the period under review was Rs.12,86,157, of which five-sixths have been expended on the new works; and, of the other moiety, over Rs.6,00,000 represent the expenditure on old works up to 1868-9. For the years up to 1873-4 the average annual profit is 4·83 per cent. on the capital debit, but the resolution points out that labour and material must have been largely supplied gratis to the works reported by Col. Dixon; in 1873-4 the land settlement fixed the land revenue, deducting cesses, at Rs.2,61,557, of which Rs.53,144 was credited to Government tanks, irrigating 17,227 acres; and Rs.2,288 to village tanks irrigating 1,100 acres. The average annual profit of the years from 1874 to 1877 was only 3·3 per cent., the new tanks, three of which came into operation during that period, at an outlay of Rs.6,22,849, representing a small annual deficit. The resolution says that although the apparent and direct financial results are very poor, the testimony of all acquainted with the localities is that without the tanks the country could not be permanently inhabited. In the words of the committee of 1874, "The tanks have reclaimed Mhairwara from being a wild jungle through which no man could pass with safety." As already pointed out, by far the greater proportion of the irrigation from wells is dependent on the tanks, and it must be added that the demand for direct irrigation from the new tanks has largely increased. There is a want of returns showing the amount of indirect benefit which could be fairly credited to the tanks. It should not be difficult to ascertain the number of wells dependent on these greater reservoirs. As the results are now exhibited it might be supposed that it was not financially justifiable to expend Government funds on these works, while, according to the opinion of local officers, "the abandonment of them would bring ruin to the province."

OBITUARY.

MAJOR GENERAL JOSEPH GRAHAM, late of the Bengal Army, died on Jan. 10, at Cheltenham, in his eighty-second year. CENTRAL ASIAN CELEBRITIES.*

THE steadily increasing interest with which the peoples and affairs of Central Asia are regarded has stimulated the able author of "Russia and England in Central Asia" to condescend a little to the idleness or scant leisure which dissuade so many readers from studying complete and exhaustive works. Central Asia, with its half-known peoples and history, even of the present time, obscured by the jealousy of the rulers and conquerors, has nevertheless forced itself upon English notice. Long ridiculed, reluctantly admitted, and by some still denied, the fact that, sooner or later, the two great Asiatic Powers must meet as rivals, and determine their common frontier by war or diplomacy, has become a recognised anticipation. If the English Press does not dwell on it more, there is no want of expression of this feeling in the columns of our Russian contemporaries. The journalists of St. Petersburg watch and rejoice over each apparent difficulty in Afghanistan, while there is on this side scarcely repressed satisfaction at the reports of any temporary success of the Turkomans. In his collection of Central Asian Portraits Mr. Boulger has succeeded in presenting to the reader not merely the chief personages filling either in the present or in the immediately past period, prominent rôles as rulers or warriors, but also a collection of historical sketches, each one complete in itself, and together supplying a handbook of Central Asian knowledge. Of the Baruksai family he has selected the three Ameers, Dost Mahomed, and Shere Ali, and his son, for round them and their fortunes centres the history of Afghanistan as affecting our own policy. The sketch of Abderrahman, son of Afzul, the eldest of all the sons of Dost Mahomed, is a valuable addition. Mr. Boulger says, with true foresight, "his career has very probably not yet reached its conclusion." His influence in Afghan Turkestan is succinctly but clearly described, and we may expect that ere long practical confirmation will be furnished by the progress of events of the historian's predictions. These family histories are most instructive in one important point. The successive jealousies, mutual treacheries, and internecine wars leave no room in the mind of the careful reader for any vain delusion as to patriotic or dynastic unity among the Afghan rulers or people. The constant dread which Shere Ali experienced of domestic treason and revolt, which led him to earnestly look for promises of support from the Government of India, and drove him, failing these, to coquet with the diplomatists of Tashkent, finds its full explanation in the family history and dynastic quarrels which are herein described. The frontier difficulties which the hostile influence of the late priestly ruler, known as the Akhoond of Swat, from time to time threw in the way of our officials, are but briefly touched on in the chapter devoted to the career of this latest illustration of the power attainable by an astute Moslem fanatic. As a foremost man of his time and the border land, he deserved his place in the gallery. Khodadad, Khan of Khelat, who is now a faithful feudatory, recent reports as to certain arrogant demands notwithstanding, furnishes in his turn a specimen of the conversion of a troublesome neighbour into an obedient friend. Mr. Boulger points out that "it is a circumstance of practical significance that the addition of his estates to our empire has made us the immediate neighbour of the Persian kingdom." Perhaps we shall find a more practical result in the railway of which Candahar is to be the terminus. The Persian borders, not conterminous as yet with territories under British influence, but what may be called the debatable ground between Northern Khorasan and the country of the Turkomans, furnish a striking sketch of the personality and doings of the Ameer Hoosein Khan, or, as he is better known, the Shuja-ud-Dowlah, that is, the bravest of the State, hereditary chief and governor of Koochan. Coupled with this may be read the sketch of Noor Verdi Khan, the Akhal Chief, and the probable leader of both his own people and the Tekkes against the Russian invaders. How hopeless such a defence must prove finally is illustrated by the vain bravery of the Khirgiz leader, Izzet Khutebar. The advance of Russian conquest, which has practically absorbed the great Khanates, is well told in the biographies of the three conquerors, Kaufmann, Kolpakoffsky, and Tchernaieff, on the one hand; while, on the other, the weakness or strength of the rulers, the vain attempts to contend against the Muscovite aggressor, are vividly described in the chapters devoted to the Khans of Khiva, Khokand, and the Ameer of Bokhara. The author has carefully avoided over-colouring; he fully deserves the merit which he claims, of having considered the merits of his characters without reference to their part in the rivalry between England and Russia. He duly acknowledges what is due to the recent explorations of Major Butler, but is fain to confess that his descriptions are sometimes more meagre than might be desired. This, he bitterly remarks, is due to the policy of discouraging exploration by Englishmen, and of increasing neglect to employ native explorers, which has necessarily resulted in ignorance concerning the careers of natives, rulers, and chieftains. Among the blind the one-eyed is king, and among English readers, we fancy, Mr. Boulger will seem very well imformed on a subject of which most men know so little, and he can tell them so much and so pleasantly. We would add a hint to the docile inquirer—and that is, he will find the recently-published map of Central Asia a most valuable adjunct if he wishes thoroughly to enjoy and profit by his study of the Central Asian celebrities.

*"Central Asian Portraits." By DEMETRIUS CHARLES BOULGER, M.R.A.S. London: W. H. Allen and Co.

THE ROMAN-URDU JOURNAL (NOVEMBER, 1879.)

IN remarking upon the last number of the "Roman-Urdu Journal" we called attention to the foolish suggestion (which we could only regard as a hoax) of a Simla official—viz., that special effort should be made to cause the supersession of the vernaculars in India by the English language. We are glad to see that, in the present number, the editor, who takes the affair au grand sérieux, also comments with some severity on this correspondent, and shows the utter futility of the suggestion. He shows that the majority of the people must always remain wholly unaffected by the spread of English education; and he remarks with much justice upon the indolence of English officials in not fully mastering the vernaculars of the provinces in which they labour. The ignorant official is too often a mere tool in the hands of his native interpreter. The adoption of English would only reverse the process and convert the native assistant into an unintelligent tool. The editor concludes that in Roman-Urdu alone can there be mutual co-operation and assistance. We are not pleased to see the Roman-Urdu Society hamper itself with advocating the foolish and mischievous notions of the English Spelling Reform Association. These meddlesome muddlers would wantonly unsettle the only settled facts of the English language; and what makes their folly all the worse is the indubitable fact that in a few years their reform would have to be reformed, and so on toties quoties. It is pleasant to end with a word of commendation, and we heartily commend the system of transliteration given at the end of the present number. The source of satisfaction in this case is the fact that the society adheres to the established system of Sir W. Jones, Dr. Forbes, &c. As we have on a former occasion remarked, if the Roman character is ever to take root in India, the prime essential is that all attempts to disturb the now well-established system be definitively abandoned.

CORRESPONDENCE.

RELIEF OF THE POOR IN INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In England alone have the poor confidence that, when sickness and old age come upon them, they will not be left to die of starvation. In England alone can destitute widows and orphans hope to escape the pangs of hunger. The Blue Book on Poor Laws in foreign countries presented to Parliament in 1875 by command of her Majesty displays the hypocrisy attending poor relief in other countries. Some English writers are fond of decrying the English Poor Law, and of comparing it unfavourably with poor relief in Paris and Elberfeld. There is nothing in the systems at work in either of those two cities to prevent thousands of the poor from dying of hunger.

In India it is difficult to find words to describe the lamentable failures made in attempting to carry out orders from England to relieve the poor. There is not one province in all India wherein any judicious or reasonable system has been organised. At one time hundreds of thousands are left to perish; at another time poor relief is squandered in a most unreasonable manner: at one and the same time hundreds of thousands are fed in one province, while in the adjacent afflicted province nothing is given to allay the pangs of hunger.

When relief is given it is given without discrimination, because it is given in ignorance, in a hurry, and in a panic. The European distributors of relief know not whence the applicants come or whither they go. The native subordinates are thus enabled to embezzle enormous sums while the destitute starve. In its despair Government sought the aid of the missionaries. Lord Salisbury gave considerable sums to the Church Missionary Society (see the Intelligencer for November, 1878), and far larger sums to the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel; but what could the missionaries do? Their preaching had not assisted them in discovering the indigent, or in distinguishing them from those who were furnished with rupees. In the Church Missionary Intelligencer for December, 1878, we learn that the majority of applicants for relief were the poor of the neighbouring villages, who preferred coming twice a day for food and living in their own houses to taking up a residence at the relief-house. There is strong ground for believing that a great number of these were not destitute. Excepting the trouble of walking four times a day there was no test to prove penury.

Some of the Indian papers have lately been discussing the causes of the scarcity of food in Rohilkund and in other provinces of the North West during the spring and summer of 1878 (see the Pioneer Mail of the 13th ult.) It surprises amiable Englishmen to hear that enormous quantities of corn were exported from famine-stricken districts. But how can we expect speculators in corn to sell on the spot when they can realise far greater profits by sending their property to a distance? The poor in Rohilkund could not afford to give as much money for food as consumers in other countries were prepared to do, so the corn was carried away and the poor starved. The railways aggravated the evil by conveying the corn quickly and cheaply. Under such circumstances native kings would have prohibited the export of food, but the real remedy lies in sensible, equitable, and systematic relief of the poor. If the imperial governors in India were bound to relieve the starving, if they were made responsible for neglecting this duty, they would easily induce the proprietors of corn to sell it to them on the spot for judicious distribution among those in want.

The fact is that the imperial relief of the poor in India has hitherto been a delusion. Have we no statesman who will make it a reality?—Your obedient servant,

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

THE BILL TO REGULATE TOWN DUTIES.

PUBLIC attention has been so concentrated on the new license-tax that Sir John Strachey's bill to regulate the levy of town duties and tolls in municipalities has almost escaped notice. The statement of objects and reasons says that the plan of framing estimates of local consumption with the view of checking the taxation of trade by octroi, which is the main provision of the bill, "has been so useful for that purpose, especially in the North Western Provinces, that it is hoped it may prove generally useful." One would understand from this that the bill would make no very sweeping change in the municipalities of these provinces; but if the Government of India entertained any such idea they must have made only an extremely cursory examination of the municipal returns. Let us turn to the figures of 1877-78, as those for 1878-79 are not yet procurable. The estimate of average consumption accepted by the local Government will be found on page ninety-six of the Administration Report. Without going so far as to say that this estimate is absolutely correct, we may safely assert that it is the nearest approach to correctness which has as yet been arrived at. It contains the result of the experience of ten or twelve years over seventy or eighty municipalities spread over the provinces, and it has been tested by a large number of officers in every possible way; we may assume, therefore, that it gives a fairly correct provincial average. Now, taking this estimate of local consumption and applying the check prescribed in the bill, what is the result? There are at present sixty-nine towns in the North-Western Provinces where octroi is levied in some shape. By the present check the tax on grain will at once be abolished in twenty-nine of these, the tax on refined sugar in sixteen; and that on unrefined sugar in thirty. The tax on tobacco will be abolished in twenty-one. In sixteen towns the taxes on grain and sugar will be cut off together. Besides this, the bill totally prohibits the taxation of raw cotton and silk, of yarns and twist, silk thread, cotton, piece-goods, and jute. The returns of the articles taxed under the class of "cloth" are very meagre, but there can be no doubt that the greater part of the income under this head will thus be taken away. As to metals, the bill is entirely silent; their taxation is not expressly prohibited, nor are they included in the schedule of taxable articles; we may conclude, therefore, that they can only be taxed with the special sanction of the Governor General in Council (Section 5); and as this is presumed only to be necessary in peculiar and exceptional cases, it is probable that the taxation of metals is meant ultimately to cease. It is not worth while to go in detail through the figures of the other classes of taxable articles, as their produce is comparatively unimportant; but under these heads also there are scarcely any municipalities which have not some sources of income lopped off. The final upshot, then, of the new bill will be this. Almost the entire income from cloth, and apparently from metals, will be lost in all municipalities. In about half of the real octroi towns (for in some municipalities the octroi is almost nominal, being only levied on a few articles) the income from grain will be lost, and in half the income from sugar. In about a quarter the income from grain and sugar will be lost together. In about one-third the income from tobacco will go; and almost all the remaining municipalities will lose one or more sources of income. Unless, therefore, the taxation on the remaining articles, which have escaped the prohibitions and the self-acting test of the bill, can be raised so as to make up for this sacrifice of income, it is plain that the octroi will be generally doomed; the cost of collecting what remains of it would be out of all proportion to the produce. The sooner committees begin to realise this the better.—Pioneer.

A CALCUTTA paper announces that the Maharaja of Kishnagar is dead.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

A NEW medical journal, called The Calcutta Medical News, will be published monthly in Calcutta from the beginning of the year.

THE BENGAL CANALS.—The report on the canals in Bengal for the past year is very satisfactory, the receipts of the year having amounted to Rs.8,51,133, against Rs.4,94,772 in 1877-78. The increase in the irrigated area in Midnapore is noteworthy—viz., 58,731 acres, as against 19,819 acres in 1877-78. Numerous applications for village channels have been received, and Rs.10,675 have been deposited for their construction.—Bombay Gazette.

THE MARTINIERE COLLEGE.—The Martiniere College, Lucknow, maintains its high rank among Indian schools. There has been a slight falling off in the attendance, 199 boys' names being on the books last month as against 202 in the preceding year, but this is because of a number of boys having obtained such employment as made it worth their while to leave. The Martiniere pupils took high places at the Thomason College, Calcutta University, subordinate medical, and other examinations, held during the year. Mr. James Toozs headed the list of candidates for admission to the first department, Thomason College. Former students also have added to the reputation of the institution abroad—Mr. Joseph Adie, for example, having lately won the first Gilchrist scholarship and taken honours in the medical school of University College, London. —Bombay Gazette.

BOARD OF REVENUE, BENGAL.—The office of the Board of Revenue, L.P., is, at the commencement of the next financial year, to be amalgamated with the Bengal Secretariat. Several of the senior appointments are to be abolished, among these the post of superintendent.—Statesman.

THE INDUS VALLEY RAILWAY.—The Lahore paper regrets the postponement of the transfer of the management of the Indus Valley line to the Sind, Punjab, and Delhi Railway Company, and thinks the continuance of the dual management of the railway system between Delhi and Karachi will cause general disappointment, and it is especially to be regretted in an emergency like the present, when uniformity of control is essential to the rapid transfer frontierwards of stores and troops.—Bombay Gazette.

SERVICES IN THE MUTINY.—The title of Maharaja, together with the annual pension of Rs.16,998-10-8, enjoyed by the late Maharaja Mehiput Sing, of Patna, will be continued to his son and heir, Kumar Sripat Sing, the distinguished services rendered by him to Government during the mutiny eminently entitling him to such a privilege. The khillut will be bestowed by the Commissioner of Patna at a durbar.—Pioneer.

THE EDUCATIONAL REPORT.—The last Bengal educational report records that out of a total expenditure of Rs.45,45,000 the people themselves paid Rs.23,73,000. Of this sum Rs.3,20,142 were spent on high education in twelve Government colleges, at an annual average cost of Rs.376 per student; and Rs.1,20,615 were spent on six aided colleges, at an annual average cost of Rs.237 per student. The annual cost of the Presidency College is about a lakh of rupees, whilst the fees there received amount to about half a lakh. The general summary gives an increase of schools from 26,218 to 33,278, and of pupils from 641,400 to 727,707, the increase being in primary education. This means, not that the number of schools and pupils in the country has suddenly increased to this extent, but that a large number of indigenous schools already existing have been now brought within the Educational Department. —Bombay Gazette.

THE BURMA COMMISSARIAT.—The Rangoon papers furnish us with some additional particulars regarding the arrests in connection with the commissariat frauds. It appears that upwards of thirty members of the department are implicated, and will be brought to trial by court-martial. Captain Lehigh Hunt has been detained in Rangoon pending the result of the inquiries now being made, and his place at Tonghu will be filled by Captain Kennedy Rangasawmy is under close arrest in the native infantry lines, and several persons are on the way down from Thayetmyo, also under arrest.—Madras Times.

KHELAT.—By consent of the Khan of Khelat, the code of civil procedure is to be taken as a general guide in the administration of justice in civil suits in the Quetta district.—Indian Daily News.

MEETINGS OF COMPANIES.—At an extraordinary general meeting of the Oriental Jute Manufacturing Company, held on Dec. 20, the directors were authorised to grant a second mortgage on the property of the company, and mortgage the stock and produce. Messrs. Bird were appointed managing agents from Jan. 1, at Rs.1,000 per mensem, and 5 per cent. on profits. It was also resolved that a special general meeting of the shareholders be called to increase the rate of interest from 8 to 9 per cent. on the whole Rs.3,00,000 debentures already sanctioned by the shareholders, and that such increase on the amount already issued take place on the date of confirmation of this resolution.—Englishman.

DR. PARTRIDGE.—On the approaching retirement of Surgeon Major S. B. Partridge a farewell dinner was given in his honour at the United Service Club on Dec. 27 by his brother officers of the Indian Medical Service, of whom about thirty were present on the occasion. Dr. J. Fullarton Beatson, C.I.E., Surgeon General, occupied the chair. Coming to India in 1853, Dr. Partridge was on active service in Burma for nine months, being present at the expedition of Donabew under Sir John Cheape. At a later date he officiated for one year as Professor of Materia Medica and Clinical Medicine in the Calcutta Medical College. In 1857 he was one of the illustrious garrison of the Lucknow Residency, where he performed very valuable service, for which, at the time, he got the rank of brevet surgeon. He was the only surviving officer of his regiment, the 2nd Oudh Irregular Cavalry. After the memorable siege he was appointed 2nd field surgeon with Army Headquarters at Lucknow, under Lord Clyde. He was present at Kanhpur on the occasion of the battle against the Gwalior contingent, and afterwards at the reoccupation of Fatehgarh. Later, he was present at the "final capture" of Lucknow by Lord Clyde. He was then obliged to go on sick leave, to Europe, for six months; and ever since that time he has been attached to the Calcutta Medical College and Hospital. For twenty years he has held most honourable and prominent positions in these institutions. From August, 1860, to April, 1862, he officiated as Principal of the college, before the incumbency of Dr. Norman Chevers. Since April, 1874, he has been 1st surgeon to the College Hospital and Professor of Surgery; and, during the rest of the period alluded to, he was 2nd surgeon and Professor of Anatomy.—Englishman.

THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND TAXATION.—At the half-yearly meeting of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, the president, the Hon. Mr. Inglis, spoke at some length regarding the new License-tax Bill and the cotton duties. He expressed regret that, if the Government deemed it necessary to retain the license-tax, they should not avail themselves of the comparative unanimity which prevailed in favour of establishing some scheme of a permanent and tangible character to meet famine expenses. He trusted the Government would at all events make it perfectly clear that the retention of the license-tax had not been determined on with any view of enabling them to abolish the cotton duties. He was entirely in favour of a return to the old cotton duties, which were in no sense protective, the concession made in that respect having been in the interests of Lancashire rather than of India.—Times Telegram.

BURMA.—The Chief Commissioner for British Burma is expected in Calcutta this week. The object of his visit is, it is supposed, to confer with the Viceroy regarding the situation in Upper Burma.—Times Telegram.

THE NAGA HILLS.—The body of the late Mr. Damant was discovered near Kohima on the 16th and has been buried. On the 22nd ultimo the site of the village of Sephima, which had been destroyed by Major Evans in November, was revisited; the party met with opposition, but drove the Nagas out, destroying their property and large quantities of grain which the Nagas had collected near the village. Parties are sent out daily from all the posts to harass the Nagas. The active punitive measures that are being undertaken have, it is stated by a correspondent of the Lahore paper, an excellent effect on the tribes; already some twelve guns have been surrendered and the surrender of considerable numbers will be soon made. The majority of the clans are anxious to submit. The Konoma men, who are at present strongly stockaded on the heights of the Burrail mountains, are reported to be quarrelling among themselves and are said to be very short of supplies; many of them wish to surrender. A convoy of fifty sick and wounded men was sent to the plains on the 24th from Kohima. The down dak of the 19th, carried by friendly Nagas, was looted by some Kohima men within five miles of Sachema, and the carriers stoned. A party who went out to intercept the thieves was unsuccessful, and no letters were recovered. In acknowledging the Government of India's despatch reporting the outbreak of the Naga tribes at Konoma, the Secretary of State expresses his sorrow at the loss of so promising an officer as Mr. Damant, and of the lives of the sepoys and police which resulted from the operations. Further despatches were awaited for before his lordship could express his views with regard to them. News from Kohima, under date Jan. 8, states that Cheswejuma was attacked and burnt on the 3rd by 250 men of the 42nd, 43rd, and 44th Regiments. Slight resistance. One sepoy was slightly wounded. The enemy had five killed. The force marches on Cheduma and returns to Kohima on the 8th.—Times of India.

TRADE OF BRITISH BURMA.—To Rangoon naturally flows by the Irrawaddy all the production of Upper Burma and Pegu, the most valuable portion of our possessions in the Burmese peninsula. The railway, which is now open for 163 miles between Rangoon and Prome, running parallel with the river, offers further facilities for bringing down merchandise to Rangoon, and its proposed extension to the frontier will tend undoubtedly to still larger development of the trade of the town. Rangoon, too, is not only the town to which flows all the surplus production of Pegu and Upper Burma, but it is also the town of the province best adapted for the reception and distribution throughout the province generally, Arakan excepted, of imported goods. There is no doubt that this port will maintain the commercial supremacy now possessed by it, and that it will continue to increase and flourish in proportion to the commercial activity of the province. Relatively the most thriving place, commercially, in the Indian Empire is undoubtedly Rangoon. In 1867-68 the import trade of this port was valued at less than ninety-five lakhs; in 1878-79, having increased year after year with hardly an interruption, it was valued at more than two crores and eighty lakhs, an increase of 195 per cent. in the eleven years. The export trade was valued at 90·7 lakhs in 1867-68, and at three crores forty-three lakhs in 1878-79, an increase of 278 per cent. Burma is without question the most prosperous province of the Empire, and the people, free from the religious and caste prejudices with which the Hindus and Mahomedans of India are imbued, fond of personal comfort and adornment, spend their earnings freely on substantially built and healthy habitations, on silk attire and jewellery, on cigars, European provisions of kinds such as in India are consumed by the Anglo-Indian population only, on crockery and glassware, and other things such as conduce to the comfort of a man who desires to make himself comfortable and will not be content to live in a mud hovel sleeping over half-a-dozen rupees buried in the damp earthen floor beneath him.—Times of India.

A FATAL RACING ACCIDENT.—We regret to report the death of Mr. Henry Eastwood Strafford, who died from the effects of an injury received during the accident in the race for "The Burdwan Cup." THE OOSSOOR CIRCLE.—The local fund board of the Oossoor Circle proposed that the Public Works Department be relieved of the charge of all local fund works, and that they be placed under the supervision of a separate engineer on a salary of Rs.300 per mensem, with a travelling allowance of Rs.75, assisted by the petty establishment now maintained, which is to be transferred to the local fund board. The cost of the entire establishment is Rs.7,860, which is within the amount provided for the cost of the Public Works Department supervision in the current year's budget. These arrangements were approved by the superintending engineer. The local fund board desire to have a separate engineer for their circle, as one engineer for the whole district will be found insufficient, and they are averse to entrusting local fund works to tahsildars who are not subordinate to the local fund board, and who can spare very little time from their legitimate duties for this kind of work. The Board of Revenue generally approve of these proposals, and recommend that they be sanctioned subject to such modifications as experience may suggest. The cost of the establishment is moderate. No office establishment is provided for the engineer however, and it is probable that it will be necessary to incur some additional expenditure on this account. The Government have accorded their sanction to the above arrangement.—Madras Times.

THE GAOL DEPARTMENT REPORT.—The Administration Report for 1878 gives the number of gaols under the control of the Gaol Department during the year as twenty-seven district gaols, including the Russellkonda Hill Gaol and the Ootacamund European Prison, seven Central Gaols, including the Madras Penitentiary; two Camp Gaols—one at Vellore and the other at Trichinopoly, the former opened in 1876 and the latter in 1877; and the Civil Debtors' Gaol at Madras. The number of prisoners of all classes confined during the year in the gaols under the department was 62,057 as against 72,000 in 1877. The number of convicts released with remission was 1,756 as against 1,035 of 1877. The number of reconvicted persons shows a satisfactory decrease of more than 15 per cent. as compared with that for 1877. The total expenditure in guarding and maintaining the prisoners confined in the Provincial Gaols in 1878 was Rs.16,86,658 as against Rs.19,52,831, in 1877, the net decrease being Rs.2,66,173, of which sum more than 75 per cent. was due to the comparative cheapness of rations; the remainder being in contingencies, hospital charges, and clothing and bedding, showed a saving approximating Rs.32,000, but this was counterbalanced by the increased cost of police guards and fixed establishments, that under the latter head being due to temporary establishments for Camp Gaols. The net profits from gaol manufactures amounted during the year to Rs.1,72,027.—Madras Athenæum.

A TELEGRAM from Madras announces the death, on Wednesday week, of Colonel George Philip Brudenell Sherard, M.S.C., formerly 49th N.I., Judge Advocate-General of the Madras army. Colonel Sherard, who was in his fifty-seventh year, had held the appointment since the retirement of Col. J. E. Mayne, at the close of 1876, having been previously for close upon twenty years Deputy Judge Advocate-General of the Mysore Division. Colonel Sherard entered the army in Feb. 1844, and became lieutenant in 1848, captain 1857, major 1864, lieutenant colonel 1870, and colonel 1875. He served in the second Burmese war, taking part in the defence of Martaban and recapture of Billing (medal with clasp for Pegu).

UNEXPECTED RESULTS OF CLOSE TIME IN INDIA.—The shooting season in the Nilgiri Hills, which commenced on September 16, after the enforcement of the first yearly close time, has been unusually successful, and sportsmen are unanimous in attributing the increased sport which they are enjoying to the results of the law by which both birds and beasts were afforded a few months' respite from powder and shot. As an additional security against the molestation of the game the natives were ordered to give up their guns during the fence months, and the preserves consequently had almost complete rest. An unexpected result, however, of the enforcement of close time for game has been experienced in the sudden increase in the numbers and boldness of tigers, both in the hills and in the adjoining valleys. The neighbourhood of Ootacamund, the centre of the shooting district, has been visited by several tigers; while the upper districts are found to be stocked not only with sambur and other varieties of game, both furred and feathered, but also with tigers.—Colonies and India.

THE PEOPLE'S FAIR.—The People's Fair at Madras seems to have been as complete a success as the People's Fete at Baroda. The Madras Mail calculates that there were at least 520,000 admissions through the gates during the four days it lasted. The receipts and expenditure of the Madras Fair, which was brought to a conclusion on Saturday night, have not yet been made up, but "about Rs.2,000 were realised by the sale of carriage tickets, about Rs.1,000 from the rent of ground for booths, and about Rs.1,000 from donations. And Rs.2,000 have been guaranteed by various subscribers in case the expenditure should not be covered by the receipts. The arches, prizes, and flags cost about Rs.2,000, the illuminations about Rs.700, the English fireworks about Rs.800, and the native fireworks about Rs.1,400, so the expenditure may have amounted to about Rs.6,000. Consequently the guarantors may be called upon to pay 50 per cent. of the sums they were so good as to subscribe."—Times of India.

THE RAMPA REBELLION.—The Rampa rebels still flourish. Jampa Pandiah, one of the chief rebels, who was some time ago captured and put into prison, has, through the carelessness of the prison guard, made his escape with three other prisoners. A large reward has been offered for his recapture, and steps are being taken by the police to track him. On the 9th ult. 200 men belonging to Chendriah's gang attacked and looted a village called Ungaloor Agram. They tied and severely beat the village headmen.—Bombay Gazette.

MUSKETRY PRACTICE OF MADRAS TROOPS.

THE Commander in Chief directs the publication of the annexed return of the annual musketry practice of the British and Native Troops in the Madras Presidency for the course 1878-79:—

I. Cavalry.—In the British Cavalry (14th Hussars) 374 men have been trained, showing an improvement of 9·25 points per man on the figure of merit last year, which may be attributed partly to their shooting with a better arm, the Martini-Henry, and partly to the greater interest taken in the training by all ranks. The results of the dismounted practice with horses are satisfactory, the average being 7·02 points per man, as compared with 6·74 of the best cavalry regiment at home The percentage of non-exercised men is excessive, owing principally to the number of men invalided and time-expired, and to those at Wellington not being trained. The 12th Lancers have only lately been armed with the carbine, and will in future be required to go through the annual course. In the Native cavalry 324 men were exercised for the first time with the Snider carbines; the remainder not having received their arms in time for the annual course, did not go through their practice. II. Infantry.—In the British infantry 4,479 or 1,814 less than last year have been exercised with satisfactory results. This may be attributed to the 89th Regiment at Rangoon having no range to go through the course, and to the 67th Regiment leaving the Presidency having only completed the course of one wing. In the Native infantry 19,225 or 1,527 less than last year have been exercised with satisfactory results, showing an increase of 11·00 figure of merit on that of last year. Part of this deficiency is owing to the range at Rangoon being declared unsafe. The following regiments were not exercised, or only partly so:—1st, 2nd, and 4th L.C., 89th, and 3 Companies Sappers and miners, and 24th Regiment N. I. The returns, registers and summaries, with a few exceptions, have been kept with care and accuracy. The best shooting regiment of British Infantry is the 48th Regiment, with a figure of merit of 107·47 and of Native infantry, the 29th Regiment, with a figure of merit of 94·45, Native cavalry, the Body Guard, with a figure of merit of 33·99. The best shot in the British infantry is No. 848, Colour Sergeant R. Goodwin, 2nd Battalion 16th Regiment, and the best recorded shot in the Native army is No. 1,762, Havildar Cossim Khan, 30th Regiment N.I., but doubts have arisen as to whether the practice in the 30th Regiment N.I. was properly conducted, and, on these grounds, the Commander in Chief in India has declined to allow Havildar Cossim Khan to receive the reward. The best judge of distance amongst the officers is Lieutenant W. Seton, 33rd Regiment, and in the non-commissioned officers and men of the British regiments is No. 1,581, Private W. Webb, 48th Regiment; and of the Native army, No. 450, Havildar Vurtharajooloo, 9th Regiment N.I. Field firing was carried out at the stations of Palaveram, Bangalore, Secunderabad, Palamcottah, Quilon, Bellary, and Vizagapatam with satisfactory results. The Commander in Chief regrets to learn that firing at moving objects does not receive the attention from commanding officers that it deserves. It is a most important practice, for, in the field, on coming into the presence of an enemy, firing at a moving object is one of the first duties a soldier is called upon to perform. The result of the last annual practice may be considered generally satisfactory, and Sir Neville Chamberlain is much pleased to learn that the duties of the past musketry course have been as a rule carefully and zealously discharged by all entrusted with them. This is the first year in which the duties of instruction in musketry have been entrusted to the Native officers and non-commissioned officers: and the result has been to prove that they are, as a general rule, fitted to superintend this branch of their men's instruction. The exception to this rule is in the 11th Regiment N.I., in which the Commander in Chief much regrets to see that through the connivance of some of the Native officers and non-commissioned officers, the annual practice was unfairly conducted, whereby the Commander in Chief in India withheld the regimental prizes and also the whole of the prizes for A Company.

MOORING PIER FOR KARACHI.—The Karachi correspondent of the Lahore paper says that, owing to the want of a mooring pier at Kiamari, great inconvenience is anticipated on the arrival of the railway material from England. Government will not advance money nor permit the railway company to build the pier. It is estimated that the landing charges on this material would almo s pay for the pier required.—Bombay Gazette.

THE ANGLO-PORTUGO TREATY AND THE MARMAGAO RAILWAY.—The Portuguese Government has lost no time in giving effect to the 6th article of the Treaty of August 6, 1879, establishing a customs union between the possessions of England and Portugal in India. The general effect of that treaty is to give to the Government of India the monopoly of salt and opium, and the control of the excise revenue in Portuguese India, and practically to make Goa and its dependencies, for all fiscal purposes, part of the territories governed by the Viceroy of Queen Victoria. In consideration of these extremely important concessions made by Portugal, the Government of India undertakes to pay annually the sum of four lakhs of rupees to the King of Portugal, and, by Articel 6 of the treaty, further pledges itself to grant certain facilities for the construction of a railway from Marmagao, the port of Goa, to the town of New Hubli, and thence to Bellary. The English negotiators seem to have disliked this condition about the railway, and to have hoped that the money would not be forthcoming for the construction of the line, for in some of the later subsidiary clauses of Article 6 they provide for the appointment of a mixed commission, in case of the failure of the Marmagao project, to report on the advantages of the Karwar line and port as compared with those of the Portuguese railway and harbour. This stipulation, however, now becomes inoperative. The Portuguese Government has fulfilled the primary conditions of Article 6 by giving to a company—of which the Duke of Sutherland and Mr. Mackinnon, of the British India Company, are the principal directors—"a concession of powers and facilities for the construction and maintenance of the portions of the Marmagao railway lying within Portuguese India, and the rendering of the port safe and suitable for commerce," and the India-office has been satisfied, in the terms of the treaty, that "such concession is suitable and sufficient, and that the capital necessary for the undertaking is forthcoming." The Secretary of State has been obliged therefore to send out English engineers to survey, in conjunction with Portuguese colleagues, the proposed line and the harbour of Marmagao, and to report, without any reference whatever to the Karwar scheme, how the enterprise undertaken by the new company can best be carried out. Mr. Sawyer, C.E., is the engineer selected by the India-office for this mission. He has brought with him to Bombay from England two assistants, Mr. Owen and another gentleman, who have already gone down to Goa, and he himself will leave Bombay to take charge of the surveying work as soon as he has obtained the help of some more assistants from the Bombay Public Works Department. It is hoped that the survey will be finished before next hot weather. Whatever predilection many persons may have for Karwar, it is generally allowed that Marmagao may be converted at a comparatively small cost into a secure and commodious harbour; and, as it is understood that the King of Portugal has assigned to the Duke of Sutherland's company the four lakhs a year guaranteed by England as a security for the payment of a certain rate of interest, no difficulty is likely to arise about the supply of as much capital as will be required. We cannot share the apprehensions with which many Anglo-Indian officials view this construction of a railway through Portuguese territory. It appears to us that under the new treaty British subjects will be able to use Marmagao as freely as they now use Karwar. As for the danger of diminishing the trade of Bombay by the opening of more harbours along the western coast, the new coasting trade created by means of such ports will far more than compensate Bombay for the possible loss of a small portion of its commerce with foreign countries.—Bombay Gazette.

Nine men of the Somalies were killed and thirty-one wounded, some of whom have since died. It is also stated that the Eyal Younus tribe have been fined, some say $1,100, others $600, by the Governor of Berberah, and that the Eyal Jadud and the Eyal Sherdown refuse to pay their portion of the fine.—Times of India.

THE PROPOSED WITHDRAWAL.

BOTH from what may be termed unfriendly critics and friendly informants alike come expressions of impatience as to the want of declarations of the plan of settlement intended for adoption in Cabul. There is, however, room for the suggestion that, while the hereditary successor to Yakoob Khan is being led about the country a mere puppet in the hands of an avowed enemy, any plan which ignores his rights would be impolitic; while to recognise them would be to contradict our original declarations at the commencement of this campaign. At the outset of the war a proclamation assured the people that her Majesty the Empress of India had no quarrel with the Afghan people, but only with the Ameer, who had offered so pronounced an insult. That war was terminated practically by the death of Shere Ali, and actually by the Treaty with the Ameer who succeeded to the vacant throne. The present war is one neither with the Ruler nor with the people. The former has abdicated, and is "interned," to use a politely doubtful expression, in India. The people of Afghanistan are divided into two parties, one siding with the army which is present, not as invaders, but as avengers of a particular crime on those guilty of complicity, either as partakers or defenders, of the breach of faith towards our Envoy. The other, represented, as we are told, by almost all of the sirdars or men of birth and position, who are present in the British camp, or acting under orders of General Roberts, is certainly not hostile to British presence or influence; an important section of the Afghan kingdom is undoubtedly willing to acquiesce in our occupation or alliance. The people, as distinguished from their heads, follow the chiefs; tribes and clans will go to war, or abide in peace, just as they are influenced; and though a majority of the chiefs or sirdars may be, and are, disposed to co-operate in a peaceful settlement arranged according to the principles which dictated the Treaty of Gandamak, it is certain that two or three active and hostile leaders who can put forward as a nominal head the boy Musa Khan, and appeal to the powerful motives of fanaticism and loot, do not as yet consider themselves finally beaten. The experience of the past twelve months ought to have taught us not to hurry on the withdrawal of our army, nor to trust aught to the imagination of the Afghans. Their past memories, and their present confidence, which led them to undervalue the puissance of our troops, have not yet been thoroughly counteracted. We may add that undervaluing the force of our enemies, or over estimating their belief in our strength, had also to be corrected on our parts. Those who urged that in the first campaign to stop short of Cabul itself was an error which would surely produce injurious effects can claim to have been justified by the results. If the abstinence, which was due to a generous policy, was misinterpreted, can we not fairly argue that until the submission of the historical stronghold Ghazni is obtained, there will not be established the certainty in the Afghan mind that we are better as friends than as enemies? It seems to us that so long as Herat can be maintained as the headquarters of plotting, and Ghazni is an independent stronghold, it is premature to suggest a dignified withdrawal of our forces from Cabul. This, however, is a plan which, as a third alternative, has been propounded apparently for public consideration. It is suggested that the time has now come for the British force to withdraw to Jellalabad, which, as well as Candahar, will be occupied pending the election by the Afghan people or sirdars of an Ameer. When we withdrew our troops after the conclusion of the Treaty of Gandamak we secured, or proposed to secure, the safety of our adherents or fautors by a clause ensuring an amnesty. It is part of the possible indictment against the ex-Ameer that this did not prevent him from visiting with vengeance those whom he reckoned as his enemies. When General Roberts was obliged by the paucity of his forces to abandon Cabul, a reign of terror prevailed over all who, either as Hindus, or as having peaceably welcomed the British, were marked as victims of fanaticism or robbery. The only organised forces, the only military leaders who are active in the country, are those who have recently essayed, and are rumoured to be again organising, an attack on our army. To withdraw while their strength is sufficient to warrant such rumours would be to expose to utter destruction our friends, to invite anarchy, or prepare the way for a hostile tyranny which would require another punitive expedition. There is a continual repetition of the declaration that we do not desire to interfere in the internal affairs of Afghanistan, that all we can promise any de facto sovereign is recognition and assurance against foreign invasion—"Quam diu se bene gesserit." It would surely be impossible, in the present state of affairs, for us to look calmly on while the Afghan election developed itself into a destructive civil war. Of course it is possible that eventually, after the survival of the fittest, and his recognition as Ameer, he might prove himself a faithful and true ally. The reflection recalls the words of the author of "Central Asian Portraits":—"We had recognised with each turn of fortune that son of Dost Mahomed who chanced to be uppermost, and not until fortune had conclusively shown that of the brothers Shere Ali was to be the successful one, did we make up our minds that he was the most eligible candidate. What wonder, then, that Shere Ali should be far from enthusiastic in support of our views, and rather sceptical of the value to him of our friendship?" It would seem that the historic lineaments of this "portrait" might be reasonably expected to be reproduced in lineal successors if we left the chosen sovereign free from "intervention" in internal affairs. At any rate, it must be a modified policy of intervention, and, seeing that we are wishful to have an Afghanistan semi-dependent and submissive to our diplomatic direction, to arrange matters so that internal rebellion shall not be fomented from without. The knowledge that the "God-given Government" was not only recognised, but would be supported in a time of need, would have kept Shere Ali our faithful friend. If this has not been learned, it is hard to say what lesson the past has bequeathed to our politicals. We are told of the intense strain that has been put upon "the small Indian native army" by the two campaigns, and the possible dissatisfaction likely to be excited by indefinite detention of the regiments at the front. The strain upon public patience has been urged before, and we cannot doubt the strain upon the thought and endurance of those on whose shoulders rests the responsibility of bringing to a successful end an enterprise which had its origin in necessity. But none of these strains would be alleviated by a withdrawal, which must be temporary, and a "looker-on" policy, which would be ineffective. We take some encouragement from the statement that a considerable proportion of the beasts of burden have been or are about to be sent to Peshawur, where fodder and well-fitting pack saddles are alike procurable. This may rather point to well-timed reinforcements than to withdrawal. The half-promised advance of the Candahar force upon Ghazni, and the relief by a Bombay division also point to a determination to thoroughly put down the hostile leaders and tribesmen. When this is at least apparently accomplished it will be time to discuss the withdrawal, but the restoration of a settled native Government would better precede than follow that step. What the public opinion of it in Cabul is may be understood from the fact that the very talk of such a move has caused a migration of the Hindu families, who have no idea of being again exposed to the "settlement of internal affairs" by the tribesmen unawed by foreign influence.

THE TELEGRAPH WAR OPERATIONS.

THE Gazette of India contains a resolution which intimates that the Governor General has read with much pleasure the report of the able manner in which the telegraph operations connected with the late campaign were conducted. No less than 420 miles of telegraph line were constructed and maintained beyond the frontier of the Empire in a manner that shows the organisation of the department to be good and the staff effective. Every requirement of the Government has been promptly undertaken and efficiently carried out, and, notwithstanding the large and sudden strain upon the resources of the department, the lines have been carried through without impediment of any kind. The credit for the results attained is due, in the first instance, to the director general himself, and the thanks of the Government of India are tendered to Col. Murray with an expression of high commendation of the forethought and ability with which the operations of the department have been administered. The immediate supervision of the construction of the lines was entrusted to Messrs. S. P. W. V. Luke, C. E. Pitman, and S. J. Josephs, officiating superintendents ; these civilian officers cheerfully accepted the risk of life and hardships involved in such a service, and by their energy, tact, and readiness of resource carried through to a highly successful issue the arduous and dangerous duties to which they were called. The thanks of the Government of India are tendered to these three gentlemen for the important services so ably and so loyally rendered by them to the State. The thanks of the Government of India are also given to the following gentlemen :—Mr. R. W. Brooke for the admirable arrangement made by him in his capacity as director of construction ; Mr. W. K. D. Bignell, the superintendent of the Punjab Division ; Mr. J. W. Duthy for his excellent work in the Khyber Pass as assistant superintendent under Mr. Luke ; Mr. N. Jones for his excellent service in constructing the lines from Kohat to Thull, and from Peshawur to Jumrood. The Government of India also notices with high approbation the conduct of Mr. Inspector J. HOME NEWS.

THE AUSTRALIAN TELEGRAPH.—It is announced that the duplicate Australian cable has been completed, and is open for traffic, thus anticipating the contract time by more than a month. The new cable takes a somewhat different route to the original. The old cable from Singapore landed at Batavia, and the messages were sent over the Dutch Government lines to Banjoewangie, at the furthest extremity of Java, where the Australian section of the cable commences. By the new arrangement the Singapore section is taken direct to Banjoewangie, thereby avoiding the Java land lines, which will effect a great saving of time and tend to greater accuracy, as the messages will pass entirely through English hands.

LOAN FOR CEYLON.—Subscriptions will be received by the Crown Agents for the Colonies, at their offices in Downing-street, on the 28th and 29th inst., for instalments of loans to the Ceylon Government, amounting to £700,000. These loans are secured on the general revenue and public assets of the colony, and will be raised on debentures representing £1,000, £500, and £100 respectively, bearing interest from Feb. 15, 1880, at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly. The principal is redeemable by a sinking fund, which is calculated to extinguish the debt in about forty-one years, by annual drawings, or the purchase of bonds in the open market. Payments may be made in full, on allotment, at a discount of 2 per cent. The price of issue is £98 per £100.

BRITISH GUIANA.—The report of the Immigration Agent General for the year 1878 has just been presented to the Legislature of British Guiana. It shows that there are 56,000 coolie immigrants working on the estates. It may be added that the money deposited by the Hindus in the savings banks of the colony, according to the statistics of 1878, amounted to £64,000, which is a larger proportion of savings than any shown by Africans, creoles, and even Europeans in the colony. When it is remembered that these coolie immigrants are drawn from those classes of the population of India which are peculiarly subject to famine, it will be seen how much it is to their advantage to emigrate to a British colony in the West Indies.

ROYAL MILITARY ACADEMY, WOOLWICH.—The next examination of candidates for admission to the academy will commence in London on Thursday, July 1, the medical examination taking place at the academy on the previous day. Applications cannot be received unless made in strict accordance with Paragraph 4 of the regulations issued with General Order 89 of 1878. The successful candidates will be required to join the academy about Sept. 24 next.

BRITISH ARCHÆOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION.—The fourth meeting of the session was held on the 21st instant—Mr. H. Syer-Cuming, V.P., in the chair. The principal paper was read by Mr. William H. Cope on the "History and use of Jade," lately so prominently brought before the public through the letters of Professor Max Müller and others. The paper was well illustrated by a fine exhibition of rare specimens of the mineral from the collection of Mr. Cope and that of Mr. Chisholm Gooden, and gave rise to an interesting discussion, in which the chairman (who exhibited specimens of jade from New Zealand, where the natives hold it in great esteem), the Rev. D. M. Mayhew, Mr. Josephs, Mr. Brock, and Mr. Wright took part. The latter adverted to the finding of a cowrie shell, the money cowrie of India, in a barrow lately opened by Mr. W. C. Borlase, F.S.A., in Cornwall, and referred to in the new magazine called the Antiquary, and remarked that the finding the jade implement in the Rhone seemed, with the finding the cowrie in Cornwall, to point to the Aryan connection with this country which Professor Max Müller had contended for.

SPRING VALLEY COFFEE COMPANY.—The directors have declared a dividend payable forthwith at the rate of 6 per cent. for the half-year.

OUVAH COFFEE COMPANY.—The directors have declared a dividend for the half-year at the rate of 8 per cent., payable forthwith.

COLOMBO COMMERCIAL COMPANY.—The annual report shows an available balance of £3,952. An interim dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. was paid in July and a further similar distribution is now recommended, leaving £786 to be carried forward.

CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.—It is notified from the War-office that the following will be the examination to be passed before the Civil Service Commissioners by subaltern officers of Militia Artillery or Infantry, candidates for commissions in the army, in the competitive examinations which commence in March next:—"1. Mathematics, viz.—(a) arithmetic, including vulgar and decimal fractions, proportion, and simple interest; (b) geometry, not beyond the standard of the first book of Euclid. 2. French, German, or some other modern language, the examination being limited to a translation from the language and grammatical questions. 3. Writing English correctly, and in a good legible hand, from dictation. 4. The elements of geometrical drawing, including the construction of scales, and the use of simple mathematical instruments. 5. Geography. No marks will be allotted for the above preliminary examination, excepting for geometrical drawing, the maximum number for which will be 300. The preliminary examination will, in the case of candidates who have passed it at previous examinations, be dispensed with in all subjects except geometrical drawing. Candidates will also be exempted from the 'preliminary' examination in all subjects except geometrical drawing, if they can produce the certificate of the Oxford and Cambridge Schools Examination Board, provided it embraces mathematics. If it does not include that subject they will be required to also undergo an examination therein. The 'further examination' will be proceeded with immediately on the conclusion of the 'preliminary examination.' Candidates who fail in the preliminary examination will be informed of their failure as soon as possible, and they will then be released from further attendance. The subjects of the further examination and maximum number of marks obtainable for each subject will be as follow:—1, Mathematics—viz., algebra up to and including quadratic equations, the theory and use of logarithms, geometry, plane trigonometry, and mensuration, 3,000 marks; 2, English composition, tested by the power of writing an essay, letter, or précis, English literature, limited to specified authors, and English history, limited to certain fixed periods, the authors and periods being notified beforehand, 3,000 marks; 3, Latin, 3,000 marks; 4, Greek, 2,000 marks; 5, French, the examination to be partly colloquial, 2,000 marks; 6, German, the examination to be partly colloquial, 2,000 marks; 7, experimental sciences—viz. (a) chemistry and heat, or (b) electricity and magnetism, 2,000 marks (subjects a and b are alternative; a candidate will not be allowed to take up both); 8, general and physical geography and geology, 2,000 marks; 9, drawing—free hand, 1,000 marks. Of these nine subjects candidates will not be allowed to take up more than four nor less than two, exclusive of drawing. In order to secure a proper proficiency in all the subjects taken up by a candidate a certain number will be deducted from the marks gained by the candidate in each subject. To pass this examination a candidate must obtain in the subjects which he takes up such an aggregate total of marks as may, after the deduction above mentioned, indicate in the judgment of the Civil Service Commissioners a competent amount of general proficiency."

SPECIE SHIPMENTS TO THE EAST.—According to a circular just issued by Mr. G. de Quetteville, the total shipments of specie from Southampton by the Peninsular and Oriental steamers to the East during the year 1879 were £8,810,888, of which £2,276,807 was in gold, and the remainder in silver, against a total of £6,765,043 in 1878, showing an increaae of £2,045,845. From the Mediterranean ports they were £708,160 (£208,361 gold, and £499,799 silver), showing an increase of £502,120. The export by the Messageries Maritimes during the same period was £3,130,924 (£2,495,048 gold, and £635,876 silver), showing an increase of £2,596,320 as compared with 1878. In the case of the amounts taken by the Messageries steamers leaving Marseilles, £2,303,826 alone was in gold for Alexandria, against £340,328 in 1878. The total amount of drafts drawn by the Government of India was Rs.17,81,44,912, realising £14,625,232 18. 10d. The fluctuations in rupee paper have been important, the highest price of the Four-and-a-Half per Cents. having been 88, and the lowest 76½; while of the Four per Cents. the highest price was 80¾, and the lowest 71¾.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received yesterday at the Bank of England for Rs.45,00,000 in Government bills on India. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta Rs.32,51,000, to Bombay Rs.12,19,000, and to Madras Rs.30,000. Tenders on all Presidencies at 1s. 8 3-10d. will receive about 11 per cent.; above that price in full. Compared with last week this shows a fall of 1-16d. The same amount will be tendered for next Wednesday. In consequence of the rate at which the drafts were allotted being slightly more favourable than had been anticipated, additional firmness was imparted to the silver market, bars being quoted at 52⅝d. per ounce, though no business of importance was transacted at that figure, have created an extraordinary sensation in Paris, and are rapidly and deservedly soperseding real diamonds. Their cost is about 1-300th less. These magnificent Stones first attracted notice at the Paris Exhibition last year, where they were exposed side by side with real diamonds of great value, and they are now introduced into England for the first time. They are absolutely identical in size, brilliancy, lustre, and durability with real diamonds of the first water, and defy detection even by jewellers and experts. They are immeasurably superior to real diamonds of second-rate quality: THE MANUFACTURER GUARANTEES THE SURPRISE AND PLEASURE OF PURCHASERS. These brilliants can be worn in the strongest daylight, which is practically the real test of perfection, and the most sceptical will be utterly deceived. They can be mounted side by side with real diamonds of the first quality, and will be found undistinguishable therefrom. They are worn at the Court Balls, and upon all occasions in Paris and St. Petersburg. The prohibitive prices charged in England for real diamonds render their acquisition impossssble to the middle classes, and the imitation diamonds hitherto sold are worthless, the imposition being manifest to the most careless observer. The DIAMANTÉ BRILLIANTS can, on the contrary, be worn with absolute and entire confidence at all times and for a lifetime, and, as we have said above, defy the closest scrutiny. Purchasers invariably repeat their purchases. The investigations and labour of two generations have been expended in bringing these remarkable jewels to their present state of perfection.

THE NEW DIAMONDS, DIAMANTÉ BRILLIANTS,

PRICES OF UNMOUNTED STONES :—

200 ,, 15 ,,

They were awarded a Prize Medal at the Paris Exhibition, 1878.

These diamonds can be supplied ready mounted, in 18 Carat Gold or in Silver-gilt. Designs and Estimates for Mounting submitted to purchasers of the diamond Free of Charge.

The diamonds will be forwarded packed in a box, registered by post, the same day upon receipt of order and remittance. Remittances may be made by cheques, post-office orders, postage stamps, or Cheque Bank cheques, direct to

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

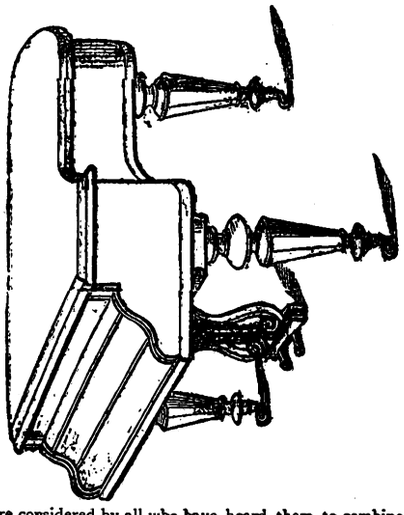
KIRKMAN AND SON,

ESTABLISHED NEARLY 150 YEARS.



3 and 9, SOHO-SQUARE, LONDON, W.

KIRKMAN AND SON'S

PATENT STEEL FRAME

SHORT GRAND PIANOS,

SIX FEET LONG, IN ELEGANT ROSEWOOD OR WALNUT CASES,

Are considered by all who have heard them to combine a greater amount and resonance of tone, consistent with adaptability of size, shape, and elegance of appearance than those of any other manufacturer.

KIRKMAN AND SON'S

OVERSTRUNG

GRAND AND COTTAGE PIANOS.

Is being considered by some competent judges that the German method of over or cross-stringing Pianos is attended with great advantage, Messrs. Kirkman and Son are now manufacturing both Grand and Cottage Pianos on this principle, the latter having the plain Sticker Action, which is not the case with Pianos of this class manufactured by other makers; in fact, the extreme simplicity of the action used by Messrs. Kirkman and Son in all their Pianos render them eminently suitable for exportation to the Colonies, where skilled workmen are few and far between. All useless checks and complications are carefully avoided, thus enabling any tuner, with however superficial a knowledge of the business, to regulate them or repair any damage they may sustain.

KIRKMAN AND SON

Have a reputation extending over nearly a Century and a-Half.

There are now in the possession of the house Harpsichords and Virginals dated 1758 and 1778, manufactured by Jacobus and Abraham Kirckman.

The present members of the firm beg to call the attention of shippers and exporters to the fact that in ordering of this house they are dealing with a firm who manufacture on principles derived from experience of this almost unprecedented length.

KIRKMAN AND SON

Have at present a Fine Selection at their Extensive Show Rooms in Soho-square.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1880.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Jan. 17; Madras and Allahabad, Jan. 15; Calcutta, Jan. 14.

THE latest district reports from the Punjab show that rain was badly wanted in no less than twenty-four districts for the rabi sowings; that in Hoshiarpur the sugar cane had suffered from the frost: and that in Dehra Ismail Khan some demage had been done to the crops by locusts. The health of the people was improving and fever decreasing.

NEWS from Afghanistan there is almost none. The artillery officer, Mahomed Jan, is reported to be doing his to stir up the Kohistanis, and is said to have been joined by the ex-governor of Jellalabad. The Times correspondent telegraphs that "The city of Cabul has resumed the aspect it wore before the recent events, and its bazaars are as crowded and busy as ever. It is believed that the amount of actual money obtained from the city by the insurgent chiefs last month was very paltry. A careful computation made by order of General Roberts places it at Rs.30,000. The property injured and carried off has also been found to be less valuable than at first supposed. The insurgents lived free while the city was in their hands and did much injury to many of the houses and shops; but they never obtained entrance into the Kazilbash quarters, and much property was, doubtless, saved by being conveyed there. A movable column, under General Bright, entered the Lughman Valley on the 27th ult., General Bright having first issued a proclamation inviting the chief to come in, and calling on the people to bring supplies, which would be paid for. In this proclamation he also warned them to refrain from hostile acts, adding that all who remained quiet would be unmolested. The forts of Futteh Mahomed Khan and Asmatullah were found deserted. The column reached Futtehabad on the 29th ult. without opposition. Several headmen have come in, including Hamid Khan, Asmatullah's brother. The people are said to be friendly. The valley is fertile, forage is plentiful, and the roads are good. The following are the movements reported of the Third or Reserve Division during last week:—Brigadier Gib has proceeded to Lundi Kotal, his headquarters, with the 5th Fusiliers and the 1st and 15th Madras Infantry. Brigadier General Roberts commands the 1st Brigade, stationed at Peshawur, and consisting of the 18th Royal Irish and 9th and 10th Native Infantry. Brigadier Hill's brigade, at Jamrud, consists of the 14th Foot, 1st Goorkhas, and 41st Native Infantry. The 32nd Pioneers proceed to Ali Musjid. The 25th Foot has been transferred to General Bright's division. The telegraph wire is cut almost nightly near Decca, rendering communication with Cabul somewhat uncertain. Terrible accounts reach Candahar. Some 2,000 families are reported to have been nearly exterminated by Ghilzais, seven of whose villages were afterwards captured by Hazaras and every living being slain. From the Farrah direction come similar tales of internecine warfare. The representative sent by Ayoob Khan to Farrah has been defeated by Ibrahim Khan, of Chaknasur, who is putting the country under contribution. Ayoob is reported to have sent two regiments, six guns, and 2,000 horse against him. Other accounts, however, say that the troops refused to march. Copious rain is now falling, just in time to enable the irrigated land to be sown."

A REUTER'S telegram of the 4th inst. states that a convoy of treasure and ammunition reached Cabul safely on the 1st inst. The defences of the Bala Hissar and Sherpur cantonments are progressing very satisfactorily. There have been severe snowstorms at Cabul.

THE Maharaja of Bulrampur has expressed his desire to lend Government troops for service in Afghanistan and to present them with a lakh of rupees (£10,000), and a subscription for the relief of the widows and orphans of the soldiers killed in the Afghan campaign has been started by the Behar Landholders' Association, three local maharajas heading the list with contributions of Rs.20,000, or £2,000 each. It is notified that the money which is raised will be distributed without distinction of race, and that a portion of the proceeds may be used in the purchase of "comforts for troops in the field and for the sick and wounded."

THERE is no truth whatever in the report that Lord Lytton is desirous of leaving India and that there is a question of choosing his successor.

THE Rampa rebellion still drags its weary length along There were lately two slight engagements, in both of which the rebels were defeated with some loss. All attempts to trace the whereabouts of Chendria have failed, and the villagers, it is said, are very reluctant about giving information respecting him.

THE Maharaja of Ulwar has arrived at Calcutta on a visit to the Viceroy.

THE Duke of Buckingham and the Ladies Grenville have gone on a tour in Godavery, travelling there in boats on the Buckingham Canal.

A REUTER'S telegram says that it has now been clearly established that the natives who attacked the Balladhan tea garden in Cachar on Jan. 27, and killed the manager, were Angami Nagas.

A SUBSCRIPTION has been opened at Bombay in aid of the Irish relief fund, to which the well-known banking house of Messrs. B. and A. Hormasjee, of Bombay, has contributed the sum of £1,000. A special committee, composed of Europeans and natives, has been formed to collect subscriptions towards the relief of the Irish distress.

THE Daily News understands that the Indian Government has for the present suspended the immigration of coolies to the Island of Reunion. It is expected that a protector of immigrants will, with the concurrence of the French Government, be appointed.

THE Gazette of India of the 3rd instant contains the amended rules for the encouragement of the study of Oriental languages among the junior members of the Bengal Civil Service. The rules will come into force from July 1, 1880. Degrees of honour, with a diploma from the Government of India, carry with them a reward of Rs.2,000 in Urdu, Hindi, and Bengali; Rs.4,000 in Persian, and Rs.5,000 in Arabic and Sanskrit. We note that Pushtu and Beluchi are omitted from the list of languages, though Uriya is included. There are only eight or nine covenanted appointments in Orissa. Pushtu and Beluchi are languages a knowledge of which ought to be made general at least in the Civil Service and the Army. Mr. Jenkyns, C.S., secretary to Sir Louis Cavagnari, was perhaps the only man of his service who had passed in both. A recommendation was made at last Friday's meeting of the Society of Arts, by Mr. Hyde Clarke, that Turkish should also be made a pass language.

THE Queen has been graciously pleased to appoint C. C. Lees, Esq., C.M.G., to be her Majesty's Consul-General in the Island of Borneo.

THE United Service Gazette states that immediate orders have been issued from the India-office that officers at home on private affairs return to India by the earliest opportunity. Passages for several will be provided in the P. and O. steamers leaving this and the following week.

ON Jan. 10 the railway from Rukh northwards had reached Mittri, a distance of 122 miles. This distance has been accomplished in ten days less than the time calculated on.

THE Pioneer says that according to trustworthy rumours, the Foreign Department has made certain discoveries relating to Kashmir and Russia.

IN the last meeting of the Viceroy's Legislative Council the Religious Congregations Bill was passed. Mr. Stokes obtained leave to introduce a bill to amend the Bombay Civil Courts Act of 1869. Mr. Thompson introduced the bill to provide for the survey and demarcation of land in British Burma. The select committee's report on the bill to amend the law relating to the district cesses and rural police in British Burma was presented.

THE Vienna correspondent of the Standard hears that General Gourko is spoken of as the commander of the Merv expedition. He also telegraphs as follows:—

"Teheran telegrams report that a meeting at Herat unde Ayoob Khan lately decreed an armed opposition against every Persian or English attempt to enter Herat, and that Herat shall be held until the result of the Russian expedition to Merv is known, so that Ayoob may eventually govern there under Russian protection. A letter from Tiflis in the Neue Freie Presse brings fresh details of the Russian preparations for the next Merv expedition. Three Russian military intendants arrived on Jan. 25 at Asterabad to buy provisions and forage to be conveyed to the valley of the Attrek, through which a part of the Merv expedition will pass, and in which nine Russian provision depots, which will also be military stations, are to be established. The said Russian intendants are ordered to proceed afterwards into the interior of the province of Khorasan to buy some thousands of sheep, oxen, and calves for the same purpose. Large stores are also to be transported from Astrachan and Baku to Krasnovodsk, to be forwarded thence partly to Tchikislar and partly to the valley of the Attrek. The English Government is well informed of these Russian preparations, as an Anglo-Indian officer is also in Asterabad to watch the Russian agents; in addition to which, from other parts of Khorasan, English officers will report on the Russian preparations."

COL. JOHN HUGH EDMOND JOHNSON, M.S.C., died suddenly at Fort St. George on Jan. 14, apparently from an overdose of chloral. The deceased officer entered the service (2nd European Regiment) in 1852.

THE official accounts furnished by the Press Commissioner show a gain of Rs.97,65,674 in opium over the estimate for nine months of the financial year, and a saving at the same time of Rs.63,35,195 in estimated loss by exchange. On these two items alone, therefore, the revenue in nine months shows a gain of one crore and sixty-one lakhs.

THE return of revenue from salt shows an improvement in 1879-80 over 1878-79 of Rs.19,88,535, contributed for the most part by Inland Customs. Compared with the year 1875-76, the current year's revenue shows as follows:—Increases — Bengal, Rs.54,527; Inland Customs, Rs.10,60,411; Madras, Rs.22,65,948; Bombay, Rs.24,60,930; Sind, Rs.1,07,992. Decrease — Burma, Rs.8,033, Total result, Rs.59,39,765. A steady growth of nearly £600,000 in five years ought to be considered satisfactory.

THE Bombay Gazette is given to understand that it is in contemplation to abolish the system of grades in the Political Department. The emoluments which at present attach to the grades will, under the proposed system, attach to appointments, and be proportioned to their importance.

THE published returns of railway receipts show that from Jan. 1 to Nov. 15, 1879, there was collected more on the guaranteed lines than in the same period of 1878 by Rs.32,53,230, and on the State lines more by Rs.46,44,775. On the guaranteed lines the following show a decrease:—Great Indian Peninsula, Rs.17,32,366; Eastern Bengal, Rs.2,97,848; Oudh and Rohilkund, Rs.2,38,955. The principal increases are: East Indian, Rs.32,41,240; Sind and Delhi, &c., Rs.16,04,691; Bombay and Baroda, Rs.4,19,993. The total excess of receipts in 1879 is given at Rs.78,98,005.

THE Secretary of State has sanctioned a proposal of the Indian Government to modify Section 135 (c) of the Civil Pension Code, so as to enable the Government to grant an extraordinary family gratuity without reference to the Home Government, provided such gratuity does not exceed Rs.500.

A GOVERNMENT savings bank has been opened in the office of the managers of the State railways. The manager in each case is appointed secretary, and is empowered to deduct one anna from each rupee of the salary of every married servant employed under him to be deposited in the savings bank, and half an anna from each rupee of the salary of every other servant. A certain per centum of earnings of the railways is to be distributed as bonus among the depositors.

DURING November the number of horses imported into British India was less than half what were imported during the corresponding period of last year. Cotton goods, in round numbers, increased by about eight million yards, the figure standing at 25,340,329, and of this Bengal took the larger share. The quantity of liquors imported was 152,599 gallons, and railway plant and rolling-stock, other than Government stores, were of the value of Rs.4,57,391. There were exported from British India to foreign countries, 2,025 cwts. coffee, more than double the quantity exported during November, 1878; 12,512 cwts. opium; and 5,449,310lb. tea and 1,221,146lb. tobacco, both exhibiting a decline. Cotton, raw, however, rose to 83,327 cwts., of which the larger portion was exported by Bombay. The aggregate value of the merchandise and treasure imported into and exported from the country via the Suez Canal was Rs.5,42,86,603. The gross amount of import duty collected on the principal articles of merchandise was Rs.37,07,122, and export duty Rs.1,96,809.

FROM December 1st to 15th Government paper to the value of 32 lakhs was enfaced for transmission to England, but only two lakhs were retransferred from London. This makes the total enfaced from India from June 9th, 1867, 3,729 lakhs, against which must be set off 3,168 lakhs retransferred, leaving a balance against India of 561 lakhs.

THE amount of cash in the reserve treasury of the Government of India on December 31 was Rs.1,66,52,965-10-3. On December 24 the cash reserve stood at Rs.1,97,95,200-10-3, so that during the week there was a decrease of Rs.31,42,225.

THE cash balance of India on November 30 last, as compared with the corresponding figures for the two previous years, was—1877, Rs.9,65,17,450; 1878, Rs.10,09,88,210; 1879, Rs.11,44,37,811.

FROM the accounts of the trade and navigation of British India for the first eight months of the current financial year, as compared with those of the corresponding period of last year, we see that the value of merchandise imported was Rs.25,51,39,309, as against Rs.25,78,94,464, and that of merchandise exported Rs.39,61,34,328, as against Rs.37,86,77,552. The value of treasure imported was Rs.6,91,12,956, as against Rs.3,73,59,722, and of that exported Rs.1,66,94,976, as against Rs.1,90,39,444. The gross amount of import duty collected was Rs.2,65,70,540, as against Rs.2,77,41,478, and that of export duty Rs.29,59,641, as against Rs.29,25,915.

THE United Service Gazette thinks it only fair to say that the removal of Bengal troops from Candahar, and the change by which Lower Afghanistan is to be handed over to Bombay, are mainly due to the persistent representations of Sir Richard Temple against the injustice done to his Presidency by sending Bengal regiments to do duty on the Sind frontier. We believe that General Warre, in his communications with the Horse Guards, energetically supported the Governor of Bombay, and that his views were endorsed at home by the highest military authority, which considered Bengal had quite enough to do without looking after Sind and the country in front of it. Sir Richard Temple's views were embodied in a pamphlet by Mr. Charles Williams, published and noticed by us last May, and the changes now made are precisely in accordance with the measures advocated in that brochure.

AT a well-attended meeting in Bombay it was decided to petition the Viceroy to alter the date of the departure of the overland mails from Saturday evening to Friday evening.

WE are glad to be able to report that the office and reading-room of the National Indian Association are now on the point of being opened at 6, John-street, Bedford-row, W.C. A provisional committee has been appointed for the reading-room, consisting of three English and three Indian members, who are framing the rules for its direction. We understand that the annual subscription will be one guinea. As the room will be supplied with the best Indian newspapers there is every reason to expect that it will receive cordial support from the Indian gentlemen in London and from Englishmen, and that it will prove a useful centre of intercourse and a convenient place of resort for its members.

WE have received the half-yearly issue of the "India List," a work which is to the Anglo-Indian families what the "Army List" is said to be to the mothers and daughters in garrison towns, or what a peerage is to parvenus, an indispensable vade mecum. It is as full and accurate as ever.

OPENING OF PARLIAMENT.

THE proverbial Queen's weather which prevailed this afternoon may be received as a good omen of the fulfilment of the hopes which are expressed in the concluding paragraph of the Queen's Speech, referring to Afghan affairs:—

"At the close of your last session I expressed my hope that the Treaty of Gandamak had happily terminated the war in Afghanistan. In conformity with its provisions, my Envoy, with his retinue, was honourably received and entertained by the Ameer at Cabul. While engaged, however, in the exercise of their duty, he and those connected with the Embassy were treacherously attacked by overwhelming numbers, and, after an heroic defence, were almost all massacred. An outrage so intolerable called for condign chastisement, and my troops, which, pursuant to the stipulations of the Treaty, either had withdrawn or were withdrawing from the territories governed by the Ameer, were ordered to retrace their steps. The skill exhibited in the rapid march upon Cabul, and in the advances upon the other lines of action, reflects the highest credit upon the officers and men of my British and native forces, whose bravery has shone with its wonted lustre in every collision with the enemy. The abdication of the Ameer and the unsettled condition of the country render the recall of my troops impossible for the present; but the principle on which my Government has hitherto acted remains unchanged, and, while determined to make the frontiers of my Indian Empire strong, I desire to be in friendly relations alike with those who may rule in Afghanistan and with the people of that country."

CASUALTIES BEFORE CABUL.

THE following is a corrected list of casualties among officers:—Killed on Dec. 11—Lieutenant Hardie, F-A Royal Artillery; Lieutenant Hearsey and Ricardo, 9th Lancers; and Lieutenant Forbes, 14th Bengal Lancers. On Dec. 13—Captain Butson, 9th Lancers and Lieutenant Forbes, 92nd Highlanders. On Dec. 14—Captain Spens and Lieutenant Gaisford, 72nd Highlanders. On Dec. 23—Captain Dundas, Royal Engineers, and Lieutenant Nugent, of the Sappers. Died of wounds—Captain Cook, V.C., 5th Goorkhas; Lieutenant Montanaro, Mountain Battery. Total killed—12. Wounded on Dec. 10—Major Fitz-Hugh, 5th Goorkhas. On Dec. 11—Colonel Cleland and Captain Mackenzie, 9th Lancers; Lieutenant Cook, 3rd Sikhs. On Dec. 12—Lieutenants Fergusson, 72nd Highlanders, and Fasken, 3rd Sikhs. On the 13th, Lieutenants Chisholme and Trower, 9th Lancers. On Dec. 14—Captain Gordon, 92nd Highlanders; Lieutenant Egerton, 72nd Highlanders, and Lieutenant Battye of the Guides. On Dec. 17—2nd Lieutenant Sunderland, 72nd Highlanders. On Dec. 24—Lieutenants Murdoch, Royal Engineers, and Gambier, 5th Punjab Cavalry.

THE TUKHT-I-SHAHR.

THE following is the Pioneer correspondent's description of the Tukht-i-Shahr, the key of the mountain ridge south of the city of Cabul:—"This peak is the highest of a clump of mountains south of Cabul and lying between the city and Charasiab, and was the point whence Captain Stratton tried to heliograph to the Shutargardan in the early days of our occupation. It is cone-shaped, looked at from Sherpur, and on its southern side joins a ridge running southwards above the village of Indikee. The sides facing Cabul are very steep, and covered with huge boulders polished by wind and rain, and of a kind to check any storming party. Perfect cover is afforded to men holding it, and on the summit is a well-built sungar of great thickness, covering a natural cavity in the rocks, which has been made bomb-proof by some Afghan engineer, who understood the strength of the point. Fifty men can lie in perfect security behind the sungar, or in the hole below it, and could choose their own time for firing at an advancing enemy. Outside the sungar and a little lower down is a cave, wherein another strong body could hide themselves, and act in a similar way, while their flank to the left would be guarded by a broken line of rocks extending down to the kotal, where the Bala Hissar ridge meets them. Just between the two ranges is a low, dome-shaped hill, blocking up the otherwise open kotal; and round this a foot-path winds, leading to the sungar, but so narrow as only to admit of men going up in Indian file." This is the peak which was shelled on December 12, and which was stormed the following day."

THE LATE MAJOR COOK, V.C.

THE following divisional order, expressing regret at the death of Major Cook, was published by General Roberts during the investment of Sherpur:—"It is with deep regret the Lieutenant General announces to the Cabul field force the death, from a wound received on Dec. 12, of Major John Cook, V.C., 5th Goorkhas. While yet a young officer Major Cook served at Umbeyla in 1863, where he distinguished himself; and in the Black Mountain campaign in 1868. Joining the Kuram field force on its formation, Major Cook was present at the capture of the Peiwar Kotal, his conduct on that occasion earning for him the admiration of the whole force and the Victoria Cross. In the return in the Monghyr Pass he again brought himself prominently to notice by his cool and gallant bearing. In the capture of the heights at Sung-i-Nawishta Major Cook again distinguished himself; and in the attack on the Takht-i-Shahr peak on Dec. 12 he ended a noble career in a manner worthy even of his great name for bravery. By Major Cook's death her Majesty has lost the services of an officer who would, had he been spared, have arisen to the highest honours of his profession, and Sir F. Roberts feels sure the whole Cabul field force will share in the pain his loss has occasioned him."

WITHDRAWAL OF THE PRESS RULES.

THE Government of India have decided to allow the rules for the regulation of war correspondents with the troops on service to remain in abeyance and to leave it to the discretion of the generals commanding to place such restrictions on the Press correspondents in Afghanistan as they may, under the circumstances, judge it right to impose. Experience has shown that in contending with an uncivilised enemy in such a country as Afghanistan the dangers which the rules were framed to meet have so much less force than was anticipated that it has been found possible to relax the restrictions considerably without incurring risk. The rules were drawn up at the Horse Guards by highly experienced officers, and admitted nothing that under the circumstances of war with a civilised country is not considered by high authorities to be absolutely needed for the well-being of the army and the success of military operations It has been found after trial that the circumstances of the present war admit of the rules being held in abeyance, but no one will be permitted to proceed to the front, or, being there, to undertake the duties of a Press correspondent without obtaining the license now required to enable him to proceed to the front.—Press Commissioner, Jan. 1.

THE ROYAL CONGRATULATIONS.

THE following message by the Queen-Empress was published at Cabul:—"I cannot sufficiently express my satisfaction at, and thankfulness for, the great victory gained by General Roberts on the 23rd. Pray convey to him my high sense of the conduct of my brave troops and my deep concern at the loss of life and anxiety for the wounded." Another congratulatory telegram was received from the Secretary of State for India. General Roberts has published the following:—"The Lieutenant General feels sure that the gracious message of the Queen-Empress will afford the troops under his command as much pleasure as it has afforded him. The Cabul field force may well feel proud of the high honour thus bestowed upon them, and of her Majesty's appreciation of their services, and he, the Lieutenant General, desires to place on record his sense of the good work performed by the troops under his command against an enemy vastly superior in numbers, and at the time of the year when the inclemency of the climate added considerably to the hardships of all ranks, and which were cheerfully undergone by all."

THE ATTACK ON SHERPUR.

WE were waiting for the development of the real attack, and shortly before six o'clock it came. From beyond Bemaru and the eastern trenches and walls came a roar of voices so loud and menacing that it seemed as if an army 50,000 strong were charging down upon our thin line of men. Led by their Ghazis, the main body of Afghans collected in the villages and orchards on the eastern side of Sherpur had rushed out in one dense mob and filled the air with their cry of "Allah-il-Allah!" The roar surged forward as their line advanced, but it was answered by such a roll of musketry that it was drowned for an instant, and then merged into the general din, which told us that our men with Martinis and Sniders were holding their own against the attacking force. For ten minutes the roar was continuous, and their musketry fire dwindled down to occasional volleys and scattered shots from the south eastern bastion to the Bemaru heights, where the mountain guns were waiting for daylight before opening fire. The eastern defences were in charge of Brigadier General Hugh Gough at the eastern end of the heights, and Colonel Jenkins, of the Guides, from the trenches on the slopes of the hill to the corner bastion facing Siah Sung. The troops defending the position were the Guides Infantry in the trenches about Bemaru, one hundred men of the 28th P.I. further to the south, and 67th Foot. The latter were reinforced by two companies of the 92nd Highlanders from the reserve. When the attack was made it was still so dark and misty that little could be seen in front of the trenches, and the orders were to reserve fire until the advancing masses of Afghans could be clearly made out. The men of the 28th were the first to open fire, and they fired volley after volley at such long ranges that they effectually scared away even the Ghazis from their neighbourhood. That the fire was not otherwise effective was proved by only one dead body being found afterwards in front of their lines. General Hugh Gough from the hillside, hearing such a tremendous fusillade below, fired star-shells, which burst in the air, and showed the attacking force in the fields and orchards nearly 1,000 yards away. The Afghans opened fire in turn, but their shooting was wild and ineffective, though the bullets dropped dangerously about cantonments. The native hospital seemed the point towards which the enemy worked, taking it, perhaps, as a landmark to guide them; but their right flank was directed towards Bemaru and the trenches on the slopes of the hill. The Guides joined in the fusillade, and the attack was broken while yet the advanced Ghazis were 500 or 600 yards away. Sniders at that distance told with precision, and to make headway against them was impossible. The bullets searched every yard of open ground, and made even the orchards almost untenable. To the right of the sepoys of the 28th were the 67th and the Highlanders, waiting, with characteristic discipline, the order to fire.

THE AFGHAN WAR CRY.—Through the mist at last appeared a dense mass of men waving swords and knives, shouting their war cry, and firing incessantly as they advanced. The order came at last for our soldiers to open fire, and the Afghans were then so close that the volleys told with murderous effect. Some of the Ghazis were shot within eighty yards of our rifles, so patiently was the attack awaited; while thirty bodies were counted afterwards well within 200 yards range.

COLLAPSE OF THE ATTACK.—The attack collapsed as suddenly as it had begun; the Afghans saw what execution men in trenches and behind parapets can do with breech-loaders in their hands, and they took cover behind walls and trees, from whence they expended thousands of cartridges, doing us but little damage. Our ammunition was too precious to be needlessly wasted, and only when clusters of men got within range were volleys fired to scatter them. As day broke the two mountain guns with an 18-pounder and two of F-A Battery in the corner bastion, shelled the villages and orchards, and it was believed that the Ghazis were too disheartened to try a second assault. About eleven o'clock, however, after five hours' skirmishing, they succeeded in getting a few thousand of their more desperate followers together, and tried again to assault our lines. They were driven back more quickly than on the first occasion, and could, indeed, scarcely be said to have advanced 100 yards in their rude formation of attack. Shortly after this they began to waver and to slacken their fire, and when their scouts reported, as no doubt was the case, that a new force was crossing the Logar River they became a demoralised mob bent upon seeking safety at the earliest opportunity. General Charles Gough had left Luttabund in the early morning, and, upon arriving at Butkhak, had been able to communicate by heliograph with General Roberts. The heliograph flashing away to the east in the Cabul plain must have warned Mahomed Jan of the near approach of our reinforcements, and the clouds of dust rising between Butkhak and the Logar River showed him that troops were moving onwards and would perhaps take him in rear. In any case the villages east of Sherpur were, in two or three hours, nearly empty of men; the plain beyond was covered with Afghans streaming towards Siah Sung and Cabul. The Kohistani section, to the number of fully 5,000, went away to the north, homewards, taking their women, whom they had brought down to witness their triumph with them.

THE BRITISH ATTACK.—It was now our turn to attack instead of being attacked. The guns shelled the fields wherever parties of men were within range; two guns F-A and an 18-pounder making grand practice at so close a range as 300 yards, and the cavalry were sent out by way of the Bemaru gorge to cut up the fugitives. The 5th Punjab Cavalry were fortunate to get among a detached body on the maidan south of the lake. When the charge was over, 30 Afghans were lying dead on the plain. The 9th Lancers joined them, and soon our horsemen were charging over the Siah Sung slopes. The main body of the enemy had got well away to the city, but all stragglers were hunted down in the nullahs in which they took shelter, and were shot down. Two or three lancers or sowars were told off to each straggler, and the men, dismounting, used their carbines when the unlucky Afghan had been hemmed in. Eighty is said to have been the number killed by the cavalry. Following in the wake of the 9th Lancers and the 5th Punjab Cavalry came the Sappers, with every engineer officer in camp, their orders being to blow up and burn all the villages and forts lately occupied by the enemy. The cavalry had cleared the fields and open ground of all Afghans, but in the villages some fanatics remained, and these, fastening themselves up securely in houses or towers, were blown up by the mines laid by the engineers. Lieutenant Murdoch had a very narrow escape. Entering a fortified village he kicked open the door of a house, and was greeted with a volley from three or four men inside. He was wounded in the neck, but not dangerously, and as the Afghans refused to surrender the blasting charge was laid near the house and they were killed when the mine was fired.

THE FATAL ACCIDENT TO TWO OFFICERS.—A sad accident occurred in another fort. Capt. Dundas, V.C., and Lieut. Nugent, R.E., had constructed three mines, which were to destroy the walls and towers, and, all being ready, they went back to light the fuses. The Sappers were drawn up outside under their European non-commissioned officer, and noticed that two of the mines exploded almost instantly. Their officers were still within the walls, and when the dust and smoke cleared away they were still missing. Search was made, and the bodies of Capt. Dundas and Lieut. Nugent were found lying under the débris. Both officers were dead. It is conjectured that the time fuses, instead of burning slowly, flared up like a train of powder, and that the mines exploded a few seconds after the fuses were lighted. We have thus lost two good officers by an accident which might have been prevented if the equipment of the Sappers had not been cut down by the parsimony of the Government. So few fuses were sent up from India when the force advanced upon Cabul that the engineers had to make others, and these were of course defective. It was those of their own make which were being used when the explosion occurred.—Pioneer.

THE COLONIAL CHURCH.—On Tuesday the Christian Knowledge Society voted about £500 for Colonial Church purposes, and notices were given of a grant of £500 to the Colonial Church of Lahore.

COURT-MARTIAL.—A general court martial recently assembled at Dorunda, under the presidency of a subadar of the 36th Madras N.I., to try Jemadar Shiek Surver for conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in having, at Dorunda, between the 1st and 10th days of December, 1878, when in charge of Nos. 3 and 4 sections of letter A Company, 11th Regiment Madras Native Infantry, permitted the men of these sections, when performing the annual course of musketry, to fire in the first period of such course in a kneeling instead of a standing position, knowing this to be contrary to the Madras musketry regulations. The court found the prisoner guilty, and ordered him to be placed at the bottom of the list of his rank. In confirming the sentence his Excellency Sir Frank Haines says—"I have never met with a case in which fraud and apathy have been more mischievously mixed up with the performance of a military duty than in this. The gross misconduct of which the prisoner has been convicted has caused valuable prizes to be withheld from the army, bringing at the same time grave discredit on his own corps. His defence shows the perfunctory manner in which he represents himself as having performed an important duty, for he affirms that while the men he was appointed to superintend were carrying out their practice, he himself was seated in a position from which he could not see what they were doing. Jemadar Sheik Surver has escaped dismissal from the service, a punishment he well deserved, and has an opportunity of showing that he has become aware that a passive, apathetic performance of duty is not that which is required of him, and that a strictly honest application of the regulations of the service is incumbent on him. The sentence involves substantial punishment, and I confirm it. Had it been more severe I should have added my approval."

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE GOVERNOR GENERALSHIP OF LORD MINTO.*

THE newly-published volume of the life and letters of the first Earl of Minto includes the Indian period of his busy life, and closes with the touchingly sad notice of his death before he could reach the northern home for which he yearned with an intense longing, well, though briefly, indicated in the excerpts from his letters. The close of his tenure of the office of Governor General, which he filled with a success that added honour to the name of the great Company, was embittered by his experience of ingratitude on the part of the home Government. The supercession, in order to make room for Lord Moira, the despatch conveying which crossed his own intimating his desire to be relieved from his post, was made none the less bitter by the elevation to an earldom. The consentient approval of the Anglo-Indian public and the warm acknowledgment by the Court of Directors of his eminent services do much, as he says, to soften the affront, than which it seems to the biographer that "nothing could be more undeserved, more ungracious, or more discreditable to all parties concerned." Yet the student of history, unswayed by political partisanship and unmoved by family affection, may reflect on the ingratitude that ruined the first Governor General and repaid his grand services by poverty and obscurity. In 1813 the House of Commons rose to do honour to "the Chatham of the East." In 1813 Sir Gilbert Elliot, the whilome mover of the impeachment of Sir Elijah Impey, one of the managers in the trial of Warren Hastings, afterwards President of the Board of Control, as Lord Minto and a successful Governor General, felt the bitterness of English ingratitude to the great proconsuls of India, among whom he won a prominent place. He writes that "my answers to the thanks of the two Houses of Parliament were received by the Chancellor and the Speaker at the same critical time when the movers of the thanks were treating me like a criminal."

Of his administration the earlier years are more fully illustrated by his letters. The last two years are expressly passed over, as the important measures of that period, though creditable to him and profitable to India, are not alluded to in his unofficial correspondence. The chapters on the relations with Persia and Turkey, the missions to Persia, Lahore, and Cabul, are especially interesting, and full of farseeing wisdom. History repeats itself, and, mutatis mutandis, the clear insight into the danger of India on the western side, and the bold patriotism which finds its expression in the official and unofficial documents made available by the accomplished editor would serve as an admirable example to some of the statesmen of to-day. To have made selection of such public servants as Malcolm, Metcalfe, and Elphinstone proves the possession of great qualities as a ruler. To have written such words as we read on page 55, on our diplomacy with Persia, deserves almost the praise of prescience. We cannot but quote a passage which in itself contains an axiom of Indian political wisdom—"I am happy to think there may as yet be a good deal of speculation in these anticipations of distant danger, but, when so great an interest is depending, prudence will look beyond the scene immediately under our eyes and provide, in the midst of apparent security, against remote but possible danger." So wrote the Whig statesman in 1807, with his attention fixed on French intrigue in Persia as menacing the peace of India and the honour of England. The episode of the embassy of Sir Harford Jones to the Court of Teheran, and "the withdrawal of Persia from the sphere of the operations of the diplomacy of the Company's Government," is very clearly narrated, and the dignified assertion of the sovereign powers of that Government as regards the States of Asia, quoted from Lord Minto's letter to the secret committee, fully supports the views expressed. "The most brilliant chapter in Lord Minto's Indian Government is that of his foreign policy." "At its commencement, dread of a French invasion of India haunted the imagination of statesmen. At its close, France had lost all her acquisitions eastward of the Cape. The Isles of Bourbon and of France, the Moluccas and Java, had been added to the colonial possessions of Great Britain, the fleets of France were swept from the Indian seas, and England was without a rival in the Eastern hemisphere." Thus does Lady Minto epitomise the great achievements of the results of which Mauritius alone remains. But before those were accomplished, besides energetically suppressing dacoities and maintaining internal peace, the power of the Government was put forth to punish the Joasmi pirates, and the Governor General found himself obliged to proceed to Madras to quell the discontents and punish the mutinous officers of the Presidency army, who were justified by the event in their "confidence in Lord Minto's justice and moderation." The most interesting portion of the volume is that which contains the record of the Java expedition; "a great success, without any mixture of bad fortune." This we leave to the reader. We do not discuss the value of the conquests, lest we should be accused of Jingoism, and because the work before us is not a history. It is a pleasant and valuable contribution to the annals of India. It is a memorial of one who laboured unremittingly for the public good, and whose more showy exploits were ever accompanied by indefatigable and successful, but laborious and exhausting, application to the details of Indian administration, and, above all, it is an affectionate tribute to the man of whom it is written—"During the period of an absence of seven years there was no one day in which the evidence does not exist of the fond affection with which his mind dwelt on the domestic circles from which he was severed, and on the distant prospect of reunion with those whom he loved." He could be the kindly host and centre of a family circle, not only irreproachable in its purity, but attractive by its social charm, at Government House, but he longed for the distant home. The kindly surprise that the Calcutta bachelors prepared for him at the ball in 1812, when, "as he entered the door, the opposite end of the room disclosed a view of Minto House," showed their strong sympathy with the homeward longing of the greatest man in India for his "ain countree." In the affecting words of Lady Minto, "no prophetic instinct warned him that in the vision created by friendly regard he was about to see the scene he loved so well." Simply and briefly is the pathetic close of his life told, when he succumbed not to age, but to the effects of that toil, as fatal as battle, which has built up the Indian Empire at the cost of so many noble lives.

HERAT.*

WHATEVER may be the opinion formed as to the conclusions arrived at by Col. Malleson there can be no dispute as to the service he has rendered to his fellow-countrymen by the publication of the volume bearing the name of that city, round which so great interests are about to gather. Commencing with a careful exposition of the present political state of Khorasan, and of the results which must attend upon its appropriation, either by Persia, Russia, or England, he proves his statements by a thorough retrospect of the past history of the garden and granary of Central Asia. One fact is strongly enforced—and that is, the real relation between Afghanistan and the Afghans. The latter are the Highlanders of the country, which we commonly confound under their name. "Not only have the Afghans not built a single city in Afghanistan, but they have not occupied a single city without impairing its resources, pillaging its people, injuring its trade, and diminishing its importance." This he shows to be especially true of Herat, whose Turki element is utterly hostile to the Afghan bullies. Col. Malleson expressly repudiates writing in the interest of a party. He feels warmly, and expresses strongly, the importance of Herat, and urges its speedy and permanent occupation, because "the honour and interest of England are threatened by the advance of Russia upon Merv, and would be seriously jeopardised by any hesitation on the part of England to occupy" the city. From past history, and from the collective observation of modern travellers, he draws together all the arguments which prove the political, strategic, and commercial value of the "Pearl of Khorasan." Whether convinced by his arguments or not, no reader of his work can lay it down without feeling that all that can be said (and it is a very extensive "all") has been said in favour of the policy advocated. Very few readers, we fancy, will fail to acknowledge that they have learned a good deal and have been pleasantly conducted through byways of the history as well as the highways of Khorasan and the adjacent territories. The latter moiety of the work is devoted to carefully-compiled details of the roads "connecting Herat with Kandahar to the south; with Mashad to the west; with Sarrakhs, Merv, and Charjui to the north; with Maimene, Andkho, Shiborgan, Takhtapul (near Balkh), Khulm, and Faizabad to the north east." Finally Khulm is connected with Kabul, and the latter with Herat. Thus the reader is enabled to make himself master of all the corresponding routes, and estimate the relative importance of the positions of the six cities spoken of in the chapter on the new frontier "as the places which should be occupied in order to gain a really safe frontier for Hindustan," the strong places of the countries of Eastern Khorasan, Afghan Turkestan, and Badakshan. Col. Malleson can "certainly claim the merit of success so far as he has laboured to enlighten the minds of many regarding the condition of these countries, the wellbeing of which is of the deepest moment to England." The perusal is not only instructive but pleasant, and the reader is assisted by an excellent map, while subsequent reference is facilitated by a full index.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

THE PORTUGUESE TREATY.

THE treaty made between her Majesty and the King of Portugal for the establishment of a customs union between the Indian territories of the Portuguese Government and our own, has not, we think, received the attention that it deserves. The arrangement seems well calculated to further the interests of both countries. There are two points in the treaty which call for special attention; one, that which gives the salt and excise into English hands; the other, that which provides for connecting the southern Mahratta country with the sea at Goa. With regard to the former there can be no doubt, we think, that the customs union must work to the advantage of both countries; anything which tends to the freedom of commercial intercourse is a pure benefit; and the abolition of the customs cordon on the Portuguese border line must prove an advantage. The Indian Government undertake to buy or lease the salt works, giving liberal compensation, and for this privilege and that of excise the Portuguese Government is liberally paid. It is something, too, to remove the "cities of refuge" to which Bombay insolvents have periodically fled, and in many instances lived, to enjoy the fruits of their spoils gathered here. And a great gain to Southern India from this treaty will be the cheapening the cost of salt to the whole Southern Mahratta Country. The Goa salt pans, when managed by the British Government, and the salt is carried by rail to Southern India, will give this necessary of life to the people there at a much reduced cost. It is only when we come to the railway question that any difference of opinion arises. We confess that it does not strike one pleasantly at first that the outlet of the railway which is to connect the Southern Mahratta Country with the sea should be in foreign territory. But, on the other hand, it must be remembered that Portugal is one of England's oldest and truest allies. It is now nearly two centuries since the relations of England and Portugal were closely cemented, dating from 1683, during the reign of Pedro II., the third monarch of the House of Braganza. Since that time, with the exception of a misunderstanding in 1831, when a British fleet was sent to the Tagus to insist on redress being given to British subjects for acts of violence committed, the relations of the two countries have been friendly and even cordial. England has supported Portugal against both the Spaniards and the French, and she assisted Brazil—when a part of the Portuguese Empire—in recovering possession of Portuguese Guiana. England has been the home of the Portuguese Royal family in times of revolutionary disturbances in their own country. She gave her best offices to restore peace and harmony during the domestic troubles which occurred fifty years ago. The present effort, therefore, to remove all barriers to the freest intercourse between the people of the two Governments in India is only carrying out the policy of good will and cordial intercourse which has existed almost without interruption for two centuries. There can be no danger of any difference with Portugal, and we need not fear to have one of our railways running through Portuguese territory. If Indian finances can be saved a million sterling in the development of the Southern Mahratta Country there will be so much the more to spend elsewhere; many parts of the country are crying out for communications, and it is a clear gain when this responsibility is shifted from India's shoulders. And when we think of the railways in so many countries in Europe, which only connect with the sea by lines running through foreign territory, we think that we may safely put aside as mere sentiment the idea that this railway should necessarily be kept on British ground. So far as Bombay is concerned it cannot make the slightest difference whether Goa or Karwar be the outlet for Southern India. Either port will benefit us by augmenting the trade with the Southern Mahratta Country; for our large market, and our large harbour full of shipping from all parts of the world, must continue the great entrepôt and port of transhipment for the cotton and other produce of Southern India.—Bombay Gazette.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

THE NAGA RAID INTO CACHAR.—Considerable excitement has been caused in Calcutta by the news that on the night of the 27th ult. the Nagas made a raid into the Cachar district and attacked the Baladhan tea-garden, killing the manager, Mr. Blyth, and nine or ten coolies, and burning all the buildings. At first there were some doubts as to whether the raiders were Kukies or Nagas, but it now seems clear that they belonged to the Angami section of the latter tribe. The event caused a scare among the coolies of the neighbouring gardens, most of whom fled; but at the date of the latest news there had been no further raids. Confidence is being gradually restored, and the coolies are returning to work. The Deputy Commissioner and the District Superintendent of Police in Cachar have hastened to Baladhan with troops and police. They were expected to arrive on the 30th ult., and the Chief Commissioner of Assam, who was in Calcutta for the purpose, it is believed, of conferring with the Viceroy on the Naga question, started at once for Cachar. Official communiqués hold out some hope of the retreat of the Nagas being cut off, but this seems hardly probable. The district authorities do not consider any further troops necessary, there being already one regiment—the 34th Native Infantry—in Cachar. It is, however, broken up into a number of detachments, and the general opinion here is that the Government has been hitherto somewhat remiss in providing for the safety of this, one of the most important tea-growing districts in India, and one especially liable to attack from the savage hill tribes.—Times Telegram.

RAINFALL.—The total rainfall registered at Alipur last year was 43·51 inches. The average fall for the past twenty-four years, registered at the Surveyor General's office, was 61·64 inches.—Englishman.

MEETINGS OF COMPANIES.—At the general meeting of the New Beerbhoom Coal Company, held Jan. 3, a dividend of Rs.6 per share for the half-year ending Oct. 31 was declared.—At the general meeting of the Calcutta Landing and Shipping Company, held Jan. 5, a dividend of Rs.6 per share for the half-year was declared.—Englishman.

COURTS-MARTIAL FOR INSUBORDINATION.—At a court-martial held at Lucknow on Dec. 2, Private George Manning, of the 2nd Battalion 14th Regt. of Foot, was found guilty of insubordination with violence. The court sentenced him to penal servitude for five years. Private Thomas Rooper, of the 2nd Battalion 14th Regt. of Foot, was also charged with insubordination, accompanied with personal violence, at Lucknow. The court found the prisoner guilty, and sentenced him to penal servitude for five years.—Englishman.

OPIUM SALES.—The following is the result of the opium sale held at the Government sale-room, No. 2, Bankshall-street, Jan. 5, 1880:—Behar, 2,350 chests; proceeds, Rs.29,40,000; Benares, 2,350 chests; proceeds, Rs.28,47,275.—Indian Daily News.

AN UNWISE MAGISTRATE.—It is to be hoped that the local Government will call for an explanation from Mr. Wall, the collector of Benares, of the singularly indiscreet course he adopted in prohibiting the Swami Dayanand Saraswast from delivering the speech which he wished to make very recently on the Vedantic theology. It is certainly an outrage on the first principles of British toleration to repress freedom of speech on a question of pure religious speculation. Mr. Wall can hardly pretend that his district is so out of hand that Hindoo metaphysicians must not be allowed to discuss their views of primitive Aryan philosophy for fear of a disturbance that he, the British magistrate, would be powerless to deal with. The mere idea is childish; and, to guard against native misconceptions that would be most deplorable, the local Government should see at once that Benares is no longer discredited by the maintenance of restrictions unworthy of the broad liberality of the British régime.—Pioneer.

RAJPUTANA.—We are extremely sorry to hear of the death of H.H. the Maharaja of Kishenghur, which melancholy event took place on Christmas Day. His Highness was a very good Sanscrit scholar, and, although too much of a conservative, had the reputation of being a wise ruler. He has left three sons; the eldest, a grown up young prince, Sardool Sing, succeeds to the guddee.—Feypore Gazette.

THE CALCUTTA MUNICIPALITY.—It is stated that the finances of the municipality are now in quite a flourishing condition. At the end of 1879 there was a balance of nearly half a lakh of rupees in hand, after paying off the debts and deficits of the two previous years and all current expenses.

SANITARY REPORT N.W.P.—The sanitary report of the North West Provinces this year gives more detailed information than previous reports have contained as to births and deaths During 1878 the number of births per mille of population in the municipalities varied from 4·99 in Sundila in the Hurdoi district to 71·0 per mille in Khurja and Hurduagunj. Similarly the number of deaths per mille varies from 147·03 in Shahdara to 11·53 in Colonelgunj in the Gonda district. In the rural circles we find Muttra with 71·56 deaths per mille and Kheri with 16·55. The Government of India are so pleased with the success obtained and with the correctness of the figures that they have ordered the registation of all births to be undertaken, not in towns only, but throughout the provinces, from 1879.—Bombay Gazette.

BENARES.—The local Government has accorded its sanction to a scheme which has been before it for some considerable time now for the proper drainage of the city of Benares. The carrying out of a waterworks project there has also been sanctioned.—Bombay Gazetts.

A CALCUTTA COMPLAINT OF THE COTTON DUTIES.—A complaint comes from Calcutta of the operation of the new Import Duty Act as regards the trade in cotton goods. "Under the revised Act goods differing, perhaps, slightly in appearance, but considerably in manufacture, from those which had become established in favour, were admitted free, and were thus protected against the old makes, on which the duty was retained. These new goods are in consequence now monopolising the trade, though not, on their own merits, so well adapted to the needs of consumers; if they were they would have so approved themselves before, and the trade would have been built up accordingly. The factories specially designed to produce the old cloths at the least possible cost cannot make the new with equal economy, and would benefit if demand reverted to the former, as it would do if relieved from capricious legislation. But it is not only the manufacturer who is interested in the trade; the present system of levying duties presses with severity on the importer, whose trade marks must now be transferred to new cloths, and who thus risks a reputation which may have taken years to acquire. He also suffers loss by the opening for examination of bales at the custom-house, while the carelessness of an invoice clerk or a packer, or one of the accidents against which no care can protect him, may subject him to the charge of attempting to defraud the Government. Some change is therefore urgently needed, and, if the Government cannot muster courage enough to re-establish the duty on its former basis, a modification whereby all goods would receive impartial treatment would be advantageous."—Bombay Gazette.

THE NAGA HILLS.—A telegram from Zamba stockade, dated Jan. 10, says:—"Colonel Robertson's detachment left Kohima on the 1st and camped at Zullo River. They attacked and destroyed Cheswejima on the 3rd. One sepoy was slightly wounded. Five Nagas were killed, and a large amount of dhan destroyed. The Chitenoma Khel, of Kohima, fought against us. The enemy kept up a desultory fire on our men. On the 4th Lieutenant Macgregor, with seventy men, again visited the village, drove out the Nagas, destroyed more grain, and harassed the enemy. Most of the villages in the neighbourhood have come in owing to the destruction of Cheswejima. Naga labour, which was falling off, is again abundant. On the 6th the patrol between Piphima and Mr. Pughe's outpost on the Zamba River was fired on, and one sepoy of the 42nd killed and another wounded. The arms, ammunition, and accoutrements of the former fell into the enemy's hands. Saloji, with 100 men, was reported in the neighbourhood of Zamba stockade on the 7th, making for the Neechee guard. Colonel Sherriff, commanding the 42nd, and Lieutenant Stevens have arrived at Dimapur. Mr. Heath, assistant commissioner, has been appointed assistant political agent in the Naga Hills. There is ice on the Zullo River."—Englishman.

FATAL ACCIDENT TO AN OFFICER.—At Lucknow, on Jan. 5, Lieutenant Parkinson, of the 73rd Regiment, whilst trying a horse, was thrown and received concussion of the brain. The Agra paper says:—"Mr. Simpson, district engineer, who, with his servant and two native passengers, was an inmate of the cart, has to thank his sola hat that his head was not caved in by the blows he received. His servant lies at Shekoabad dispensary, and the two passengers have also been badly mauled, one, in addition, having lost Rs.500."—Times of India.

CALCUTTA FREIGHT MARKET.—The disengaged tonnage at date stood at 23,529 tons. The prices declined. Market stood firm at rates quoted:—London, vid Canal, rice and wheat, £2 17s. 6d.; tea, £3 5s. to £3 10s.; other freight nominal; vid Cape, saltpetre, £1 17s. 6d.; wheat, £2; linseed, £2 5s. to £2 10s. Liverpool, vid Canal, cotton and measurement, £3 10s. to £3 15s.; vid Cape, saltpetre, £2; rice and wheat, £2 5s.; linseed, £2 10s.; jute, £2 7s. 6d. to £2 10s.; cotton, £2 10s. to £2 12s. 6d.—Englishman.

MEDICAL ARRANGEMENTS.—It is said that the Surgeon General for Bengal intends making some other arrangements, consequent on the retirement of Dr. S. B. Partridge, than those mentioned by our contemporaries. Dr. W. J. Palmer, now in England on furlough, is to be professor of surgery at the Medical College and first surgeon to the College Hospital. Dr. K. M'Leod, the officiating professor of descriptive and surgical anatomy and second surgeon to the hospital, is to be confirmed in his present post, but will act as first surgeon during the temporary absence from India of Dr. Palmer, and Dr. Jubert will probably officiate for Dr. M'Leod.—Indian Daily News.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN HARE.—We regret to have to announce the death of Captain G. J. Hare, of the 22nd Native Infantry, at Safed Sang, on Jan. 5. Captain Hare was our correspondent at Peshawur during the first Afghan campaign, and has often furnished the readers of this paper with important information from the front, so we have good reason to regret his untimely death. He entered the service in 1864, and was at the time of his death wing commander and adjutant of his regiment.—Englishman.

THE NATIVE CAVALRY.—A contemporary has brought forward what will generally be considered a hard case on behalf of the native Cavalry. The saices with these regiments are maintained at the sole cost of the sowars; they are not even granted the warm clothing given by Government to other camp-followers, and as the sowar's pay is but Rs 27 per month, and flour is five seers for a rupee, and grain six seers for a rupee, it is difficult to understand how man and horse can subsist for the money. Out of the total nineteen regiments of Bengal Cavalry twelve are now employed in the Afghan war, seven remaining to relieve them. All these regiments must have their remount funds exhausted long before the conclusion of the campaign, and the men themselves will be heavily in debt. Some assistance must be speedily extended to these regiments, or one of the finest services existing will run the risk of being completely broken down by overstrain of every kind, perhaps before Government is aware that there is anything wrong.—Englishman.

MADRAS.

THE NEW C.I.E.'S.—DR. A. C. BURNELL.—Dr. Arthur Coke Burnell, Ph.D. Strasburg, M.C.S., has had the order conferred on him in connection, no doubt, with his labours as the first Oriental scholar in India. With those labours the public is well acquainted. Dr. Burnell entered the Madras Civil Service in 1860, and thus has had eighteen years' service. He now holds the appointment of district and sessions judge of Tanjore, to which he was promoted in June, 1877. He is a fellow of the Madras University, to which he does great credit. Dr. W. R. CORNISH.—When, last year, the Government nominated Indian and Anglo-Indian notables to the honour of Companionship of the Order of the Indian Empire much disappointment and surprise were felt and expressed on account of the omission of the name of Dr. W. R. Cornish from the list. That gentleman's well-known services in suggesting and carrying out measures for the alleviation of the great distress consequent on the famine were fully recognised by the public, and it was, indeed, a matter of much astonishment that such services were not at the time rewarded, while men of less note and distinction were made members of the Order. Dr. Cornish, as sanitary commissioner of Madras, has for years proved a tower of strength to the Government and the Madras and the Mofussil municipalities, and to him was assigned the work of taking the census of the population of the Madras Presidency, a work which he accomplished most satisfactorily. The HON. MIR HUMAYUN JAH BAHADUR.—The Hon. Mir Humayun Jah Bahadur is a worthy descendant of Tippoo Sultan. In Mir Humayun Jah Bahadur the Government have always found a loyal and useful citizen. Years ago, when it was found necessary to select from among the Mahomedan community a representative to assist at the council of Fort St. George for making laws and regulations, Mir Humayun Jah Bahadur was pointed at as the fittest man, and was accordingly chosen for the position of a member of the Council, which honourable post he has since continued to hold. The Government also considered him a fit and proper person for the appointment of a municipal commissioner for the town of Madras under Act IX. of 1867, and that he enjoyed the confidence of the ratepayers was abundantly manifest when, on the introduction of the elective system, he was, by the unanimous suffrages of the residents of the district in which he resides, elected as the representative of that district at the municipal board. Mir Humayun Jah Bahadur in public meetings is not a man of many words, but his deeds have spoken more eloquently. His charities unobtrusively dealt out have placed the poor of Madras under great obligations to him, and during the period of scarcity that not long back drove thousands to seek relief at the doors of the rich a willing hand was extended to the needy by this gentleman.—Madras Times.

THE "ATHENÆUM."—The Madras Athenæum and Daily News, which was originally worth Rs.1,50,000, it is stated has changed hands for Rs.6,000.—Bombay Gazette.

TUTICORIN.—A chart, showing the roadstead and harbour of Tuticorin, has just been published at the Marine Survey Department which shows the results of the examination lately carried out by Mr. Morris Chapman, Lieut. Coombs, and Mr. Searle. The whole space embraced within the limits of the sheet has been very closely sounded, and the chart will, no doubt, be a useful guide to masters of vessels visiting the port.—Bombay Gazette.

THE "SOUTH OF INDIA OBSERVER."—The Neilgherry Press Company (Limited), just started, has, we see, purchased the South of India Observer, which will be carried on by the company from the 1st of this month. Mr. L. F. Chapman is again to have editorial charge of the paper, wherein some changes are to be made, one of which is that the paper will be a weekly instead of a bi-weekly issue, and will be enlarged. We wish the company all success in their venture.—Madras Times.

THE SYDAPETT AGRICULTURAL SCHOOL.—The Board of Revenue lately submitted to Government letters from the superintendent of Government farms reporting the falling off of applications for admission into the School of Agriculture, requested permission to postpone the entertainment of a new class till April, and suggested the advisability of holding out to certificated students some prospects of obtaining Government employ in the revenue branch of the service. In their "order thereon," the Government state that they are not prepared to adopt the board's recommendation for the continuation of inducements to enter the School of Agriculture hitherto held out to the public. The reduction of the scale has, no doubt, had some influence on the number of applications for admission, and this was anticipated, but other causes have probably been at work. The time allowed for sending in applications was altogether too short, and the establishment of a scheme of agricultural education in the Bombay Presidency will have prevented the entry of students from that part of India which contributed to the earliest class nearly one-third of its numbers. The Government would have been prepared to admit the applicants to a fresh class, but, as its formation has been postponed with the sanction of the board, endeavours should be made to induce the zemindars throughout the country to send pupils to the class to be entertained in April next. The Government think that pupils might also attend from such of the estates under the managament of the Court of Wards as are in a position to pay for their support.—Madras Pioneer.

THE ARMS ACT IN MYSORE.—The Governor General in Council has extended the Indian Arms Act, 1878, to the territories of Mysore, subject to certain modifications.

THE REV. ARTHUR ROWE, chaplain at Vizagapatam, died at that station on Jan. 13.

CHANGES IN THE MADRAS MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.—The amalgamation of the Indian and British Medical Services will, we understand, create the following changes in the administration of the Medical Department. Surgeon General Crawford, of the Army Medical Department, is to be surgeon general of the Medical Department, assisted by Surgeon Major G. Bidie, M.B., of the Indian Medical Service, as secretary; Surgeon General George Smith, M.D., of the Indian Medical Service, is to retire from the service, and Surgeon Major George Mouat, M.D., of the Army Medical Department, and at present secretary to the Surgeon General, B.M.S., will return to Europe, his five years' tenure of office in India having very nearly expired. As the number of deputy surgeons general of the two services is to be reduced from nine to six, and the Presidency and Mysore Circles are to be placed in charge of deputy surgeons general of the Army Medical Department, changes must follow among the deputy surgeons general of the Indian Medical Service. Dr. J. Wilson, of Bangalore, is to be appointed to the Hyderabad Subsidiary Force, in room of Dr. van Someren, who retires from the service. Dr. Oswald, M.D., will continue as deputy surgeon general of the Southern Circle, and Dr. Theobalds, M.D., of the Nagpore Force. Dr. Colvin Smith, M.D., is to be appointed deputy surgeon general of the British Burma Division in place of Dr. J. M. Joseph, M.D., who will have to revert to executive duties. The above changes apply only to the military section of the medical service. The Civil Medical Department, we hear, is to be placed under the orders of the chief secretary to Government, assisted by an under secretary, who is to be an officer of the Indian Medical Service. Rumour has it that Dr. Cornish, the sanitary commissioner, has been selected for this post.—Madras Times.

THE RAMPA REBELLION.—A correspondent writes:—"Mr. Fawcett, with a small party of our troops, has succeeded in surprising a party of rebels, of whom he killed two men. The enemy endeavoured their best to outmanœuvre, but their attempts were frustrated, notwithstanding the advantage which the nature of the country afforded them. Havildar Mahomed, of the Hyderabad Contingent, captured four men who took part in looting a village. After necessary inquiries about the capture of the looters, the native officer will, it is said, be rewarded for his bravery. On the 27th ult. an action took place between a small party of the 10th Regiment N.I., headed by Havildar Bahadur Sing, and a large number of rebels. Provision escort of fourteen men with the Havildar Bahadur Sing, while being sent to Gurtern from Kota, was attacked by a gang of rebels, far increasing in number, on the Bimaveram Ghat. The military, notwithstanding their inferiority in numbers, prevented the enemy from approaching them by continual firing, and reached Gurten on the 28th. At Gurten the rebels, who had kept pursuing the small party of escort all the way along, were joined by another gang, which is said to have been headed by the notorious rebel leader Chendria. The enemy took advantage of the number of the escort by surrounding them and cutting off their water supply. Col. Rose has despatched a party against Chendria's gang. On the 19th the village of Laddie was threatened by a gang of rebels, and a small party has been despatched against them. Another gang of rebels near Jalldarun are also being pursued by our troops. It has been arranged to send the invalids to Coconada and Vizagapatam."—Madras Mail.

THE MADRAS BANK.—The directors of the Bank of Madras have declared a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. for the half-year ended 31st ult., making, with the dividend for the first half, a total of 6½ per cent. for the year. Considering the generally unfavourable character of the past year for trade, this result must be considered fairly satisfactory. It is worthy of remark that the reserve fund of the bank has been added to during the past year to the extent of Rs.1,25,000, making the total reserve fund now Rs.7,25,000. Had this addition to the reserve been divided among shareholders they would have drawn a total dividend of 9 instead of 6½ per cent. for the year. We are ourselves, however, firmly persuaded that the bank directors have acted wisely in increasing their reserve, which has heretofore not borne that proportion to capital which is usual with first-class banks in England. The normal reserve of the Bank of Madras has been five lakhs, sometimes more, sometimes less, or about 10 per cent. of the capital. It may be argued that the Bank of Madras has no right to engage in mercantile business, but then this would be to deprive shareholders of the chances of receiving any interest on their capital. So long as the bank can pay fair dividends, and at the same time add something to its reserve fund, shareholders will have good reason to be satisfied. The profit for the past half-year is unusually small, though not so small as last year; but business has been very dull and money very cheap. The crops of the present season promise to be good, and there are symptoms of a revival in trade, so the bank commences the year 1880 with better prospects than it has had at any time since the famine.—Madras Mail.

MR. MALTBY.—Mr. Maltby, C.S., arrived in Madras on 10th January, by the Culnah, in charge of Mr. Lushington and Mr. Inspector M'Murray, of the Godavery district. Dr. Leapingwell took charge of the unfortunate gentleman and conveyed him to the local asylum. Mr. Maltby has, says a local paper, shown no signs of improvement, and such a decided tendency to melancholy that the district officers took it in turns to sit up at night with him in the Waltair Asylum. He is still under the delusion that he has killed one of Chendria's headmen. It appears that before starting he talked very wildly about Chendria, and it is also confirmed that the murder was committed without any provocation whatever. Mr. Maltby had been talking to the deceased in a most friendly manner up to the time he shot him. It is said by his servants that he has been very eccentric for some months.—Times of India.

THE SCHOOL OF AGRICULTURE.—The annual report of the School of Agriculture, Madras, for 1878-79, has been submitted to the Secretary of State, who regards with satisfaction the success of the institution, and is gratified to learn that the industry and good conduct of the students have been such as to merit an expression of general approbation from the lecturers.—Press Commissioner.

INQUEST ON THE LATE COL. JOHNSON.—The inquest on the body of the late Col. J. H. E. Johnson was held on Saturday, when the deceased's butler deposed to the circumstances of his master's death. He said the deceased had not been quite well, and for a day or two before his death his appetite had not been good. He was quite sober, and witness never knew of his taking "sleeping medicine before." Dr. Kees said: This morning about half-past ten o'clock the butler of the deceased came over and said he could not arouse his master from sleep, and he showed me a memo (of De Beaux and Company), and said his master had taken that medicine about nine in the morning. I immediately went over and saw him lying dead in his easy chair. I asked for the bottle in which the medicine was brought, and was given this bottle (light green circular one ounce bottle) quite empty, as at present. The quantity would have been sufficient to have caused death at once. Ordinarily fifty or twenty grains is the average dose for an adult. The quantity sent should have been in a square bottle and marked "poison." Moreover, it is my opinion that such a quantity should not have been sent out from the shop. Col. Johnson was a very stout man. I have not heard of his being sick. Had he been ill I, as his official medical attendant, would have seen him. The deceased was a very reserved man, and called on no one. He is a married man, and his wife and family are in England. I have no reason to suppose that he meditated suicide. The jury, therefore, found that Col. Johnson met his death "by accidentally swallowing a quantity (to wit one ounce) of hydrate of chloral."

BOMBAY.

A NATIVE GRUMBLE FROM SHOLAPORE.—"The Government of Bombay," says the Indu Prakash, "are now reaping the fruits of their obstinate refusal to grant remissions of the land revenue arrears to the ryots of the districts affected by the late famine. Large numbers of lands given up by their holders are now being sold in the Sholapore district almost at nominal prices, and most of the buyers are said to consist of that very class—the Sowkars—to prevent the transfer of lands to whose hands the Deccan Ryots Act has been specially passed. This, however, is not the only thing which is just now observable at Sholapore. Some time ago the collector of Sholapore wrote against the names of the holders of certain lands, charged with the arrears of three years' assessments, that they should not be allowed to cultivate their holdings till the arrears were paid. The ryots were, of course, informed of this, but some of them, either from ignorance or a blind faith in the generosity of their Mà Bàp—the Sirkar—and encouraged by the seasonable rains of last year, sowed the fields, and have now been able to raise good crops. The local authorities, after having allowed these helpless ryots to do this, now step in; and, as we are informed, an order has been issued notifying that the crops so raised will, instead of being appropriated by Government in liquidation of the outstanding arrears, be taken from the ryots as a fine for their having violated the order which directed that so long as they did not pay the arrears they should not cultivate the fields! This may be acting justly from a legal point of view, but surely a Government which talks so much of the rapacity of the Khots of Ratnagiri should be a little lenient, if not merciful, to a peasantry which has been borne down by the late famine. Sir Richard Temple knows, it is true, how to put his thoughts best on paper, but it is surely unjust to talk of the patient spirit of the Deccan peasantry on the one hand and subject them to merciless exactions and stringent orders on the other. Had his Excellency been a little more merciful, and granted remissions somewhat more freely, things would not have come to such a pass as this. Lands would not have last monsoon remained fallow in large numbers. But as it is, the shortsighted policy of the Government has led to the very results against which it sought to guard itself."—Bombay Gazette.

THE REVENUE SURVEY.—The general annual progress report on the revenue survey of Bombay for the year ended Oct. 31, 1878, has been submitted to the Secretary of State. The results of the year are shown to compare not unfavourably in respect both to work done and its cost with those of 1876-77, and show, in the Secretary of State's opinion, that the department has been supervised with care by Colonel Anderson. The survey operations were to some extent impeded by the absence on famine duty of some officers and other causes. In the Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country Survey Department much has been done in establishing uniformity of procedure; greater economy in working has thus been secured, and still further improvement in the future is looked for. In Sind, considerable difficulties were met with, and it is considered evident that survey and settlement operations in that province demand constant and vigilant attention. The annual cost of the Survey Department, exclusive of Sind, and of the amount expended on the survey of native States, is now over 5½ lakhs of rupees. This is considered a heavy charge which it is desirable to reduce.—Bombay Gazette.

KHOJA EMIGRANTS.—We learn that the leading Khoja merchants of Bombay have promoted a fund among themselves for the support of destitute famine emigrants, of their community, from other parts of the presidency. About Rs.10,000 have already been raised, and the fund promises to run up to a considerable sum.—Bombay Gazette.

THE LAST OF THE DACOITS.—We hear that Major Wise has at last succeeded in arresting the remnant of the Puna dacoit gangs. Not many weeks ago his Khandesh Bhils, under a Khandesh chief constable, succeeded in surrounding and capturing in the hills near Saswad a band of ten dacoits; and now we learn that two men were recently arrested at Bhusawal and have vouchsafed information which has resulted in the apprehension of the remainder of the Puna gang at Indore, the capital of his Highness Holkar. Tatia, one of the ringleaders, alone remains at large, but his capture may now be safely left to the detective ability of the Puna police.—Bombay Gazette.

SUICIDE BY A EUROPEAN AT JACOBABAD.—A shocking case of suicide occurred at Jacobabad on the 18th. Mr. Edward Morgan, a temporary accountant of the plate-laying division of the Sukkur-Quetta Railway, committed suicide by blowing his brains out with a breech-loading gun. The deed was evidently committed under an aberration of intellect. He was the only son of Mr. H. Morgan, late of the I.V.S. Railway, and his age 23 years.—Beacon.

"MACLEAN'S GUIDE."—The fifth edition of "Maclean's Guide to Bombay and Bombay Directory for 1880" does infinite credit to its talented compiler, Mr. James Mackenzie Maclean, editor of the Bombay Gazette. In addition to the highly interesting and comprehensive chapters on the geography, history, trade, and industry of Bombay the work contains a capital description of the city, is illustrated with lithographic pictures of the principal objects of interest in Bombay, namely, the Royal Alfred Sailors' Home; the New Secretariat, built at a cost of £130,000; the Senate or Sir Cowasjee Jehanghire Hall for the University; the Public Works Secretariat, a tasteful Venetian Gothic; the Post-office, erected at a cost of Rs.5,94,200; the Frere Fountain, a very beautiful work of art; the Telegraph-office erected for the Bombay Division of Telegraphs and British Indian Submarine Telegraph; the superb white marble statue of the Queen, the gift of Khunderao Guicowar; the equestrian statue of the Prince of Wales, presented to the town by Sir Albert Sassoon in commemoration of his Royal Highness's visit to India in 1875-76; the Sassoon Mechanics' Institute and the Municipal Offices; the Arthur Crawford Markets, the "noblest and most useful of all the public improvements executed in Bombay;" and the Elephanta Caves. The book also contains two excellent maps —one a coloured map of India showing the lines of railways, telegraphs, and dawk routes, and the other of the island of Bombay. The second part of the "Guide" contains a mass of information concerning military, marine, political, judicial, ecclesiastical, educational, commercial, and miscellaneous matters, all corrected to the latest practicable date, well grouped, and easily found by reference to the index.—Civil and Military Gazette.

THE BARODA WEDDING PRESENTS.—I think that some of your fair readers will be glad to hear about the jewels and the gold and silver ornaments which have been presented to the brides and the bridegrooms on this happy occasion. I cannot name all the presents; they are far too many for that; but I shall mention a few. The young Princess Tarabhai received thirty-one pieces of jewellery, the total estimated value of which is Rs.1,69,544. This included a nose-ring of rubies, value Rs.9,000; a pair of tolbandis of pearls, Rs.11,500; a pair of kakans (wristlets) of pearls, Rs.10,000; a necklace set with diamonds, Rs.7,000; a pair of vakadvela (armlets), Rs.7,000; a pair of kallas (anklets) of diamonds and pearls, Rs.11,000, &c. In addition she received twenty-five gold ornaments valued at Rs.16,658, and numerous silver ornaments. The total value of her presents was Rs.1,98,504. The Raja of Sawunt Wari received eight pieces of jewellery, valued at Rs.22,540, and many gold and silver ornaments, the total value being Rs.24,399. Nor were his mother and sister forgotten, for the former received presents of the same nature, valued at Rs.5,180, and the latter presents worth Rs.2,464. Presents were also made on the celebration of his Highness the Gaekwar's marriage, but not, of course, to the same extent, as the Maharaja has no such valuable jewels of his own. He received jewels and gold ornaments worth Rs.18,400, while his young bride received jewels worth Rs.51,000, gold ornaments, Rs.15,000; and silver ornaments, Rs.1,000. The grand total value of the presents bestowed on the occasion of this double marriage amounts to Rs.3,18,391.—Times of India.

THE UNIVERSITY.—His Excellency the Governor in Council has been pleased to nominate the following gentlemen to be fellows of the University of Bombay:—Surgeon Major T. Cody, J. Griffiths, Esq., Surgeon Major A. H. Hughes, M.D., Rao Saheb Jayasatyabodhrao Tirmalirao Inamdar, D. Macdonald, Esq., M.B., F. W. Stevens, Esq., C.E., T. S. Tait, Esq., B.A., B.Sc., Assistant Surgeon Visram Ramjee Ghollay.—Times of India.

APPOINTMENTS.—We are informed that Mr. Nana Morojee, presidency magistrate, Bombay, will shortly retire on a pension, and that Mr. Shankar Pandurang Pandit, Oriental translator, will succeed him. It is said that the post of Oriental translator will be conferred upon Khan Bahadur Dastar Hoshang Jamasp, professor of Oriental languages in the Deccan College.—Ibid.

MOVEMENTS OF ARTILLERY.—The D Battery 2nd Brigade R.A. was to arrive in Bombay from Karachi about the 18th ult., thence to Ahmednagar. No. 1 Mountain Battery was under orders to proceed to Puna.—Ibid.

THE MUNICIPALITY.—A native gentleman, Rao Sahib, V. U. Maudlik, has been re-elected chairman of the Bombay Municipal Corporation.

THE BARODA FESTIVITIES.—On January 13 the foundation stone of the new palace for his Highness the Gaekwar was laid in the presence of a large and distinguished company by Mr. Melvill, C.S.I., the Resident. Previous to the ceremony the able Dewan, Sir Madhava Rao, gave an interesting address, in the course of which he referred to the necessity which existed for the construction of a new palace. Mr. Melvill afterwards spoke in eulogistic terms of the administration of Sir Madhava Rao. Sir Richard Temple, who was on a visit to Baroda, attended the ceremony and made a speech of some length, in which he adverted to the beneficial character of the present Baroda administration, speaking in high terms of Sir Madhava Rao. He expressed his belief that the natives of India possessed great administrative ability, and, in conclusion, said he hoped the Gaekwar would have a long and happy life, and would prove himself one of the greatest of the Gaekwars of Baroda. In the evening a grand banquet was held at the Moti Bagh, covers being laid for eighty.—Times of India.

THE RETIREMENT OF COL. SCHNEIDER.—The following notification was published in the Government Gazette of Jan. 16. Col. F. Schneider having, on his succession to colonel's allowances, resigned his appointment as political agent, Kolhapur and Southern Maratha Country, and commandant of the Kolhapur Infantry Corps, his Excellency the Governor in Council desires to take this opportunity of placing on record his sense of the highly meritorious manner in which that officer has always discharged his duties in the Bombay Political Department. From the date of his appointment on April 16, 1845, as adjutant, Sawunt Wari Local Corps, until his retirement from the post he has just vacated, Col. Schneider has, for the most part, passed his service in the Southern Maratha Country. The experience thus gained, combined with the conscientous zeal, good sense, and judgment invariably displayed by Col. Schneider, fitted him to be a worthy successor to Col. Anderson as political agent of Kolhapur. The steps now being taken towards the introduction of an improved land revenue survey settlement and assessments, the satisfactory state of the Rajaram High School, and of educational progress generally throughout the State; the construction of many useful and ornamental public works, such as roads, bridges, tanks, and public buildings; the efficiency of the Kolhapur Infantry Corps and of the police, all testify to the vigour and tact wherewith the late political agent has endeavoured to promote the welfare of the State and people of Kolhapur, whilst maintaining cordial relations between them and the British Government; and, in congratulating him on the result of his past labours, his Excellency in Council desires to add an expression of his best wishes for Col. Schneider's future welfare.

CAPTURE OF DACOITS.—The dacoits Chrisna Sabla and his son Maroti, for whose capture Rs.500 and Rs.200 were offered by Government, have been apprehended and sent to Poorundhur, to be tried there by Mr. Symonds, assistant collector. These, with seven other dacoits, were apprehended in the Holkar's territory.—Deccan Herald, Jan. 13.

DEATH OF THE HEAD OF THE BOMBAY MAHARAJAS.—News was received on 11th ult. of the death in Surat of Jeevunlaljee Maharaja, the head of the Vallabhacharyan Maharajas of Bombay. It seems that Jeevunlaljee left Bombay a few weeks ago to proceed to Nathdwar, in Rajputana, by way of Guzerat. He had gone as far as Baroda, when he became ill and decided to return to Surat. A special train to convey him from Surat to Bombay was despatched from here on Saturday last, but before it reached Surat the Maharaja died. The Bhatias, Banians, and other worshippers of the Maharaja, went into mourning on hearing the news, and most of the shops in the cloth and other markets in the native town were closed out of respect to his memory. Although not free from the weakness common to the Vallabhacharyan Maharajas, Jeevunlaljee was in many respects considered a very shrewd man. He was deeply read in Sanscrit, in which he is said to have composed several works. After the result of the great Maharaja libel case he perceived that the cause of the Vaishnavs was not destined to prosper with the advancing tide of new ideas and civilisation which followed in the wake of English culture amongst the younger and rising generation of Hindus. He accordingly exhibited a spirit of toleration towards those who formed the non-conformist class of Vaishnavas.—Times of India.

MURDER IN KAIRA.—A murder under somewhat extraordinary circumstances is reported in the native papers. The victim was a rich Gossain, named Shivalaljee, of Nahapad, in the Kaira district, the murder being committed whilst he was proceeding from Anand to Naoli. The motive for the crime appears to have been plunder. The deceased some time ago succeeded to a rich inheritance, and in consequence of the attitude of some of his fellow-townsmen towards him applied to the magistrate of Kaira, the Revenue Commissioner, N.D., and the Bombay Government to be allowed to be permitted to keep in his service, at his own expense, policemen to protect him. The request, it would seem, was not, however, entertained.—Times of India.

CEYLON.

THE following items are taken from the Ceylon Times of Jan. 8 :—

WEATHER AND CROPS.—The present dry hot weather up country is precisely what is required by planters in order to ripen the large quantities of wood now on coffee trees, and with a continuance of the present weather there will undoubtedly be an abundant blossom, and with good setting showers or heavy dew we do not fear for our future crop prospects. There is no longer any doubt about the exteme shortness of the present coffee crop, though from Happotella and other Ouvah districts the accounts are highly satisfactory. Our freight market still rules high, the quotation for cask coffee by steamer being still as much as 80s. The exports of coffee to date amount to 165,026cwt. as compared with 209,216cwt. at the same period of last year. The shipments are, of plantation kinds, 152,320cwt., and of native sorts 13,606cwt.

REVENUE.—The revenue returns for the year show a sensible decrease beyond even what was anticipated. The items on which deficiencies arise are chiefly railway receipts, land sales, licenses and customs.

GOVERNMENT NOTIFICATIONS.—His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint P. Arunachalem, Esq., to be acting commissioner of requests and police magistrate, Matale, and coroner for the divisions of Matale and Dambulla, and visitor of the prison at Matale, from the date of his arrival at the station. P. W. Conolly, Esq., to be acting commissioner of requests, police magistrate and coroner for the districts of Nawalapitiya and Gampola, with effect from the 5th inst. E. T. Noyes, Esq., to be extra assistant at Hambantota to the Government agent for the Southern Province, and to be additional commissioner of requests, police magistrate, and coroner for the district of Tangalla, with effect from the 12th inst. L. J. E. G. Tate, Esq., to be acting additional commissioner of requests, police magistrate, and coroner for the district of Matara, with effect from the 12th inst. J. G. Edge, Esq., to be acting commissioner of requests and police magistrate, Kalpitiya, and additional commissioner of requests and police magistrate, Puttalam, and coroner for the districts of Kalpitiya and Puttalam, with effect from the 12th inst. H. W. F. C. Brodhurst, Esq., to be acting office assistant at Galle to the Government agent for the Southern Province, with effect from the 12th inst. W. G. Haines, Esq., to be acting commissioner of requests, police magistrate, and coroner for the district of Haldumulla, with effect from the 12th inst.

THE WEATHER CHART.—Students of the weekly weather chart published in the Times will find an invaluable auxiliary in the exquisite little scale invented by Mr. F. Lloyd. This neat pocket instrument, manufactured by Mr. Stanley, of Great Turnstile, will enable the meteorological reader to gauge with exactitude the barometrical and thermometrical variations, the wind pressure, and rainfall denoted by the mysterious lines of the weekly diagram.

THE COMMERCIAL VALUE OF HERAT.

THE statement which has been published, with all the external marks of internal but unavowed authority, that there is no truth in the intended resignation of the Viceroy, has been generally connected with the question of Herat. It has been said that the proposed advance of our troops on that city had been urged by Lord Lytton as a sine qua non. The opposition to the plan was averred to have called forth his refusal to continue to bear the overwhelming responsibility of government if he were debarred from carrying out in its completeness the subjugation of the Afghans. That there can be no thorough settlement of Afghanistan so long as Ghazni and Herat have not yielded to our forces is admitted. Half measures are proved to be merely provocative of intrigue and resistance, desultory it may be, but sure to prevent pacification. All that we hear now points to a vigorous prosecution of the measures needful to make possible the existence of a kingdom at once internally peaceful, and withal a safeguard instead of a menace to the peace of our frontier possessions. The expected advance on Herat has called forth at home advice and prognostication as to the ultimate destination of that city and its district. In Russia it has elicited outspoken, though unofficial, confessions of the real needs and purposes of the advance on Merv. The St. Petersburg journals accept as most probable the plan now advocated by Sir Henry Rawlinson of permitting Persia to complete her province of Khorasan by the addition of her former possession. This course is declared to be utterly incompatible with Russian interests. Herat is declared to be of no importance whatever to England; the allegation that the possessor of that city holds the key of India being treated as utterly incorrect. It is, however, candidly avowed that the possession of Herat by Persia, of course as a gift from England, would render useless all the efforts that have been made to create a Russian monopoly of the Central Asian markets. What may be called the retrocession of Herat to Persia is thus admitted by the only interested competitors to be the giving up the predominance in the competition to our own manufacturers and merchants. The preparations to chastise the Turkomans, the powerful force equipped to attack a handful of huts and ruins under the rumoured leadership of the best and bravest of Russian generals, are thus avowed to have another goal in view. England may neglect to survey or prospect new trade routes—may permit supinely lines along which traffic once flowed, and would flow again, to be occupied by rivals—but Russian traders will not let their statesmen ever rest in the task of securing trade openings for their enterprise. The great value of the trade line which will soon reach from Bombay to Kandahar, and ought not to stop short of Herat, if it means to be thoroughly useful, has been recognised and proclaimed in Bombay. The acknowledgment of it by the St. Petersburg Press will, it is to be hoped, carry home more conviction of its truth to the minds of our Manchester friends. They were willing enough some years ago to press forward the opening up of an imaginary trade with Yunnan; they are clamouring now for more facilities of import to India. Here is a chance, not for the much-assailed advocates of imperialism or annexation, but for peaceful mercantile men, to find in the settlement of Herat future profit for themselves. This side of the question has been ably argued out by Col. Malleson. He, indeed, appeals to the patriotism of Englishmen, to assume the direct protection of Herat and Eastern Khorasan. The handing over to Russian misgovernment of the rich province and the oppressed traders of Herat would not seem to him anything of a change for the better; but his clear historical statements of the past commercial importance of Herat will make clear to any reader the true value of that position as commanding the trade of Central Asia. As witnesses to the present capabilities, the future possibilities, we have the Russians themselves. Col. Malleson brings into prominent view another fact which also bears strongly on this view of the question. Primarily it is necessary that an advance to Herat should be made to put an end to the propaganda of hostility which is said to exist there. The Herati regiments were foremost in the rebellion and massacre which inaugurated the present Afghan troubles, and Herat is still, though to an uncertain extent, a head-quarters of the enemy. But the true Heratis are neither enemies nor Afghans. The foreign soldiers the lawless mountaineers who waste and spoil the fair gardens and oppress the peaceful traders, are both. Our troops would be welcomed there as restoring a reign of order to a peace-loving and industrious people. The policy which the Viceroy is asserted to have so resolutely insisted on not only breaks up the centre of hostility, but bids fair to restore prosperity to the Heratis. Unoppressed by exactions which would more fitly be characterised as pillage, such as the knights of Rhineland once exercised, commerce would again resume its never-deserted route. This consideration may perhaps have some weight with those who desire to judge fairly. It may be a new view to most people that the innocent Afghans are no better than caterans, and that the commercial interests of England will be really subserved by "imperial" policy. The full development of such prospective advantages is necessarily a strong argument in favour of the views advocated ably and eloquently by Col. Malleson. To him, as to the World, "it would be the worst course that could be adopted to hand over the splendid position of Herat to the tyranny of the Shah;" but we doubt that he would add, "Better the rule of the Afghan robber tribes than the feeble and licentious tyranny of the Persians." He admits that although the Persian rulers could divert the splendour and the prestige to the rival city of Mashad, the trade of Herat practically defied all influence exerted to alienate it. The ultimate disposition of the district cannot be discussed at the end of an article. But if the policy to which the most distinguished authority has become a convert be adopted it is well to find that, although its opponents would not find in it all that was desirable, there is a reasonable ground for holding that the trade route would be reopened through Persian Herat, which is now closed practically by Afghan oppression. The vehement outcry of the Russian Press admits the truth of this, even while menacing Persia with indefinite misfortune if she accepts the gift, and with it the alliance and protection of England.

HOME NEWS.

SAD OCCURENCE AT SHANGHAI.—The Surrey Advertiser records the death, under painful circumstances, of Mr. Henry Wright Yate, younger son of Mr. Alderman Yate, of Godalming. The young man had gone out to China as doctor on board the Oriental Steamship Company's steamer Patroclus, of which an intimate friend of his, Mr. A. C. Owen, aged 28, was second officer. While in a boat at Shanghai Mr. Owen took Yate's revolver and fired at the shore. At that moment Mr. Yate turned his head and received the full effect of the charge. Seeing he had shot his friend, Mr. Owen placed the revolver to his own head and fired. He expired on the following day from the effects of the shot. Mr. Yate died almost immediately.

THE COTTON DUTIES.—A letter from the Under Secretary of the India-office was received at the Manchester Chamber of Commerce on Monday stating, in reference to recent telegrams from India, that her Majesty's Government had no information from the Indian Government that they intended to reimpose some of the cotton duties which had been repealed. Several of the members expressed an opinion that the Home Government would not sanction such a step.

POSTAGE AND REGISTRATION RATES.—The London Gazette of Friday contains a Treasury warrant repealing so much of the warrant of May 29, 1879, as relates to Aden, Cambodia, Ceylon, and China; the French colonies of Réunion, Mayotte, St. Mary, Madagascar, New Caledonia; the French establishments in India—Pondicherry, Chandernagor, Karikal, Mahé, and Yarraon, and in Cochin China, Cambodia, and Tonquin; Guadur, Hong Kong, India, and Japan, and fixing the rates of postage by land to those places at 5d. for every half of an ounce in weight on each letter; on each post card, 2d.; on each registered newspaper with or without a supplement, sample packet, or supplements, for every 4oz., or for every fractional part of 4oz., over and above the first, 1½d.; on each packet of commercial papers, or packet of printed papers, and on each pattern or sample packet, for every 2oz. or any fractional part of 2oz. 1½d.; provided that the minimum charge on each packet shall be 2½d. An additional sum of 2d. is to be the charge for registration.

ATROCITY-MONGERING.—The following memorial, signed by (amongst others) the Duke of Westminster, the Bishops of Oxford and Exeter, Sir A. Hobhouse, Sir T. Fowell Buxton, Sir Charles Trevelyan, Mr. Chamberlain, M.P., Mr. J. A. Froude, the Rev. Dr. Allon, and many others, has been forwarded to the Prime Minister. "My Lord,—We have heard with surprise and grief the account of certain acts committed by the British authorities in Afghanistan, which we believe to be contrary to the practices of civilised warfare, and certain to be followed by disaster and dishonour. In proclaiming that all who opposed the British forces would be treated as rebels, that those who had instigated the resistance would be punished without mercy, and in offering rewards for any person who had fought against his troops, the General in command took a course which cannot be justified either by public law or by the customs of civilised armies in the field. A national resistance to invasion cannot with justice be converted into mutiny and insurrection by a proclamation of the invaders; much more so when the invaders have themselves destroyed such government and organisation as previously existed in the country. We make no reference to anything that has been done during actual operations in the field, or to the execution of those who were fairly convicted of murder; but we desire to point out how grave a thing it is that soldiers on a campaign should deliberately put their prisoners to death on political grounds and on a technical charge of rebellion. It appears that the General in command having obtained possession of Cabul and the territory around it, instituted a systematic search, not only for those who had been accomplices in the attack on the British Envoy, but for those who had taken an active part in the defence of their country. The accounts published under a strict military censorship inform us that in a series of public executions a considerable number of Afghans have been hung by the orders of British officers, with no military object, but as a measure of political vengeance. Against some of these, we are told, there was evidence that they had a share in the attack on the Envoy; others, and amongst them a chief priest, were put to death on the general ground of having fought in the enemy's ranks or having been prominent in the defence. These executions took place at a time when there was no active resistance in arms; those executed were prisoners either previously taken in fight or arrested in their homes. In some cases at least men were hung on the spot, on the sole evidence that their names were found on the lists of particular regiments. We are told that after the bloody combats of December the General, on retaking Cabul, returned to the system of hanging prisoners on political as distinct from military grounds. A pardon has now been proclaimed; but this pardon rests on the principle that those who defend their country from invasion are committing a crime. And it reserves the leaders of that defence for special punishment. Such proceedings are in violation of the practices of civilised warfare. They treat the invasion of an independent nation as if it were the sanguinary repression of a domestic insurrection. They have inflamed the hostility of the Afghan people, and they must make it permanent. We ask her Majesty's Government to institute an inquiry into acts which affect the honour of the nation, of the army, and of the Sovereign."

FEMALE EDUCATION.—During the Women's Suffrage meeting at Manchester on Tuesday there were upon the platform three native Indian girls, who had been brought from India during the famine there, and in whose welfare several ladies are taking a kindly interest. The girls are being educated in this country, and will afterwards be trained as medical students with the view of practising the medical profession in their own country.

THE LIVERPOOL INDIA TRADE.—The President of the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce (Mr. W. B. Forwood), speaking at the annual meeting of that association on Tuesday, said he regretted to see that Liverpool had lost several trades, notably the China trade, while the Indian trade was fast leaving the port. He reckoned as among the causes the want of adequate banking facilities and unequal and oppressive port charges.

GALLANT RESCUE AT SEA.—Captain Hutchinson, of the Anchor Line steamer Britannia, which arrived at Gibraltar on the 25th ult., on her way to Bombay, reports that when in the Bay of Biscay on the morning of the 21st ult. a flare-up light was observed on the starboard bow. This continued to be seen at intervals till daybreak, when they discovered a schooner with signals of distress. She proved to be the Clara Louisa, of Liverpool, bound from Falmouth for Seville. She was in a sinking state. One of the steamer's lifeboats was manned, and with great difficulty, owing to the heavy sea, the schooner's crew, seven in number, were rescued. They were landed at Gibraltar.

THE GOVERNMENT BILLS.—Tenders were received on Tuesday at the Bank of England for Rs.45,00,000 in Government bills on India. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, Rs.28,68,000; to Bombay, Rs.16,23,000; and to Madras, Rs.9,000. Tenders on all Presidencies at 1s. 8 3-16d. will receive about 90 per cent.; above that price in full. Compared with last week this shows no change.

THE INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—At the meeting on Tuesday, Feb. 3—Mr. W. H. Barlow, F.R.S., president, in the chair—it was announced that the monthly ballot resulted in the election of Messrs. George Anderson, South Indian Railway, Tanjore; Thomas William Miles, executive engineer, P.W.D., India; and Stair Agnew Stewart, executive engineer, P.W.D., India, as members. Charles Henry Holme, Stud. Inst. C.E., assistant engineer, P.W.D., India; Henry Burdon Hutchings, Stud. Inst. C.E., P.W.D., Madras; William Weallens Shanks, late executive engineer, P.W.D., India; and Charles Louis Sim, Oudh and Rohilkund Railway, Lucknow, as associates.

HERAT.

AT a meeting of the Indian section of the Society of Arts, held on Friday evening—Admiral Selwyn in the chair—a paper was read by Col. Malleson, C.S.I., on Herat. The lecturer began by pointing out that all the conquerors of India, except the English, have penetrated from the north, and that all those conquerors, except the Emperor Babar, had entered by Herat. Babar himself failed three times and did not succeed until he held Candahar. Having described the Herirud River and Valley, known as "the garden," while the city was styled "the granary," he referred to the map to show that Herat occupies a central point, on which converge the roads leading to Cabul, to Cashmir, to India on the one side, and to Bokhara, Persia, Arabia, Turkey, and even Europe on the other. This caused the earlier monarchs of Herat to spend the wealth accruing to the city originally as the capital of the garden of Central Asia in the erection of magnificent markets and splendid caravansaries. This policy gave birth to the proverb, "Which is the most glorious city in Asia?" "If you speak the truth, you must say Herat." In the twelfth century the city could boast, in addition to its public market, of 12,000 retail shops, 6,000 public baths, caravansaries, and water mills, 350 schools and seminaries, and 144,000 occupied houses. Herat suffered enormously from the ravages of Chinghiz Khan and Taimur, whose son, Shah Rokh, made it his capital and restored peace, which prosperity was but little checked in the next generation, and culminated during the reign of Sultan Husen Mirza. From his death in 1505 dates her decadence. The Persian possession of Khorasan endeavoured to make Mashad the chief city, but could not altogether divert commerce from Herat. In 1717 Herat was occupied by the Abdali Afghans. The hold of those barbarians of the mountain upon the commercial city has—the short interval of the supremacy of Nadir Shah excepted—lasted to the present day. They laid upon the traders a tariff which is all but prohibitory; they connived at the plunder of caravans outside the city walls. By their cruel treatment of the artisans they have driven the best of them to Mashad, thus effecting, by their cruelty, a result which more polished Persia had failed to compass. The consequence is that the great market is all but deserted; the caravansaries are in ruins, the people are bowed down to the dust, and the beautiful valley is overrun by marauders. The slow but gradual declension was illustrated by the observations of Forster, Capt. Christie, and Arthur Conolly, who testify, as does Professor Vambéry, to the natural fertility of Herat and the wasteful tyranny of the Afghans. Col. Malleson then described the position occupied by Herat with respect to the most advanced post of the Indian Empire towards the south east, viâ Candahar, and to the peoples and tribes to the west, the north west, and the north. Herat is about 370 miles from Candahar. There are three practicable routes between the two places. That by Girishk, Farrah, and Sabzwar presents no great difficulties. An inner line, turning north westward, at a more acute angle from Girishk, and thus avoiding Farrah and Sabzwar, is likewise practicable. Ferrier recommends a third route, presenting no difficulties of water supply, to Farrah, thence to the nearest point of the Herirud River, and following that river until its junction with the Rud-i-Ghaz, not far from Herat. The road from Candahar to Farrah is covered to the north of the Siah Koh and the Ghor mountains; to the south, by a succession of sandy deserts. From Farrah to Herat the mountains still completely cover the right of the advance, whilst the left is equally protected by the salt desert, and the desert called Dasht-i-Naubad. The lecturer pointed out the importance of Farrah, of which Ferrier wrote—"Whoever holds Farrah has one foot in Candahar and the other in Herat, and commands the northern entrance to Seistan;" on the other hand, the Power holding these two places commands Farrah, which also could not be attacked except with the consent of Persia. The connection with the west and north was pointed out as made by two valleys. The Herirud, after flowing beyond a point below Herat for about fifty miles in the direction of Mashad, turns suddenly to the north, and, passing Sarrakhs about 140 miles from Herat, loses itself in the great desert of Kara Kum. On this line Sarrakhs is the point of connection between Herat and the desert, the abode of the Turkomans. The valley of the Murghab is reached from Herat by the tributary Kushk valley, as far as Kala-i-Maur. Continuing the journey along the banks of the Murghab, the traveller finds himself at a distance of a little over 200 miles from Herat, close to the ruined castle of Merv, and amongst the huts which still bear the name of this once famous city. Merv is now a ruin in the desert, but on this line Merv, like Sarrakhs on the other line, is the connecting joint between Herat and the desert, and beyond the desert, with the Oxus. The strategic importance of Sarrakhs as the outpost of Persia was then described, and the only value of Merv shown to be its situation, commanding the two outlets into the most fertile country in the world. One leads by the valleys of the Murghab and the Kushk to Herat; the other across the desert of Merv to Sarrakhs. Sarrakhs is more even than the key of Persia it commands the second and easier road, the road by the Herirud valley to Herat. If Sarrakhs and Herat were made impregnable, a march on Merv would be of no importance. The road to the west from Herat to Mashad, 224 miles, thus would be little difficulty. Crossing the Herirud, near Kohsan, about sixty miles from Herat, the traveller to Mashad leaves the valley of the Herirud, and proceeds by Kahriz, Muhammadabad, and Farimon, to that place. Col. Malleson, in conclusion, adverted to the Turkoman tribes, at once the enemies of Khorasan, and her best allies against an invader, and, having described the government of Persian Khorasan as bad, but that of the Herat division as far worse under the Afghan tyranny, he concluded by saying: "I attribute it to ignorance, rather than to indifference, that up to the present time not a single word has been spoken on behalf of the oppressed nationalities of that favoured country. It surely is not with ample knowledge of the subject, with a complete cognisance of the actual position of affairs, that the politician and the stump orator appeal to the Englishmen who listen to them for sympathy with the persecuting and rapacious Afghan. I would have it known far and wide that it is the Afghan who murders, plunders, and oppresses; the Afghan who places his knee on the neck of the once thriving people of Herat and Khorasan, and, pointing his knife at their throats, forces them to disgorge the wages of toil. It is the Afghan who has despoiled cities which he did not build, and harries the land which is not his own by right; the Afghan who crushes industry and strangles commerce; the Afghan, who, caught red in the act, struggles for the privilege to continue his trade of plunder and life taking. I am sure it needs only that the truth should be placed before the people of England to satisfy them that these men are totally undeserving of their sympathy. That sympathy will, I trust, be reserved for the Turko-Persian race which made Khorasan great, which, after having cultivated the valley of the Herirud to be a garden, made of Herat a granary worthy even of that glorious garden; which maintained in ever-increasing splendour that granary and that garden under sovereigns of their own blood, despite of occasional sieges and occasional occupations of the city by an enemy; which manfully combated against the rivalry of Mashad, and which, brought finally under the crushing rule of the Afghan, has still cherished the memory of the past, and has never let go hope for the future. That race, reduced by persecution, by murder, by captivity, is struggling now, vainly perhaps, but manfully, against the savage mountaineers who have ground them down for a century and a-half. In the deadliest grip of the death struggle I ask for the sympathies of England in favour of the Heratis."

In a brief discussion which followed, Commander Cameron adverted to the commercial rivalry of Russia, which sought to hold the markets of Central Asia, and advocated railway extensions from Baghdad into Persia. Col. Hardy described Herat as he saw it twenty-three years ago, and disputed its strength as a defensible post, as being commanded by hills which must be included in the fortifications. He considered that the Russians could mask Merv. Mr. Hyde Clarke announced that Professor Vambéry had consented to address this society on the subject of the Turkomans; he dwelt upon the neglect of Turkish by the Government of India, which, in his opinion, ought to make that language one of the standards, possessing as they do a master of Turkish in the head of the Punjab University. Mr. W. P. Andrew reminded those present that an invasion of India would now meet with a united army, and, after a few words on the comparative railway routes, moved a vote of thanks to the lecturer. In replying, Col. Malleson pointed out that Russia had announced her object to be Merv, but it could be only a pretext for a real attack on Sarrakhs and Herat. That city was described by all authorities as exceedingly strong, and had never been captured under a seven months' siege. The occupation of so strong a position would prevent the Turkoman cavalry from becoming the vanguard of an invasion of India.

THE SALT REVENUE.

A COMPARATIVE table, showing the revenue from salt during the past five years for the eight months, April to November, has just been issued by the Government of India, and it is somewhat interesting, now that the famine has disappeared, to trace the effect that disaster had upon the consumption of salt. The total quantity sold in 1875-76 was 15,369,111 Indian maunds, and the duty paid thereon for the eight months was Rs.3,77,92,460. In the following year the quantity sold was 15,732,472 maunds, which yielded a duty of Rs.3,93,14,309. In 1877-78, the year when the famine ceased, the quantity sold reached 16,154,748 maunds, and the duty amounted to Rs.4,00,6,904. In 1878-79, the year in which the salt duties were equalised throughout the country, the consumption fell off a little, being only 16,002,876 maunds, which yielded Rs.4,17,43,590. Last year, when all traces of famine had happily vanished, the consumption took an extra bound, and reached 17,272,729 maunds, while the duty amounted to Rs.4,37,32,225. If we take the population of the whole of India at two hundred millions, this quantity of salt is equivalent to a consumption of about seven pounds per head for eight months of the year, or at the rate of a little over ten pounds per head yearly. Now, we believe we are correct in saying that a man requires at least twenty pounds of salt yearly. Taking this allowance as our guide, it is evident that there is plenty of scope for the expansion of the salt revenue in future. Were every man, woman, and child to consume as much as a healthy person ought to do, then the consumption of salt would be three times as great as it actually is at present. It is for our financiers to decide whether it would not be to the advantage of the country to decrease the price of salt in the hope of making good the immediate loss of revenue that would ensue by encouraging an increased consumption. For our part we believe that a reduction of price would rather enhance the revenue than diminish it. The figures for Madras and Bombay for the eight months are peculiarly indicative as to the effect poverty has upon the consumption of salt. In 1875-76 Madras took only 4,071,591 maunds, the duty on which was Rs.74,37,985. In the following year the figures were 4,040,847 maunds, and Rs.73,88,163. In 1877-78, 4,277,619 maunds were consumed, and the duty obtained reached Rs.77,96,788. Then came the year in which duty in this Presidency was raised to equal that levied in Bengal, with the result that the consumption fell off by nearly half a million maunds, the total quantity sold being only 3,791,512 maunds, while the extra duty imposed increased the revenue, which was Rs.94,76,773. Nothing could be more eloquent than these figures, and they show clearly how crushing was the blow aimed at the people of this Presidency, who, when the extra duty was put upon salt, were but just recovering from the ravages of the famine. It is true that last year there was a slight improvement over the preceding one, for the sales reached 3,881,219 maunds for the eight months, and were valued at Rs.97,03,923. This is equivalent to a consumption of 5,821,828 maunds a year, and if the rate be maintained the income from Madras salt for 1879-80 will be Rs.1,45,55,887, which is considerably more than the income received for the year ending 31st March, 1877, the latest date for which we have the usual statistics. The income for that year was Rs.1,29,19,530. All the papers recently published by the Government of India with reference to the country's revenue show distinctly that our Finance Minister will, at the end of March, be in position far better than what he expected to be at one time.—Madras Times.

This new West-end Club, which now numbers 1,500 members, is open in one of the best portions in the West-end, being at the corner of Pall-mall, opposite the Athenæum Club.

This Club is established to meet the wants of Gentlemen who, owing to the almost dead-lock existing among the leading West-end Clubs, are at present without the advantages of one.

The Club is intended for members of Town and Country Society, and one of its objects also is, as its name also denotes, to offer a place of resort for Men of Travel and other Gentlemen who have associated in various parts of the world.

The Entrance Fee at present is Ten Guineas, which will be raised when the strength of the Club is completed.

The annual subscription is Eight Guineas, but Members residing beyond a radius of fifty miles from London are admitted as Country Members at an annual subscription of Four Guineas.

The Subscription of Officers on Foreign Service is One Guinea, and other Gentlemen residing abroad Two Guineas.

This Club being strictly proprietary the Members incur no liability.

NO MORE CHICORY IN YOUR COFFEE!!!

MOCHARA, CAFE DE SANTÉ.

MOCHARA, the pure produce of finest ripe figs, roasted and powdered, known as "COFFEE OF HEALTH," has long been used in the East as a supplement for mixing with Coffee.
MOCHARA imparts to Coffee that beautiful dark brown, yet transparent, colour, mellow flavour, and rich body so much admired in French Coffee.
MOCHARA neutralises the heating properties of Coffee, and is recommended by the Faculty as a remedy against indigestion, &c., (if used in larger proportions), the sanative properties of figs being well known.
MOCHARA, to improve even the best Colonial Coffee, which is empty and watery without it, may be mixed to the extent of 10 to 20 per cent. to 1lb. of pure Coffee, according to taste. For invalids, nervous persons, and children, from 25 to 50 per cent., with MILK FREELY used. Condensed milk preferable where good country milk or cream cannot be had.
MOCHARA, if well stored and kept dry, the air being excluded, will keep any length of time—at least, for some years.
MOCHARA is sold by Grocers and Chemists in 1lb. tins, at 1s. per lb. retail. Wholesale in 28lb. tins, and in barrels of 2 to 4 cwt. Half-pound Sample Tins sent for 10d. free by post.

LAMPLOUGH'S EFFERVESCING

PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators; also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates

Her Majesty's Representative the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1880.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Jan. 24; Madras and Allahabad, Jan. 22; Calcutta, Jan. 21.

THE following is the report on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending Jan. 13:—Rain fell during the week in parts of British Burma and Assam, and there were slight showers in two districts of Madras. The prospects of the spring crops still continue favourable, but rain would now be of general benefit. The public health is on the whole good, except in parts of the Bombay Presidency.

THE telegraphic news from Cabul contains little but rumour and expectations. The main fact is that the principal men in the Lughman Valley have made submission to General Bright. The defensive works constructed at Cabul have reassured the townspeople, who are returning to the city. Intelligence has been received in Calcutta that the Mohmunds have burned the houses of those who went to Lalpura to do homage to the new Khan. A severe shock of earthquake was felt in the Kuram Valley on the 8th inst. News of a second bloody conflict between the Cabulis and Heratis, in which the latter were defeated, comes from Kandahar. The escaped Russian pensioner Abdurrahman Khan is reported to be making his way to Herat. From Ghazni come reports of a new appeal being made by the Mulla Mushk-i-Alam to the tribes, to which the Ghilzais and Kohistanis are said to have responded favourably, and of discontent on the part of Muza Khan with his custodians. The first reports of the engagement between the Hazaras and Ali Khel Ghilzais were much exaggerated. The former are led by Rujjub Khan, who is said to have received four guns from General Roberts.

ACCORDING to a Reuter's telegram from Calcutta, dated Tuesday, an unsuccessful attempt has been made by the Nagas to surprise the native guard of a stockade near Samaguting.

THE Daily News' St. Petersburg correspondent telegraphs that, according to information which has reached him, a treaty has been signed between England and Persia consisting of three clauses. By the first, Persia is permitted to take Herat; by the second, she is to aid England in Afghanistan; and, by the third, England is to construct a railway from Teheran to a port on the Persian Gulf. The correspondent says, however, that these terms are perhaps only under discussion at present, as Persian information is sometimes exaggerated. The Journal de St. Petersbourg has an article upon the occupation of Herat by Persia, in which it says that if the Persian Government acts against Russia it will be at its risk and peril. The Golos says the idea of Persia occupying Herat without assistance is absurd.

THE Commander in Chief leaves Calcutta for Peshawur about the 20th. He will take command in the field in the spring.

THE transport Malabar has left Durban for India with the 4th Regiment and Lieut. Col. Brackenbury and Capt. Curling.

ON January 12 the Viceroy decorated Sir F. Haines, Sir G. P. Colley, and Sir R. G. Sandeman with the insignia of Knight Grand Commander and Knight Commander of the Order of the Star of India respectively.

THE Times' correspondent in Calcutta telegraphs the death of a faithful feudatory prince, H.H. the Maharaja of Rewa, G.C.S.I.

THE Government has sanctioned the formation in the Quartermaster General's Department in India of an Intelligence Branch, to which three officers will be attached, each representing one Presidency.

MAJOR GENERAL T. RAIKES, C.B., has arrived in England on vacating his brigade command in Madras.

HER MAJESTY has approved of the Victoria Cross being conferred upon Capt. E. H. Sartorius, 59th Regiment, in recognition of the distinguished gallantry displayed by him in Afghanistan.

MR. ST. BARBE, late assistant political resident at Bhamo, and afterwards in charge of the Mandalay Residency until the Government of India closed its relations with Upper Burma, will shortly, according to the Rangoon Gazette, be posted to Indore, Central India, as political assistant.

THE Times of India mentions in the obituary for the week the deaths of Mr. Gribble, postmaster general of Bengal; Mr. W. Da Costa, late subordinate judge of Mozufferpore; and Col. Sir Peter Filose, in the service of his Highness the Maharaja Scindia.

THE last announced batch of retirements from the Indian service contains the name of Col. H. S. Rammell, of the Madras Staff Corps. Col. Rammell, it will be remembered, commanded the Madras troops in the Rampa disturbances. His health has broken down by exposure in that little campaign, and he has been ordered home by his medical advisers. We hear that his services have been brought to the notice of the India-office by Sir Neville Chamberlain.

SIR HENRY RAWLINSON writes to the Times, in reference to the Duke of Argyll's observation in Thursday's debate, that he probably drew his information on Afghan affairs from Lord Lytton's letters. He has not been in correspondence with the Viceroy, either directly or indirectly, for about a twelvemonth.

THE following telegram has been received from Sir F. Roberts:—"Before November 12 about seventy-three men were executed; one the city Kotwal (magistrate) and six other men convicted of dishonouring the bodies of the officers of the Embassy, seventeen for attacking escorts and having property of the Embassy in their possession, and forty-nine for proved murders of camp followers and implication in attack on the Residency. Since November 12 nine were executed on conviction of attacking the Residency. Up to December 15 fifteen more were sentenced to death for killing wounded soldiers as well as implications in attack on the Residency."

WHILE our generals and soldiers at Cabul have been assailed at home as guilty of unnecessary severity, and even cruelty, we read in the Indian papers that "Dr. Owen has been treating in the charitable dispensary at Cabul the men wounded in action against us." This is in accordance with the real spirit of the commander, who wrote, "I shall use every endeavour to impress upon my officers the necessity of treating the population in a just and conciliatory manner." Medical and surgical care for the wounded assailants of Sherpur, burial of the dead with the rites of their own faith,—these are the practical replies to the slanders of the atrocity-mongering detractors of our gallant officers and men. Perhaps they would have been better pleased had the victory been on the other side.

IT is stated that the Burmese Embassy has been recalled to Mandalay.

THE Lord Mayor of Dublin and the Famine Relief Committee have telegraphed an appeal to India for help in aid of the distressed Irish.

THE Press Commissioner writes:—"The recent order introducing a revised system of administration into the medical services in this country, with effect from April 1 next, is almost entirely confined to the military portion of the new scheme. The civil portion has not yet been fully decided, but the details will be announced shortly. Four civil medical administrative appointments have, however, already been sanctioned—one for Bengal, one for the North West Provinces and Oudh, one for the Punjab, and one for the Central Provinces. The order concerning military medical administration might be interpreted to mean that the military surgeon general shall always be an officer of the Army Medical Department, but this is not intended. Having regard to the large force of European troops in the country, and for other obvious reasons, the military surgeon general will ordinarily be a British officer, but an Indian officer of special ability and experience will not be debarred from holding the appointment."

THE Secretary of State has sanctioned the introduction of a bill into the Viceroy's Legislative Council to create the Punjab University College as a university to confer degrees in arts; but requests that the Government of India will abstain from allowing the bill to pass into an Act until further evidence has been adduced that the system of the college has been actually amended in the manner proposed by the committee appointed by the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab, and until he has expressed himself satisfied with such evidence.

THE following is a summary of the specific recommendations of the Law Commission:—That the process of codifying well marked divisions of the substantive law should continue; that the eventual combination of these divisions as parts of a single and general code should be borne in mind; that the English laws should be made the basis, in a great measure, of future codes, but that its materials should be recast rather than adopted without modification; that, in recasting those materials, due regard should be paid to native habits and words of thought; that the form which those materials should assume should, as far as possible, resemble the form of the rules already accepted—in other words, propositions of the codes should be broad, simple, and readily intelligible; that uniformity of legislation should be aimed at, but special and local customs should be treated considerately; that the existing law of persons should not at present be expanded by way of codification, save that the operation of the European and British Minors Act XIII. 3, of 1874, should be extended; that the laws relating to negotiable instruments, subjects dealt with by the transfer of property bill, trusts, alluvion, easements, master and servant, should be codified—the bills already prepared on these subjects being passed into law, subject to the amendments suggested by the commission's report; that the law of wrongs should then be codified; that concurrently with, or after the framing of the law of wrongs, the laws relating to insurance, carriers, and lien should be codified; that the Legislature should then deal with the law of property in its whole extent; that preparation be made for a systematic chapter on interpretation; that the project of framing a digest of the decisions of the Indian courts should be abandoned. A note by Sir Charles Turner, chief justice of Madras, is appended to the report against a proposal to give special criminal jurisdiction in case of domestic and agricultural servants and mechanics.

THIS week's telegram states that Sir Richard Temple arrived at Sibi on Thursday, on a second visit of inspection to the Candahar Railway, as it is now officially called. This line is divided into three sections, taking their names from Jacobabad, Hurnai, and Gulistan Karez respectively. Engines already run to the 139th mile, within one mile of Nari. George Burrows's Brigade, consisting of the 5th, 16th, and 28th Bombay Native Infantry, has advanced to Jacobabad and Bolan.

THE daily papers contain an address to the electors of East Worcestershire from his Excellency the Governor of Bombay. Sir Richard Temple announces his intention to return home immediately, resigning his present office under the Crown, in the hope of becoming one of their representatives. Meanwhile he says, "I duly observe the various interests of the United Kingdom, which in part depend on the safety and integrity of its widespread dominions abroad, and on the adequate maintenance of its armaments by sea and land. I especially refer to the extension of trade, the opening of markets for manufactures, the support of a growing population, and the employment of a fast accumulating capital." If India is to lose his direct services she will, it is to be hoped, possess an able representative in the British Legislature.

REFERRING to the rumour that Sir Richard Temple will resign and leave for England before many months are over—in Bombay it is believed that his Excellency leaves in May—the Pioneer says:—"There is but one feeling in Bombay, that of deep and sincere regret, at Sir Richard Temple's approaching resignation. At the time of his accession to office he had many strong prejudices to contend against. But he has conquered them all, and has thoroughly ingratiated himself with all classes in Bombay, who take pride in possessing a governor of so utterly different a pattern from that afforded by any other Indian governor of late years. Sir Richard Temple should have a success in Parliament, should he be returned, and Indian interests will, in that case, certainly not suffer from the want of a competent as well as a remarkable advocate."

IN commenting upon the new rules for the admission of "natives" of India we pointed out that members of the Eurasian population would be eligible if qualified. This view is confirmed by a correspondence between the Eurasian Association and the Secretary to the Government of India, who writes, in reply to a letter expressing a hope on behalf of the board of the association that the claims of the resident Christian population of India will not be overlooked in the selection of persons for employment in accordance with the rules made by the Government of India under Statute 33 Vic., Cap. 3, Section 6, "that although the primary object of the above-mentioned statute was undoubtedly to provide for the appointment of persons of purely Indian birth to offices specially reserved for covenanted civilians, the terms of the statute admit of the appointment of persons of the class represented by the Eurasian and Anglo-Indian Association. The claims of such persons of this class as may be of conspicuous merit and ability will doubtless receive due consideration from the local Governments."

WE learn from the Army and Navy Gazette that Lord Strathnairn is said to have taken the subject of the Kirwee booty seriously in hand, and intends pressing the Government during the present session of Parliament to render the accounts so obstinately and unjustly refused up to the present time.

THE employes of the Bombay Gazette have presented to Mr. Maclean, late proprietor and editor of that paper, an illuminated address and a silver goblet. The proceedings were marked by a warm display of friendly feeling and mutual regret at the approaching separation.

THE net amount of the Indian sea and land customs revenue for the first nine months of the current official year was Rs.1,48,11,817, as compared with Rs.1,53,70,177 during the corresponding period of last year.

IN the Legislative Council on Jan. 23 the bill to provide for demarcation and survey of land in British Burma was referred to a select committee. Mr. Stokes introduced the Bombay Civil Courts Act (1869) Amendment Bill, and moved for its circulation for the purpose of eliciting opinions on it. The report of the select committee on the British Burma District Cesses and Rural Police Bill was take into consideration, and the bill was subsequently passed into law. Mr. Stokes presented the final report of the select committee on the bill to provide for revision of proceedings in trials held under the Military Cantonments Act, section 20. The Hon. Sayud Ahmad Khan obtained leave to introduce the bill for the appointment of persons to the office of kazi.

IT has been officially notified that exchanges between officers of the Army Medical Department at home and foreign stations will be permitted to the same extent as in the case of combatant officers under the qualifying conditions as to promotion specified in Articles 15, 18, and 21 of the Royal Warrant of November 27, 1879 (Clause 1, Army Circulars, 1880). Except under special circumstances, exchanges between medical officers serving in the United Kingdom will not be permitted unless the officers have been at least two years at their respective stations.

IT has now been decided by her Majesty the Queen that the grant of the medal with clasp for Perak shall be extended to the forces engaged against the Malays in the districts of Sri Menanti and Sunghie Ujong. It has also been decided that the issue of the medal shall be, in the case of the troops which proceeded from Hong Kong and the Straits Settlements, limited to the period between Nov. 2, 1875, and March 20, 1876, both dates inclusive; and in the case of the troops that embarked from India, to the period between Nov. 27, 1875, and March 20, 1876, both dates inclusive.

THE marriage of the young Gaekwar of Baroda called forth an interesting address of congratulation from the Puna Sarvajanik Sabha, which shows that the policy of Lord Northbrook in regard to that State has gained both the approval and sympathy of a large and influential portion of Maratha society. We quote a passage from the address:—

"Some time ago, when the very existence of the Baroda State seemed to be involved in imminent danger, the minds of the people of the Deccan were filled with extreme anxiety, but the danger was happily averted owing to the judicious and cautious measures then adopted by the gracious British Government in accordance with the prayers and memorials urged by the people in that behalf, and the administration of the State was entrusted to the hands of an independent efficient native Ministry. We have now the happiness to witness the first fruit of this new order of things, and we regard the celebration of these marriages as an event of national importance and heartfelt gratitude and rejoicing to us all."

In his reply, his Highness, after thanking his friends and countrymen, said:—

"I assure you I am increasingly realising the responsibilities that will hereafter devolve on me. Let me briefly tell you that it will be my constant solicitude to learn to discharge those responsibilities in a manner which will afford public satisfaction in a progressive age."

IN a resolution, dated Sept. 18, the Government of India directed that effect should be given, so far as regards the duties of the advocate general, the standing counsel, and the solicitor to Government, to the recommendations of the committee which was appointed some years ago to consider how the legal business of the Governments of India and Bengal would be most efficiently performed. The same resolution indicated the additional duties, which, subject to the Secretary of State's approval, will now devolve on the advocate general, and the future duties of the solicitor to Government. The Secretary of State has now approved of the Government of India's proceedings and proposals in the matter.

THE Secretary of State has also sanctioned the addition to the civil leave code of a rule proposed by the Government of India to meet the case of an officer on leave who, on public grounds, is recalled to duty before its expiry. In such case "the local Government may allow the officer to take the remainder of leave from which the officer was recalled" without insisting on the interval which must elapse between the return of an officer to duty and his obtaining leave again.

IT is notified in the General Orders published at Simla on Jan. 9 that all indulgence discharges are suspended for the present, except in very special cases.

THE coffee planters of Ceylon, notwithstanding the obscure diseases which have assailed their staple, and the bad times which may be hoped to be soon reckoned as past, are not so much to be pitied. The Colombo journal states that forty properties during the current season have earned an aggregate profit of more than a million of rupees, the separate items ranging from Rs.12,000 to Rs.70,000, while another estate will this year give an income of Rs.130,000.

THE Secretary of State has sanctioned the addition under section 70 of the Civil Pension Code of the following rule:—

"Rule 1.—By the order quoted in the foot-note, a person whose age exceeds twenty-five years may not ordinarily be admitted into the Uncovenanted Service of the State; but these orders do not apply to a practising pleader appointed to a judicial office, who may be appointed, if not more than thirty years old. Moreover, the local Government may, for the purposes of the proviso, at its discretion add to the number of years' service completed by such an officer, the period during which he has actually practised as a pleader not exceeding three years in all."

STATISTICS which have just been published exhibit the striking fact that the births in the Presidency of Bombay during 1878 were 68,408 fewer than in 1877 and 80,967 below the mean annual number for the six years 1873-1878. The diminution is assumed to be in a great measure due to the after effects of the famine.

SIR ANDREW CLARKE, R.E.

AT the farewell dinner given to Sir A. Clarke by the officers of the Royal Engineers at Calcutta, Major General Walker, who presided, spoke of Sir Andrew's "Valuable labours and minutes on Indian harbours in general, and the Madras harbour in particular, which had long been the bête noire of engineers, but which promises soon to become an accomplished fact, thanks to his fostering care—on railway operations in India, and on the adaptation of Indian rolling-stock to military purposes—on the reorganisation of the engineering establishments in the country, which had gradually been allowed to become far too large, not for the actual wants of the country, but for the funds which the Government is in a position to assign for the prosecution of engineering works on the Aden and Bombay defences, and the general proceedings of the Indian defence committee—on the subject of technical and industrial training for the poorer classes of Europeans and Eurasians in this country—and last, but assuredly not least, on frontier communications and frontier railways, such as the line which is now being carried with marvellous rapidity from Sukkur to Sibi and into Afghanistan."

Replying to the toast of "His Health," Sir A. Clarke thus referred to the department of which he has been so able a head:

"The experience of the past five years has taught me that the outcry against public works administration in this country exaggerates considerably the defects. This country possesses public works of great magnitude and of every class, carried out often under difficulties and discouragements of no ordinary description, and which will, I can say with confidence, compare favourably with, and show a shorter record of failures than, those of any other country in the world. In speaking of the agency by which these works have been carried out I desire emphatically to refer to the large body of civil engineers with whom we are honourably associated in the work. I have ever found with them, as with my own brother officers, hearty and loyal support and unflinching devotion to duty. And it has been the great aim of my endeavours to do my duty fearlessly to all, where confronted by conflicting interests inseparable from the working of a large department, and to afford to each and every one impartially, sympathy, encouragement, and justice. There has been one point on which I can look back with satisfaction on efforts crowned with success, and that is in the recognition of the proper sphere of the Public Works Department in the mitigation of the effects of famines. India during the past few years has been suffering severely under this dread visitation, and, aided by Sir Michael Kennedy working on parallel lines in Bombay as well as Colonel Sankey in Mysor and General Fraser in the North West, my efforts at headquarters to get the aid of the Public Works Department brought to bear in the earlier stages, instead of when the difficulties had become well-nigh insuperable, have inaugurated a policy with regard to this subject the beneficial fruits of which have now been recognised and will be felt to all time, should the country have, as appears inevitable, to pass through similar calamities in the future. Though I fear it will not be acceptable in some quarters, I feel bound publicly to announce my conviction that to leave the office of Public Works Member of Council vacant, even for a few months, will be a grievous mistake. If the institution of the post has not led to the reorganisation of the department, as was anticipated, it has led to its condition being better known and more justly appreciated; and I am convinced that there is no department of the Government of India the magnitude and importance or which more urgently demand individual representation in the council of the empire than those, the interests of which, and of the public in connection with it, have been entrusted to my care for the past five years. And I look with confidence to this view being fully recognised when the reaction from the present measures of reduction, necessitated by financial embarrassments, shall have set in."

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

HANDBOOK OF INDIAN HISTORY.*

THE third edition of Mr. Pope's most useful manual is before us. His arrangement of the subject, if that complicated series of concurrent records which is comprised under the name of the History of India may be so called, is well adapted to guide the beginner. In truth, that history is a "Mer de Histoires," and requires a Maury or a Dundas Taylor to direct the investigation, lay down the courses, and delineate the shores, shoals, and islands. Mr. Pope first gives a general survey of the present political divisions and physical geography of India, and then leads the student, through the ancient history, up to A.D. 1000. The next period, defined by the first battle of Panipat in 1526, is dealt with in two chapters, while the following chapter summarises the Mogul empire from that epoch to the deposition of the last phantom ruler. The history of the Dakhan, and that of the Mahrattas, occupies separate chapters, and then, in succession, an account of the Portuguese and the rival European companies prepares the way for the rivalries of the French and English. The separate history of the British Indian Empire is divided into two periods—one dating from the foundation of English power in Bengal, and closed by the appointment of the first governor general, while the other describes the annals of the successive governors general from Warren Hastings to Lord Mayo. The Punjab and Mysor have each a chapter devoted to them. These twelve chapters comprise the history of British India, and it may be unhesitatingly stated that the student who masters their contents so as to be able to answer the questions given in a well-constructed table, will not be out of his reckoning, nor need a pilot on that Indian ocean of history. The numerous clear and accurate maps, and the several tables and indices, complete a handbook of reference which will guide any literary wayfarer through the intricate mazes of the history of British India. The author reminds his readers that no matter of Indian history is thoroughly known until it is inseparably connected in the mind with its corresponding or contemporaneous events in European history, and the parallelism and synchronism even anterior to the time of common interests is well delineated by foot-notes.

THE PUSHTO MANUAL.*

IN the year 1808, with rare prescience, Lord Minto, while addressing the students in the College of Fort William, spoke of the Pushto language as "bearing either a present and immediate, or, in the many chances of human vicissitude, a prospective, and perhaps not remote, affinity to our affairs." It would have been well had the hint thrown out seventy years ago been taken to heart, and proper encouragement given to the study of the Afghan or Pushto language. The Russians set us the example; for during the whole century they have prosecuted the study of Pushto with untiring industry. So far from encouraging this study, the Indian Government would seem to have positively discouraged it. It was not until 1853 that a man was found who, having acquired a scholarly knowledge of Pushto, had the energy to prepare and print grammar, dictionary, texts, and translations of sufficient extent and accuracy to be really effective. Major Raverty, the officer alluded to, produced these works in despite of opposition; and we believe we are right in saying that he had to defray the cost as he best could, by what, with bitter irony, is called "private enterprise." Major Raverty thus took a public duty on himself about ten years after two million speakers of Pushto had actually passed under British rule by the annexation of the Punjab.

The Pushto language is peculiar in its nature, exhibiting both Semitic and Aryan characteristics. So marked are these peculiarities that scholars are divided in opinion as to its classification; some connecting it with the Arabic family and some with the Persian. To the latter theory we subscribe, as the essentials of Pushto grammar seem clearly akin to those of a Persian type. Their language occupies a fairly defined area. From north of the Hindu Kush to Beluchistan on the south, and starting from the Punjab in the east, it fades away gradually in Sistan on the west. It is divided into numerous dialects, the most conspicuous of which are generally spoken of as the Eastern and the Western Pushto. The dialects differ from each other so greatly in pronunciation that, until the ear becomes accustomed to them, they appear much like distinct languages.

The Pushto has a distinct advantage over most of the vernaculars of India in the fact that it possesses an extensive and useful literature, which stretches back to a respectable antiquity. How much of this literature will be recovered it is impossible to say, for no effort has been made to recover it; but among old works we may notice that a history of the Yusufzi tribe has been already procured, written by Shaikh Mali in A.D. 1417. A similar history by Khan Khaju (A.D. 1494) also exists, which makes many references to earlier writers; and the Akhund Darwaza wrote an excellent theological work somewhat earlier than this. Comparing these dates with the Indian vernaculars, we find that Hindi literature started in A.D. 1200; Marathi, in 1300; Gujarati, in 1450; Bengali, in 1500; and Uriya, in 1600. What is called Hindustani had no literary existence till the time of Akbar, about A.D. 1550. With the single exception of the famous Hindi historical poem of Chand, of A.D. 1200, all these early works of India are of a religious character, which makes them far less valuable than the historical works preserved in Pushto. From the beginning of the fifteenth century onwards, Pushto literature affords an extensive and valuable field of research to the scholar, and it is as yet almost virgin soil. Major Raverty's present manual will be no doubt the first introduction to Pushto of some future scholar who will recover the hidden treasures. It is a more popular recast of his former works on Pushto, and will thus place it in the power of busy officials to acquire a useful knowledge of the language at a small expenditure of time.

The book consists of, 1st, a grammar, which gives the essential features of the language; 2nd, a set of exercises, comprising sixty-one of Æsop's fables (giving the transliteration and translation of each); 3rd, a collection of idiomatic sentences on the weather, climate, country, travelling, sporting, military, and general subjects, including proverbs; and ends with, 4th, an extensive vocabulary of English words rendered into Pushto. The whole is in the Roman character, as being at once a means of facilitating the acquisition of a practical knowledge of the tongue and of supplying a more portable volume.

JOURNAL OF THE NATIONAL INDIAN ASSOCIATION.—FEBRUARY.

NO Saturday Reviewer ever brought such severe charges against his or her countrywomen as the author of "A Peep into Parsee Life" asserts to be well deserved by the "Parsee girls." There is an earnestness about the outspoken assertions and appeals for reform of the education and manners of his countrywomen which shows that the writer believes that hi gloomy view of Parsee social life and education is correct. With the editor, we hope it may deserve some qualification. Notes from the Far South refer to famine-stricken coolies. We see that the absurd project of a Hindu medical college, o Ayur Veda institution, mooted last year, has been again brought forward. This would indeed be a retrograde step The arguments advanced in the prospectus are sheer nonsense, and suited to "the orthodox old Hindus and widows who never in their lives take any other than Hindu medicines."

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

AFGHAN REGIMENTS.

WHAT a regiment solely composed of Afghans serving in their own country might be it is hard to say, seeing that such a regiment is without precedent. Hitherto the Afghans have fought under great disadvantages. Their discipline was slack, the soldiers' pay always in arrears, the officers untrained, and their arms mostly indifferent. That they could fight at all under such untoward circumstances is creditable to their military spirit. It is certainly the fact that Afghans are of a treacherous disposition, but so are the Malays. A Government which was able to discipline a Malay regiment may make light of Afghan insubordination; besides, the Afghan soldiers in the Bengal Native Infantry regiments are well spoken of by their officers. Doubtless, when enjoying the unexpected and extraordinary benefits of regular pay, good clothing, arms, and English discipline, administered by English officers, the Afghan regiments will be something very different from the popular impression of Afghans now, and it is quite possible that they might become the flower of our Eastern army, even as the Sikhs and Goorkhas are that flower now. There is no stouter man in Asia than your Afghan, and if it should be unfortunately the destinies of England and Russia to collide, the Afghans, it now judiciously managed, ought to serve as valuable military material for England's uses in that collision. But at present it is more with the object of hastening the pacification of Afghanistan than that of preventing Russian aggression that we would suggest a local Afghan army for Afghanistan. For some time to come it will be absolutely necessary to maintain considerable military forces in Afghanistan, both British and Native, and the less friction that these create the better it will be for the speedy settlement of the Afghan problem. Now, there can be no question but that garrisons in which the Afghans themselves could share with English soldiers the profit and the honour would be more agreeable to Afghans than garrisons composed for the most part of Hindustani sepoys, whom the Afghans hate. Nor does it at all follow that the Afghan soldiers in English pay should be untrustworthy under the circumstances; rather the contrary. England at one time had no bitterer enemies than the Scottish Highlanders, but that was when

Digitized by Google

England distrusted the Highlanders and quartered her foreign soldiers upon them. Later on, and when England had learnt a better and more reasonable way of dealing with those independence-loving mountaineers, she had no finer or more loyal regiments in her whole army than those composed of these same contumacious Highlanders. In short, there is a certain amount of spirit and, at the same time, of fidelity to be counted upon in all mountaineers, which will no more mislead us with the Afghans than with the Swiss or Scotch; but to treat them with suspicion is only to invite their distrust. If the Government of India raise new regiments, as they necessarily must to occupy Afghanistan in any strength, they will do well to make as large a proportion of the army of Afghanistan as is safe Afghans. We cannot but think that, by utilising the sepoys of Hindustan for this purpose, the natural animosity of the Afghans to the invaders of their country will be perpetuated for a much longer time than we care now to think of. Indeed, if Englishmen will only imagine themselves in the position of the Afghans, they will at once perceive, we hope, the force of the arguments that are here urged in favour of an Anglo-Afghan army.—Madras Times.

THE CABUL EXECUTIONS.

THE caprices of popular fancy are such that while it would certainly have been roused to fury if the Government of India had not at once gone forward to exact, from the guilty city of Cabul, a penalty for the murder of the Cavagnari Mission, it is now liable to be stirred up into a phrensy of humanitarian wrath by a picture of Afghan atrocities. The true position is that arguments about international law and belligerent rights are all up in the air as regards the case before us. Belligerent rights cannot but be modified by the circumstances under which a war is undertaken. The customs of individual warfare in old times bring the subject to a focus. A man had one set of rights when resenting a rude push of the shoulder, and another set when he caught a friend in the act of outraging the supreme domestic law. In France to this day, for the latter injury, you may kill a man on the spot, and proudly explain the circumstances to a sympathetic jury. But for other wrongs you may only kill a man in accordance with the regulations of duelling. So in war. If two Governments quarrel about the interpretation of a treaty, or the custody of keys in Jerusalem, or some other nice diplomatic point, they must only go to war in a gentlemanly way. But when the population of a capital city turn out and murder your ambassador and all his companions you go to war in order to slay and punish. The people of Cabul are still in process of receiving punishment for the crime of September, and if that punishment has been dragged out—as regards time—that is merely because it has been very moderate as regards quantity. The officer entrusted with its execution has been anxious to work as little as possible on the theory of indiscriminate vengeance, though indiscriminate vengeance would have been fully justified by the circumstances with which he had to deal. So the effort has been to pick out from the whole population—all guilty in a general way—the particular persons who could be proved to be guilty in an individual way as well. If the acts of retaliation had been much more sweeping and sensational than they were they would have been amply justified by the circumstances to be dealt with. It is not worth while to go into complicated questions as to the position of the Cabulees as rebels, first against their own prince, our ally then, and afterwards against British authority as the de facto Government of the country. We are not concerned to vindicate the measures that have been taken by reference to the text of General Roberts's proclamations, or the proclamations that have been called General Roberts's proclamations. Perhaps his feelings will not be much hurt by fault-finding directed against some of these proclamations. But the important question is whether people have been hanged improperly at Cabul, and the answer to that is that the circumstances of the case which brought on the war are such that it would be difficult to find anybody in Cabul who could reasonably show that he ought not to be hanged. No doubt in practice the line must be drawn somewhere, but it is perfectly irrational to contend that the executions carried out so far have been more numerous than the whole situation justifies, taking into account the monstrosity of the original crime and the character of the people whose minds have to be impressed by the retribution.—Pioneer.

PATIALA.—The Council of Regency at Patiala, on behalf of the Maharaja, has given two months' extra pay to all the officers and men of his contingent who were employed in the British service during the last Afghan campaign.—Englishman.

MEETINGS OF COMPANIES.—At an extraordinary meeting of the Oriental Jute Manufacturing Company, held Jan. 10, the resolutions passed on Dec. 20 were confirmed, and it was resolved:—"That the rate of interest on the whole three lakhs of rupees, already sanctioned to be raised by the issue of debentures, be increased from 8 to 9 per cent., and that such increased rate of interest on the amount of debentures already issued commence from the date of the confirmation of this resolution."—Englishman.

DISTURBANCE IN SIKKIM.—The late emeute was between the Pemiongchi Llamas and the Padong Llama's party. The Padong Llama has now come armed with an authority from the Sikkim Raj to secure peace to the Nepauli ryots who have settled at Rhenok under the orders of the Sikkim Raj, and for that purpose to punish in any way that may be considered proper the disturbers of the peace, the Pemiongchi Llamas or followers of the chief priest. The Tasang Llama, owing to some party jealousy against the Nepauli residents of Rhenok, made a raid against them, but was beaten off with loss of life by the Padong Llama, who is said to have come from Sikkim with armed men. Pemiongchi Llamas allege that the Padong Llama is an impostor who is not armed with authority from the Sikkim Raj, but he, on the contrary, says he has with him the written authority under the seal and signature of the Sikkim Raj, and that he is ready to prove it. We await the issue of events, as the Padong Llama has not as yet desisted from his purpose of securing peace to the Nepaulis, by fighting, if necessary, with the Tasang Llamas, nothwithstanding the orders of the deputy commissioner to the contrary.—Darjiling News.

THE BANK OF BENGAL.—The directors of the Bank of Bengal declared a dividend for the half-year ended Dec. 31 at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum. The net profit available amounted to Rs.11,66,693, which was disposed of as follows, viz.:—

A VISITOR.—Mr. H. E. Falk, the president of the Salt Chamber of Commerce of Cheshire and Worcestershire, has been travelling a good deal through the North West Provinces, Oudh, and the Punjab, and has been making close inquiries into the working of the Indian Salt Department; and we are told that "he is not given to that sickly sentimentality which sees horrors in the salt tax." From Allahabad Mr. Falk will proceed to the Sambhur Lake, visiting the salt-producing States of Rajputana en route.—Indian Herald.

THE NAGA RAID ON CACHAR.—Some further particulars have been received of the attack on the Baladhan tea-garden. Mr. Blyth's servant states that the attack was made about half-past six in the evening. His master had just finished dinner, and he was taking him a cup of tea when a noise outside was heard. Mr. Blyth went to the window and was immediately shot dead. Nagas, numbering 200 or 300, then rushed to the house, plundered and burnt it and the factories, killing about fifteen coolies. They then retired to the jungle. Some people of the neighbouring quarter, getting alarmed, proceeded at once to Baladhan, where they found all the buildings ruined and Mr. Blyth's body horribly burnt and charred. There have been no further raids. The Chief Commissioner of Assam, who arrived at Silchar on Tuesday, reports that the excitement is quieting down, and that the coolies are returning to work. Guards have been posted at the most exposed points. The district police superintendent has been following the raiders, but there is little hope of his being able to intercept them. Operations against the Nagas in the Kohima direction are proceeding satisfactorily. Pachana village was attacked by the 42nd on the 28th ult. and taken with a loss to the enemy of fifteen killed and no casualties on our side. Kenona was taken next day, after a trifling resistance, our loss being one sepoy killed. Major Chambers is now in Calcutta organising a coolie corps for service in the Naga Hills.—Times Telegram.

VACCINATION EXPERIENCES IN BENGAL.—In the report on vaccination in the province of Bengal reference is made to the small-pox epidemic that raged in Calcutta last year. Dr. Irvine, surgeon general for Bengal, remarks:—"That small-pox should so extensively prevail in Calcutta is, of course, an indication of a want of sufficient vaccination, but whether this is owing to any deficiency in the Presidency Vaccine Department I have not the means of ascertaining. It must, also, be fully admitted that probably Calcutta, from its position and from the large numbers of strangers in the shape of emigrants, pilgrims, and people in search of work who flock to it, can never be properly protected till such people believe more fully in vaccination than they do at present. Dr. Charles gives details of the extraordinary arrangements which he made for the protection of the population in May, 1879, when he employed the staff of the metropolitan circles for that purpose. I find that each of the twenty extra vaccinators thus utilised vaccinated, on an average, 2·42 cases daily during the sixty days they worked in the town. In fact, the proportion was rather less, for I have calculated as if all the vaccinators commenced work on May 23, whereas some had started before that date. This result of vaccination practised during the prevalence of an epidemic of small-pox does not seem to indicate any great amount of zeal on the part of the extra establishment." Dr. Irvine recommends that in Calcutta vaccination should be made compulsory, and, further, that it should be made compulsory in all municipalities in which Act IV. (B.C.) of 1865 is in force. Dr. Charles expresses an opinion as to the influence of temperature on the diffusion of small-pox, and he believes, as the result of inquiries made in Calcutta during many years, that a temperature of 75° F. allows the disease to spread with fatal freedom. A temperature of 80° F. checks its progress materially, though it does not stop it, while at 85° "the contagion becomes so promptly affected as to become, if not inert, at least so enfeebled as to be able to spread the disease with great difficulty." He is further of opinion that the rainfall has no influence in spreading small-pox. The report notes a blot in the vaccine operations arising from the indolence and ignorance of vaccinators which, we think, is common to all the vaccination departments in India. It is true everywhere that nothing should be so steadily kept in view as this, that licensed vaccinators or ex-inoculators are a source of danger and difficulty, unless their work is very closely supervised, seeing that they are very apt to revert to inoculation under such circumstances, it being much more easily carried on.—Madras Times.

EMPLOYMENT OF GRADUATES.—As it is the intention of the authorities of the Bengal police to employ graduates of the university or other intelligent natives as inspectors and sub inspectors, and also men of fair education in the constabulary force, a system of examination, necessary for the departmental service, has been introduced, which is generally conducted by one of the deputy inspectors general.—Bombay Gazette.

MR. GRIBBLE, officiating postmaster general, Bengal, died at Calcutta on the 17th ult of cholera, after a few hours' illness.

MR. J. D. GORDON, C.S.I., chief commissioner of Mysor, has arrived in Calcutta to consult with the Viceroy about the arrangements for making over that province to the young Maharaja.

FEARFUL ENCOUNTER WITH SHARKS.—A sad occurrence is reported from Port Blair:—"On the evening of Christmas Day one of the privates of the 89th Regiment, named Kenney, went out to the bay to have a swim—a daily recreation—between five and six p.m. When he was out a distance of about 150 yards from the jetty he found himself attacked by a small shark which bit off one of the fingers of his left hand and lacerated another and the thumb. The man being a good swimmer bravely resisted the attack and had nearly succeeded in choking, it is said, his enemy, when he found himself attacked by a larger monster, which seized him below the cap of the right knee, causing an incision of about four inches long by two deep. The wounded man still fought his way bravely, swimming towards shore with his right hand, while with his other mutilated one he defended himself. While doing so the second and fiercer antagonist managed to seize his wounded leg just behind the knee cap, rendering it perfectly useless. Life, however, is sweet, and notwithstanding his crippled condition Kenney struggled on towards a boat he saw coming to his aid, when a third shark attacked him from behind and tore off nearly the whole of the flesh from his back. Even in this dreadful state he managed to swim some fifty yards further, and to reach the boat before mentioned, when he was picked up. He was immediately conveyed to shore, laid in a doolie, and carried to the hospital, where he received every care and attention; but after lingering for thirty hours, and suffering the greatest agony, he expired. When the corpse was examined the intestines were plainly visible through the exposed ribs, three or four of which were broken. The dimensions of the last bite were seen to be fourteen inches by twelve. The deceased was only 23½ years of age."—Rangoon Gazette.

THE STAMP FORGERIES.—In acknowledging the Government of India's letter of November last, transmitting papers relative to the discovery of stamp forgeries at Lucknow and Roorkee, the Secretary of State has expressed his satisfaction at the successful manner in which the forgeries have been detected, for which Major Fendall Currie and the officers acting under him have very deservedly received the commendation of the Governor General in Council as well as of the local Government.—Times of India.

FEES FOR REGISTRATION OF LETTERS.—The Calcutta Trades' Association lately addressed the director general of the Post-office of India on the subject of the excessive fee charged for the registration of letters, and received a reply from the Postal Department stating that a reduction in the rates of postage is one of the items of postal reform before the Government for consideration, but, under the present condition of the finances, the director general is of opinion that he would not be justified in recommending the reduction proposed by the association.—Ibid.

THE RAJA OF NABHA.—The following letter has been received by the Raja of Nabha from the Viceroy:—"My Friend,—The auxiliary troops which were furnished by your Highness to co-operate with the Imperial forces in the recent military operations in Afghanistan have returned to the frontier, and I desire to convey to your Highness my high appreciation of the services which they have rendered. The steadiness and fidelity with which your soldiers performed their duty throughout the campaign have elicited high commendation from the officers in command of the British force employed in the same operations. Their state of discipline and general behaviour reflect great credit on your Highness's administration. I shall have much pleasure in reporting to her Majesty's Government the share which your Highness's troops have taken in the recent operations, and I trust that your Highness will communicate these expressions of my approval to the officers and men who formed your Highness's contingent." The Raja lately held a durbar at Nabha for the purpose of acknowledging and rewarding the services of the men and officers of his force in Afghanistan. This ceremony would have taken place some time since, but was unavoidably postponed owing to the late severe illness of his Highness. The Raja presented Rs.1,200 to Sirdar Bishen Singh, 1st political officer of the force, and a special pension of Rs.30 a month; Rs.800 and a pension of Rs.20 a month to Sirdar Nuttoo Lall, 2nd political officer; and the sum of Rs.1,000 and a pension of Rs.25 a month to Sirdar Buderdin Khan, general and paymaster of the force. The Foreign Minister received Rs.400. A sum equivalent to four months' pay was accorded to all the civilians employed with the force. Five months' pay was given to all officers engaged, and three months to the rank and file; to camp followers a month and a-half's pay was given, and his Highness ruled that the widows or heirs of men who had died during the campaign should receive the same amount the men would have been entitled to had they survived. The announcement of the Raja's liberality was received with cheers by its recipients and with three cheers for the Queen-Empress; the durbar was then broken up, an imperial salute being fired.—Times of India.

THE MAHARAJA OF KASHMIR.—The Maharaja of Kashmir has offered to contribute timber to the value of a thousand pounds towards the building of the proposed English Cathedral at Lahore. NATIVES AS ENGINE DRIVERS.—The locomotive and carriage superintendent, South Indian Railway, reports:—"For the last six months I have had a class in the shed here two or three times a week of the old native firemen to ascertain their capabilities if in charge of an engine in a difficulty. My only hesitation has ever been to put them on a long mileage train, in case anything happened, and they lost nerve from being far from assistance. Now that the line is broken up in short sections and there are foremen or drivers in charge close at hand I determined to try the experiment. I have sent three natives to work the Tuticorin and Tinnivelly branch traffic, thirty-eight miles, where there is a foreman at Tuticorin and a fitter at Tinnevelly. I have two natives on between Negapatam and Tanjore, forty-eight miles, with a foreman at Negapatam and a driver in charge at Tanjore. I purpose working the Chingleput-Arkonam branch with natives, with a driver in charge at Chingleput. I have natives now from Arkonam to Conjeveram; I have one native ballasting in Tanjore yard and the neighbourhood. The Pondicherry branch I also intend to do with natives, with a driver in charge at Villupuram. When Chingleput shed is built I shall work the Madras-Chingleput section with them also. Below I give you a list of the men now employed, and others whose fitness I have personally tested for short train service. Experience only can show if they can be trusted on a long mileage. The way they deal with their difficulties will demonstrate this. There are about six more as yet not examined who from service should be qualified. My covenanted men range from Rs.120 to Rs.180, and uncovenanted from Rs.50 to Rs.180. I hope my natives may succeed. The financial result will be very satisfactory. I should fix their maximum at Rs.50."—Madras Times.

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE.—The statement of revenue and expenditure of the Government of Madras from April 1 to June 30, 1879, has been published. In the quarter the receipts amounted to £2,652,738, exclusive of army and irrigation receipts, £54,473, or £2,707,211 under all heads, against £2,456,315 in the corresponding quarter last year. Land revenue brought in £1,519,535; excise, £151,640; provincial rates, £204,991; salt, £394,358; stamps, £107,858; law and justice, £25,878; tributes, £88,608; assessed taxes, £26,697; customs, £46,931; army receipts, £51,861; forest receipts, £13,336; gain by exchange, £3,130. The total expenditure under all heads was £1,535,471, against £1,611,333 in the corresponding quarter in the previous year. The land revenue administration cost £169,016; forests, £11,779; excise, £4,585; salt expenditure, £23,413; stamps, £3,474; administration, £31,535; minor departments, £8,072; law and justice, £134,431; police, £90,024; education, £31,615; medical, £33,501; allowances, £58,857; superannuation, £79,337; miscellaneous, £24,002; loss by exchange, £17,302, against £8,807 in the corresponding quarter in the previous year; the army expenditure amounted to £675,738; irrigation £50,837; and public works ordinary, £50,837. There was a net decrease in expendsture of £75,862. One half of the decrease is owing to the cessation of famine relief, the figures for which in the quarter of 1878 were £38,399.—Madras Standard.

FAMINE ORPHANAGE.—We learn that the Famine Orphanage, hitherto under the superintendence of Mrs. Carmichael, has been handed over formally to the native community under a committee consisting of ten members under the presidentship of the Hon. Humayan Jah Bahadur and the secretaryship of Mr. B. Ramasawmy Naidu. Mrs. Wynn, the matron, still continues to hold office.—Madras Athenæum.

RECRUITS FOR THE 24TH M.N.I.—A recruiting party from the 24th Madras Native Infantry, consisting of a native officer, two non-commissioned officers, and eight sepoys, left by the s.s. Asia recently for Coconada. They are all Mahomedans, and are to enlist none but Mahomedan recruits, of whom seventy are required. They are to recruit in the Masulipatam, Coconada, and Guntoor districts Time was when a recruiting party from a native regiment was of very rare occurrence indeed; numbers of eligible candidates used to present themselves either at the depot or at headquarters. Notwithstanding the late increase of pay, soldiering does not appear to be so popular among the fighting races of India as it used to be. It is not improbable that Government will have to raise some Zulu regiments or Siah Posh Kaffir regiments from Afghanistan for service in India.—Rangoon Times.

THE CHANGES IN THE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT. — The establishment for the Madras Army will consist of surgeon general, Army Medical Department; secretary to surgeon general, Indian Medical Department, at headquarters. The six circles of medical superintendence will be distributed as follows, each being held by a deputy surgeon general:—1. Centre District, Northern District, 1 A.M.D.; 2. Southern District, Malabar and Canara District, 1 I.M.D.; 3. Mysor District, Ceded Districts, 1 A.M.D.; 4. Hyderabad Subsidiary Force, Hyderabad Contingent, 1 I.M.D.; 5. Nagpore Force, Central India Regiments, 1 I.M.D.; 6. British Burma Division, 1 I.M.D.—Madras Times.

THE RAMPA REBELS.—At Kunnaparati, in Rampa, the rebels attacked a number of villagers, who were overwhelmed by the superior number of the enemy, and, according to a correspondent of a Madras paper, some of them were carried off. Three military parties were ordered to proceed against the rebels, who surrounded a small escort party under a havildar near Guru. Reports have since been received from the first party, who reached the place on the 2nd ult., to the effect that the havildar's party were found safe, though cut off from water supply, and surrounded by a large number of rebels. On arrival of the other parties the force was to operate against the enemy, who are at present not far distant from Gurtern. Information had been received that Chendriah was among the rebels.—Times of India.

GOLD MINING.—We hear that some enterprising gentlemen intend shortly to work the gold mines at Kolar, and that an experienced miner has been indented for from Australia. Some years ago an enterprising engineer worked the mines and obtained a small quantity of gold. The Mysor Government were willing to allow the miners easy terms, and, now that arrangements are almost complete, the mines will be worked.—Bangalore Examiner.

EURASIAN AGRICULTURE.—A Madras paper announces that the first step by the Eurasian Association towards the establishment of an agricultural colony has been taken, ten men having been sent to the Sydapet farm to be trained in the work.

NEW POST-OFFICE.—There seems a chance of Madras getting its new combined telegraph and post office. The Duke of Buckingham thinks the proposed building an absolute necessity, and if the Government of India concur the next official budget will provide for the needful funds.—Times of India.

BOMBAY.

CONFIRMATIONS.—Amongst the female candidates lately confirmed by the Bishop of Bombay at Sharanpore was a Parsee. At Ahmednagar his lordship is said to have confirmed 156 men and 53 women. All the candidates, says the Church Chronicle, were from the poorest class, but few could afford to come in anything more than the humble coolie costume, and many of the women came up with a child on their hips. As the bishop laid hands on each candidate separately the service lasted a long time, so that it was quite dark before it was over. When the congregation left the church there seemed to be some confusion outside. Some people wanted to find friends, and mothers had lost their children. In the crowd all were making their inquiries at once, but they soon became quiet and went off peaceably to their respective destinations. The next morning a confirmation was held for the Europeans, when the Rev. G. B. Streetan presented thirteen candidates, several of whom were soldiers.—Madras Times.

THE CATHOLIC VICAR GENERAL.—His Grace the Archbishop of Goa has appointed the Rev. Estanislaus Viunte de Souza vicar general of Bombay. The nomination has met with unanimous approval.—Bombay Gazette.

THE KARACHI LANDING PIER.—The construction of the Keamari landing pier at Karachi, which will cost about five lakhs, has been sanctioned. The Lahore paper says this decision will be welcomed, not only by the population of Sind and the Punjab, but by all who have the real interests of the country at heart. The advantages of an improved harbour at Karachi cannot be overestimated. The port is the natural landing-place for the troops and military stores required in Northern India and beyond our old frontier; and, as we have already shown, even much larger vessels than H.M.'s troopships—vessels drawing close upon twenty-four feet of water—have been easily accommodated in the anchorage. By means of the new pier steamers will be brought almost side by side with the Sind, Punjab, and Delhi Railway Company's wagons, an advantage which will be greatly appreciated not only by shippers, but by overland passengers, the number of whom, travelling by the Aden-Karachi route, is largely increasing. We venture to hope that the Government may follow up the present measure by sanctioning the removal of "deep water point." The cost will be small, and the displacement of the obstruction would afford room for several more steamers of the very largest size.—Bombay Gazette.

THE BANK OF BOMBAY.—The report of the directors of the Bank of Bombay for the past half-year gives the net profit at Rs.3,52,872, including Rs.1[illegible],305 brought down. The usual interim dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. has been declared, and absorbs Rs.2,50,000 of this amount, leaving Rs.1,02,872 to be carried forward. No bad debts have been made during the half-year, and the item "past due bills" has been reduced to Rs.13,76,922. To meet the amount still outstanding various sales of property have been or will be made, and the directors are confident that enough will be realised to wipe out the balance on this account.—Times.

DEATH OF CAPT. CARTER.—Capt. Henry Carter, formerly commander of the obelisk ship Cleopatra, and lately of the steamship King Arthur, trading between Bombay and the Persian Gulf and Red Sea, died of dysentery on the 10th of January at Bombay, after a week's illness, contracted just as he was about to start for England. He was forty-four years of age.—Times.

THE RESERVE DIVISION.—The Bombay papers state that the following troops from that Presidency have been ordered for service, and will probably cross the frontier by the 17th:—E Battery B Brigade Horse Artillery; C Battery 2nd Brigade Field Artillery; 2nd Sind Horse, Puna Horse, 7th Fusiliers, 66th Foot, and 4th and 10th Native Infantry. The following will form the reserve division for Southern Afghanistan:—D Battery B Brigade Horse Artillery; F Battery 2nd Brigade Field Artillery, 11th and 15th Foot, 1st Sind Horse, a regiment of cavalry (to be named hereafter), 3rd Light Cavalry, and 3rd, 9th, 23rd, and 24th Native Infantry. Great activity prevails in Bombay in despatching these troops to Karachi.—Times Telegram.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE AT BARODA.—In his speech at the ceremonial of laying the first stone of the new palace his Excellency the Governor made the following observations on native administration:—"I venture to add my expressions to all that has justly been said by Mr. Melville regarding the high reputation which Sir Madhava Rao's administration universally enjoys in Western India. I am sure that it is admired, not only by all neighbouring native States of Western India, but is also highly esteemed by all those British officers who from their proximity or vicinity have knowledge of it. I rejoice that on this occasion so many educated native gentlemen should be present to hear such commendation publicly bestowed on Sir Madhava Rao. I hope that the influence of his great and honourable example will stimulate all the rising and educated youth of our schools and our colleges to follow in his footsteps as far as their capacities or opportunities may allow them. Now, my native friends, much has been said of late years regarding the capacity of natives for administration as distinct from the judicial department. Everybody admits your aptitude for judicial services, many doubt your aptitude for administrative services, but I beg to say that I for one do not doubt your aptitude for administration. It were affectation if I were to tell you that you are likely to be as good administrators as Englishmen, for this plain reason, that every nation has its specialities, and I believe it is admitted that the imperial governing power is one of those gifts with which nature or Providence has endowed Englishmen. It is a gift the like of which has not been seen since the decline and fall of the Roman Empire. Those of my native hearers who remember their classics which they learned in the university will recollect the line "Tu regere imperio populos Romane memento;" that is to say, "You Romans, recollect it is your destiny in the world to govern alien races." Now, it is not likely that this gift is distributed alike amongst all races of men, and I cannot promise you that you will ever become as administrators equal to Englishmen. That I frankly tell you, and you may believe me when I tell you with equal frankness that I believe you are nevertheless capable of becoming excellent administrators. I appeal to the entire history of India, from the earliest ages down to the most recent times, in respect to every race, every dynasty, which has risen to power, that there never has been a time when natives of India have not displayed high administrative ability. During the Hindu time there were many eminent Hindu statesmen; during the Mahomedan there were equally eminent Mahomedan and Hindu statesmen. It is sometimes said that during the British period there have been fewer eminent native statesmen than formerly, but that statement I venture to doubt. I say that in every part of India we are producing native statesmen of the good old imperial stamp, and I adduce as instances the cases of the Ministers of Hyderabad, of Cashmere, of Travancore, of Gwalior, and last, though not least, I adduce as an instance Sir Madhava Rao himself. Gentlemen, I feel sanguine that when, by slow degrees, perhaps, but still ultimately, natives are admitted into the ranks of the Covenanted Civil Service, to which service I and Mr. Melville are so proud to have belonged, that in that service also there will turn out hereafter to be many eminent native members."—Bombay Gazette.

COTTON CULTIVATION.—In 1878-79 the area sown with cotton in the whole Presidency, exclusive of Sind, was 2,917,471 acres. Last season (1879-80) the breadth so cultivated in the same territories was 3,621,645 acres, showing an increase of more than half a million acres of land sown. The crop which is now coming forward will, it is expected, be proportionately larger, the rainfall having been favourable in those places in which the increase of cultivation occurred. This was the case chiefly in the northern districts of the Presidency. In many parts of the Southern Mahratta country the season was not favourable to the growth of cotton.—Bombay Gazette.

DEPARTURE OF H.M.'S TROOPSHIP "MALABAR."—Her Majesty's Indian troopship Malabar, 4,173 tons, Captain John F. G. Grant, sailed on Jan. 18 for Natal, via Mauritius, to bring drafts of the 62nd Foot and families of 6th Dragoon Guards. It is expected that she will be back on Feb. 26, and leave Bombay on March 6 next.

The I.G.S. Dalhousie, towing I.G.S. Czarewitch and the Tennasserim, had arrived from Karachi, bringing the following officers of D-2 R.A. and other regiments. She left Karachi on the 16th ult., bringing the following military officers and the D-2, Det. R.A.:—Lieut. Pickwood, Surgeon Rogers, Lieut. Robertson, Lieut. Jackson, Major and Mrs. Staveley, Lieut. Banister, Lieut. Col. Bushe, 19th N.I., Capt. Clarke, 2-60th Rifles.—Times of India.

THE annual report on Bombay gaols for 1878 has been laid before and considered by the Secretary of State. Two main facts are shown by the report, which are regretted—namely, the great prevalence of crime, and the excessive increasing mortality of the gaol population; while the admissions into all gaols during the year were 34,860, or 17 per cent. less than the number, 40,728, in the previous year, they were still 43 per cent. over the average of the three years before the famine. In the city of Bombay itself there had been a progressive increase in crime since 1875. Regarding the second point, it appears that of the 51,291 prisoners confined during the year 1,569 died in prison, and that the death-rate of prisoners had risen steadily during the previous three years. The Secretary of State agrees in the opinion of the Bombay Government that these unfortunate circumstances must be ascribed to the effects of the late famine; want, and the demoralisation produced by it leading to crime; and the consequent crowding of the gaols joined with the enfeebled condition of the prisoners at their admission, resulting in the high death-rate. The report also states that there were 318 female civil prisoners, against 245 in the previous year, and that there had been a considerable number of female prisoners incarcerated for debt. Lord Cranbrook concurs in the opinion of the Bombay Government that thanks are due to Dr. Cruikshank and the officers of the department for the manner in which they performed their duties during a period of considerable strain.

Dr. N. HOPKINS, civil surgeon, Karachi, who recently returned from Europe, is very ill, and Dr. Adey (who was acting for him) has been detained there in consequence. It is most probable Dr. Hopkins will have again to proceed home, in which case he forfeits his appointment, and Dr. Adey will be confirmed as civil surgeon. This arrangement will also confirm Dr. C. Joint as civil surgeon, Surat.—Times of India.

ADDITIONAL TROOPS FOR SERVICE.—The following troops have been warned for immediate service on the Kandahar line—A Battery R.H.A., the Field Battery, Karachi, 7th Fusiliers, 2-66th Regiment. The Tennaserim and Czarewitch sailed Jan. 24 with 28th N.I., and the officers accompanying the regiment, viz.:—Lieut. Col. Nimmo, commanding, Lieut. Col. Newport, Major Loughton, Lieuts. Reilly and Chase, Surg. Major Keith. We hear that the two batteries of artillery which lately arrived from Burma with the intention of going home in the next troopship have been stopped, awaiting further orders.—Times of India.

PRIMARY EDUCATION.—"Primary education has slightly retrograded, and decline or want of vitality characterised many of the educational institutions of the Presidency." Such is the rather melancholy comment of the Governor in Council on the educational report for the last official year 1878-79. As to the cause, it is declared to be mainly the late agricultural and commercial depression and the epidemics that have unhappily existed. His Excellency "is unwilling to believe, indeed cannot bring himself to think, that the poverty of result is owing to any want of zeal or ability on the part of the educational officers themselves as a body. On the other hand, in some parts of the country education has been sustained during the year, despite depression, by the efforts of particular officers. While in at least one, and probably two, notable cases the falling off is due to the faults of particular officers. Moreover, the Governor in Council is far from satisfied that the civil officers in each district sufficiently realise their responsibilities for co-operation with the educational officers in the promotion of primary education. In the resolution passed upon last year's report the Governor in Council adverted to the above points, and will now take further steps to ensure additional attention in any district where they may seem to have been inadequately regarded. The director (Mr. Chatfield) is doubtless aware of the responsibility which attaches to him as executive head of the department, a responsibility which is far greater than in those provinces where much of the executive work is done by the civil officers, while the educational officers form an inspecting agency. The Governor in Council feels sure that Mr. Chatfield will himself set the highest example of energy in establishing the department in the position it held before the recent distress, and will see that all his officers, without any exception, put forth all the efforts that may be necessary in concert with the civil authorities, whose strenuous co-operation the Governor in Council will insist upon having." The actual decrease in the number of scholars was 5,289, in spite of the fact that there were 188 more educational institutions than in the previous year. Of course, as is pointed out, the demand for new schools in certain places may be quite legitimate, notwithstanding some of the existing schools elsewhere are not flourishing. In his recent convocation address Sir Richard Temple had something to say about the decrease in the number of students at the colleges affiliated to the university, and we hear something more of the falling off in this resolution. For instance, in 1874-75 there were 245 students at Elphinstone College; last year there were only 166. Amongst the causes of this diminution were the admission of free students and the continuance in the college of students who have been plucked in their examinations. The numerical increase does not, it is said, "affect the confidence felt by the Governor in Council in the management of the college by its present very able principal." The expenditure on education amounted in the year under report to about 30 lakhs, being Rs.77,368 less than the sum expended during the previous twelve months.—Times of India.

CEYLON.

WE take the following items from the Ceylon Times of Jan. 13:—

WEATHER AND CROPS.—The weather throughout the island is unusually fine, and eminently favourable for the ripening of wood on coffee, where it exists in unusual abundance. With the exception of Ouvah districts and one or two of those in the Kandy country, the coffee crop may be said to be gathered and in course of curing. In the Happutelle district the most liberal estimates will be realised, and, as a rule, proprietors on that side of the country may congratulate on the year's operations. The outturn of the gatherings, go from six to ten cwts. per acre. According to the latest returns there have been shipped from hence 152,320cwt. plantation coffee, and 13,606cwt. native kinds, making a total of 165,926cwt. as compared with 209,216cwt. at the same period of last year.

MESSRS. RUDD BROTHERS.—On Saturday last the assignee of the insolvent estate of Messrs. Rudd Brothers sold the Karagastalawe and Meymalle coffee and cinchona estates for Rs.80,500. The former comprised 176 acres coffee and 30 acres cinchona, the latter 55 acres coffee, 96 acres cinchona, and 7 acres tea, besides forest land.

THE GRAIN TAX.—We are glad to learn that the grain tax commissioners have thus far laboured with expedition and success. The whole of that portion of the Colombo district of the Western Province situated between Negombo and Veangoda, as far as Bopé in the direction of the Pantura district, has been commuted not only to the complete satisfaction of the cultivators but to the advantage of Government.

MILITARY NEWS.—Surgeon J. A. Clery, M.B., Army Medical Department, having arrived from England in the P. and O. steamer Poonah on the 9th inst., will assume medical, charge of the troops at Galle. On the recommendation of a medical board the Major General commanding is pleased to grant Surgeon B. A. Jagoe, M.D., Army Medical Department, leave of absence from Jan. 20 to July 12, 1880, to proceed to England.

GOVERNMENT NOTIFICATION.—His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint E. T. Noyes, Esq., to be a justice of the peace for the district of Hambantotte. The undermentioned gentlemen have been re-elected as unofficial members of the Local Board of Health and Improvement of Matara, viz: G. E. Keuneman, Esq., Jonathan Silva, Esq., John Buultjens, Esq. Leave of absence from the 13th inst. to the 13th proximo having been granted to Mr. H. Nevill, Mr. T. J. de Alwis has been appointed to act during that period as commissioner of requests and joint police magistrate of Colombo and coroner for the district of Colombo.

FROM Ceylon Times, Jan. 20:—

"The continued dry weather which is so favourable to the coffee planters' prospects is prejudicial to the harvesting of the cinnamon crop, which is at the present day extremely backward. Dealers who have entered into contracts to supply considerable parcels of the spice find it impossible to fulfil their contracts, and it is extremely probable that the shipment will for some time show a decrease as compared with last year."

MILITARY ITEMS.—A portion of draft for 102nd R.M. Fusiliers, consisting of Lieut. J. D. Lysaght in command, one sergeant and thirty-nine rank and file, arrived from England on the 14th inst. by the steamship Duke of Argyll, and H.M.'s transport Tyne has arrived with a further draft since, bringing up the local strength of the regiment to eight hundred men.

INDIAN COTTON DUTIES.—A deputation from the Manchester Chamber of Commerce had an interview on Friday last with Lord Cranbrook at the India-office to protest against a rumoured intention on the part of the Indian Government to put an extra import duty on Manchester cotton goods going into India, by the reimposition of a duty on those descriptions of goods which were made free of duty about a twelvemonth ago. Sir Thomas Bazley, M.P., introduced the deputation, which urged upon Lord Cranbrook the injustice of such a proceeding as that suggested to Manchester firms which had been for so many years promised a total remission of such duties by Lord Salisbury. They stated further that the reimposition would unduly handicap Manchester houses and work little or no benefit to India. They therefore asked him to urge the Viceroy of India and his council to remove the remaining portion of the duties now levied on cotton goods at the earliest possible date, and to provide for their total abolition in the forthcoming Indian budget. Lord Cranbrook, in reply, said he had been reminded by one of the speakers that his predecessor, Lord Salisbury, had encouraged an agitation on the part of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce for the repeal of these duties; he was therefore precluded from saying as strongly as he should have liked that they seemed to him to have taken the most unnecessary step in coming there, which was an act that he feared was rather calculated to lead to the impression that the chamber somewhat distrusted the provisions which the Government had made in India, and which they had the fullest intention of carrying out. With regard to the argument as to the duties being protective or hostile to the interests of either Manchester or the consumers of India, it was wholly unnecessary for the chamber to remind the Government of those facts, as it had been intimated over and over again by Lord Salisbury, and he (Lord Cranbrook) admitted them to the fullest degree. He assured them that the Finance Minister in India and the Viceroy were as strong friends to the remission of the duties as the Manchester Chamber itself. That being so, he rather regretted that, although it might be true that the finances of India were better than they were last year, and that there was a prospect of a higher increase in the revenue than was supposed last year, nevertheless the Manchester Chamber would take into consideration the very great pressure on the finances of India and the peculiar circumstances under which India was placed, and, therefore, although there might be a great demand upon it now, that demand was greater than formerly. They had referred to a rumoured intention of the Government to add more taxes, and asked him to contradict it. He would say that the rumour had not reached his office in any degree in an official shape or in any way in which he should give it the slightest credit. Nothing, he added, could be more unjust than leading the Manchester manufacturers to suppose that a duty would be immediately put on which would check the production which had recently been stimulated to activity. That opinion would be shared by all sensible men. The budget of Sir John Strachey would be produced in a few days; he was not in a position to speak of the mode in which that budget would be finally developed, but if it should be impossible, as he thought it would be probably, that Sir John Strachey should do anything with respect to the cotton duties in the budget, at the same time it did not lessen the impression he felt that he was engaged in devising a scheme for as soon as possible relieving goods from duty—a scheme which he had begun in the face of much opposition throughout the whole of India, and in a manner which showed he had been perfectly sincere in that which he had undertaken. Neither the Government at home nor that in India were relaxing their exertions in this respect, and the deputation could depend upon it that which had been impressed upon his predecessor had been inherited by himself, and that it was intended to carry it out as soon as possible.

THE NEW BLUE BOOKS.

THE two Blue Books on the affairs of Afghanistan and Central Asia, published within the last few days, contain a vast amount of information, and almost complete our knowledge of the official documents relating to the questions connected with these countries. We say "almost," because Government has not felt able to publish "at present" the letters from the Russian authorities found at Cabul. However much the contents of those letters may swell the bill of indictment against Russia, there is sufficient in these volumes to confirm the wisdom of our recent action with regard to Afghanistan. The original cause of offence on the part of the late Ameer, Shere Ali, was that, having received a Russian, he refused to receive an English, Embassy. But Russia had also, in the sending of that Embassy, committed a breach of her engagements towards this country as understood by us. It was left for expert professors to invent the excuse of the so-called "independence" of Afghanistan twelve months after the return of the Stoletoff Embassy, which had at the time been justified on the old practice that "all is fair in war." We need not pause to show how wholly inapplicable that excuse was in this case, when, instead of there being war between England and Russia, peace had just been signed at Berlin. It is more to the point to state that in December, 1878, Lord Salisbury informed the Russian Government, in reply to a communication from Count Schouvaloff, that "the engagements in respect to those countries retained their obligatory character." This statement was regarded generally in this country as one condoning the previous action of Russia on the understanding that it was not to be repeated.

The St. Petersburg Cabinet did not regard matters in the same light. The Russian authorities at Tashkent were loth to lose all the advantages they had promised themselves from having successfully figured as the friend and ally of the Afghan ruler. General Kaufmann did not discontinue with Yakoob Khan the correspondence which he had carried on for years with Shere Ali. In March, April, and May last year he, and after his departure General Ivanoff, addressed several letters to Yakoob Khan, and his son Mousa. To such delicate attentions it is not in Asiatic nature to have shown indifference, and we have already had painful reason to know the effect of General Kaufmann's honied words on the susceptible Afghan mind. But these letters contained something more than mere expressions of courtesy and goodwill. General Kaufmann requested the Ameer to keep him informed during his absence at St. Petersburg "of every occurrence that takes place in your Highness's dominions." He based his request on the ground that he was Yakoob's "sincere friend and stanch well wisher." These facts make it palpable that, whatever may be said to the contrary, the Russian Government has fully made up its mind to treat Afghanistan, or indeed any province of it, as an independent State, in which, although nominally admitted to be "under British protection," it has equal rights of "diplomatic interference" with our own. There is neither safety nor prudence in shutting our eyes to the fact that, when it is announced that the understandings between England and Russia have acquired their original force, a very different meaning is attached to the phrase in each country. In England we have assumed that it meant that Afghanistan was "outside the sphere of Russia's operations," whereas in Russia it was only allowed to signify that that State was an independent country, like Persia for instance. We should therefore prepare ourselves for, and take precautions against, Russia carrying this theory into practice in the Afghan States which may hereafter lie beyond our Indian frontier.

On Oct. 22 General Roberts had a lengthy interview with Yakoob Khan, after his abdication, and the conversation turned upon the foreign policy of Shere Ali. On this interesting subject Yakoob Khan made several statements of the highest importance. His very first sentence confirms the accuracy of the view taken by the critics of a policy of "masterly inactivity"—viz., that "in 1869 my father was fully prepared to throw in his lot with you," and that Shere Ali then believed that "his best chance of holding what he had won lay in an alliance with the British Government." But it is with regard to the failure of the mission of Mir Mahomed Shah in 1873 that Yakoob's evidence is most important. In June of that year the expedition against Khiva alarmed Shere Ali so much that he made a voluntary appeal to the Viceroy for a distinct promise of support. Lord Northbrook telegraphs to the Duke of Argyll for instructions, but his words appear to convey the impression that, personally, he was disposed to comply with the substance of the Ameer's demand. His generous promptings were, however, cruelly nipped in the bud by the blunt and dogmatic assertion of the Duke of Argyll that "the Cabinet did not share the Ameer's apprehensions." When Mir Mahomed Shah returned to Cabul Yakoob Khan tells us that his father became convinced that "he could no longer hope to obtain from the British Government all the aid that he wanted, and from that time he began to turn his attention to the thoughts of a Russian alliance." For ordinary mortals this should be conclusive. It was our cold-blooded indifference in 1873, and our refusal to identify ourselves with "the strong and friendly ruler" then seated on the cushion at Cabul that brought about the failure of the conference at Peshawur in 1877, the reception of General Stoletoff in 1878, the invasion of Afghanistan in the same year, and the present disruption of the State. We see the effect before us, and the evidence of Yakoob Khan confirms the view that common sense impelled us to take of its causes.

With regard to the future of Afghanistan there is much in these volumes which strengthens the supposition that, so far as possible, the reorganisation of the country will be carried out on the lines of the Treaty of Gandamak. It has unfortunately become too evident that the chance afforded us of ruling Afghanistan by means of "a strong, friendly, and independent" Ameer passed away with our rupture with Shere Ali. Circumstances proved too strong for the undoubtedly capable Yakoob Khan, who was powerless to resist the action of his subjects. The question that has to be solved is, How are we to supply the place of that central authority and ensure the well government of the country, at the same time that we effectually check intrigue on the part of Russia? The military situation has first to be settled and our absolute supremacy rendered incontestable before the political arrangements can be carried out; but it is well to keep what they must aim at in view. We must have a strong frontier, and we must also have tranquil and well-ordered States immediately beyond that frontier. The future political divisions of the former Kingdom of Afghanistan may be as large as provinces, or as small as districts, but they must one and all look to us for protection against invasion, and their foreign policy must be identical with our own. It is said on good authority that Persia has been authorised by us to disregard the terms of the Treaty of Paris, and to occupy Herat. There is some reason for believing that, although substantially correct, this announcement is premature in the exact statement which it makes, and that the necessary negotiations are still pending. Persia will only be permitted, we may be sure, to acquire possession of the city she has so long coveted, on distinct conditions, and as a personal favour from the English Government to the Shah. As a temporary solution, which may reasonably be expected to work so well as to prove permanent, there is much to recommend in this course. The country is not in the mood to approve a costly and hazardous advance on Herat until its unavoidable necessity has been shown. The enterprise, whenever it becomes necessary, will be rendered the easier because Herat is held by a friend instead of, as at present, an enemy. Above all, it gives "check" to Russia at Teheran, and, if followed up by firm action with regard to Merv and the Turcomans, would give the Northern Colossus "checkmate" in Central Asia.

THE ROYAL MILITARY ACADEMY.—Lieut. Gen. Sir J. M. Adye, K.C.B., the Governor of the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, has decided, in consequence of about 90 officers being required for the Royal Artillery, to make some alterations in the studies at that institution for the next few months. These alterations are rendered necessary in order to bring forward more cadets for commissions, and the following course has been decided upon :—The month's vacation usually commencing after the public day, on the 17th inst., will be dispensed with. The now first class will go through a course of study of three months' duration, and early in May next they will be examined for commissions. The second, third, fourth, and fifth classes will continue their studies as usual until May, and will then be moved up one class and be examined over the work of both terms at the end of July next. A short recess will be granted at Easter. Any alterations which may be considered necessary in the course of studies and in the syllabus for the July examination will be duly notified. At the next examination it is understood that about 42 commissions will be awarded, seven of which will be in the Royal Engineers and the remainder in the Royal Artillery. Of those gazetted to the Royal Artillery it is understood that about 30 will be required to embark for service in India in her Majesty's Indian troopship Jumna in the course of the following month to fill up vacancies in the brigades at present in India. The two batches of gentlemen cadets who are to be hastened forward for commissions in the ensuing double term will be devoted in a much larger proportion than usual to the Royal Artillery, which is in far more need of officers than its sister corps, the Royal Engineers. It is probable also that the young officers will, in both cases, soon after they receive their commissions, be despatched for duty in India, which absorbs a very large proportion of the brigades of Royal Artillery even in times of peace.—Times.

HOME NEWS.

THE INDIAN MUSEUM.—The Duke of Richmond and Gordon has appointed Dr. Birdwood to write a popular illustrated monograph on the industrial arts of India, and also as official referee for the Indian Museum. As referee the latter gentleman has recommended the illumination of the present dark staircases at either end of the galleries with maps, painted on the walls in fresco, illustrating the gradual development of European knowledge of the geography and commerce of the East Indies. It is a fine idea, and we are glad to understand that it has been favourably entertained and is likely to be carried out under the direction of Col. Yule, C.B. It may not be possible to execute the whole scheme at once, but a commencement will be made. The maps will be drawn in the quaint style of the originals from which they will be reproduced, with the seas coloured blue. We regret to find that another proposal made by the official referee, to repaint the walls of the exhibition galleries in Roman ochre, has not been adopted, and they will be repainted in the rueful French green which they have worn ever since 1862. It is a deplorable mistake.—Athenæum.

INDIAN APPEAL CASES.—In the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on Friday the case of the New Beerbhoom Coal Company (Limited) v. Boloram Mahata and others was decided. This was an appeal from a judgment of the High Court of Calcutta of April 25, 1878, affirming a decision of the local tribunal at Burdwan, in the Bengal Presidency. Mr. Cowie and Mr. Macnaghten were counsel for the appellants; Mr. Leith, Q.C., and Mr. Doyne for the respondents. The suit was brought by the appellants for the specific performance of an alleged agreement to grant a mining lease of some waste lands in the district of Raneegunge. The circumstances had no general interest. Their lordships, at the conclusion of the arguments, affirmed the decision of the courts below, and dismissed the appeal, with costs.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—The tenders for Rs.45,00,000 in bills on India were received yesterday at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, Rs.36,53,000, at an average rate of 1s. 8·107d., and to Bombay, Rs.8,47,000, at an average rate of 1s. 8·107d. Tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 8 1-16d. will receive about 5 per cent., all above that price in full. The whole of the bills offered have again been disposed of, but before that could be accomplished a reduction of almost ½ per cent. on last week's rate had to be submitted to.

"THE GRAPHIC" GALLERY.—An exhibition will open next week which promises to be of some interest. The proprietors of The Graphic have commissioned most of the leading artists of the day each to paint a head typifying his conception of beauty, and the result is a number of admirably-painted heads by Sir Frederick Leighton, P.R.A.; Messrs. Alma Tadema, A.R.A.; E. Long, A.R.A.; P. H. Calderon, R.A.; G. D. Leslie, R.A.; J. J. Tissot; G. Storey, A.R.A.; Marcus Stone, A.R.A.; Philip Morris, A.R.A.; and others.

THE LORD LAWRENCE MEMORIAL.—A public meeting, to be presided over by the Lord Mayor, will be held at the Mansion House on Friday afternoon, in furtherance of this memorial. The speakers who will probably address the meeting include Lord Derby, the Dean of Westminster, Lord George Hamilton, Sir T. White, Lord Northbrook, Mr. Seton Kerr, and others, who believe that the character and achievements of Lord Lawrence and his life-long devotion to his work entitle him to a national memorial.

ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.—At the meeting of this society on Tuesday evening, held in the theatre of the University of London, the Earl of Northbrook presided. The paper appointed to be read was "On Afghanistan, the Eastern Border of Pishin, and the Basin of the Zoras," by Major General Sir Michael Biddulph. Sir Michael Biddulph, after paying a tribute to the officers and troops who accompanied him on the journey, observed that nowhere could they find anything at all approaching to the vast plains and huge sterile skirts or glacis of the mountains which are the marked features in southern and western Afghanistan. Another peculiarity also was the abrupt character of the mountains, and the opposition of the outlines to those of the plains. As they came to understand the Pishin country they used to liken the whole basin to some mollusk, the body being represented by the wide plains from Hyklezai to Eulistan Karez in one direction, and from Alizai to the mouth of the Ghazarbund in another. The arms would be the two branches of the Shalkop Zora, the Kakur Zora, the Sarkhab, with two streams feeding it, and the Barshori Zora. The feelers might be represented by the Karatoo, Kojuk, and Eulistan Nallas. The marked feature in the physical character of south Afghanistan was the uniform direction and parallelism of the ridges. The great ranges in which lie the water partings often had a direction of their own at an angle to the parallel ridges. They found the usual direction of the ridges was from north east to south west, and this was the general lie of the slope or tilt of the country. The Khoja Amran had this character of parallel ridges, and the feature was exhibited in the outlying range extending to Gonlistan Kerez, which left an open nearly level plain between it and the main range. The Khoja Amran, though it terminates, yet had the feature of a continued range, taken up in a parallel ridge, running in a like direction to the south west for a distance yet unknown. Including skirts on both sides the breadth of the Shorawah plain was ten miles, and its length might be fifty miles. It would be well if they could find a favourable route into the Shorwah plain from the north east or eastward, but this did not appear to be possible. The road to Pishin up the Takji Gorges had to cross and recross the Lora, which in flood time would render the passage impossible. Over the Sarlah Hills to the eastward there were three passes, the Shutar, the Salwatu, and the Bed Kotals. Of these the last was the best. The country to the eastward, in the direction of Quetta, was crossed by a number of ridges, and could not, therefore, be compared with the plain of Pishin in regard to the facilities offered for a railway. He believed they could not find any route affording such facilities as the Ghwaja, where the difficulties might be overcome. In the present state of our geographical knowledge it was impossible to make a satisfactory study of the water partings of the Sharud Tasa basin. The western lip was as yet very undefined. The Shalkot valleys and plains were continuous, without the break of any dividing ridge. The boundary between Keylah and Afghan territory ran diagonally from a little north of Kuylah. The road to Pishin covered the Shalkot Zora, near Kuylah, where the banks were composed of clay. The great open space comprising the Pishin portion of the basin of the Zoras was inhabited by a population of Syuds and Tunins, with a fringe of Kakurs and Achuykars, generally employed in agriculture and engaged in mercantile pursuits. The country was abundantly well watered by numerous streams. Chains of villages followed the watercourses, and the area of cultivation was even now very considerable. Before the end of the next twenty years the railway would have passed on towards Persia, and roads and railways would have been constructed down the easy and fertile valleys of the Kakur country to India, and possibly by way of Keylah, direct to the sea. The area of cultivation would have increased; the people, already traders, in carrying their produce down to India and to the sea, and returning with European goods, would have learned the value of commerce and of a peaceable, firm, and just rule. Such had been the change produced in many other countries which had passed under our influence in India, and they might safely draw such a picture of the immediate future of Pishin. Sir H. Rawlinson expressed his sense of the value of the lecture, and of the extreme value of the service which Sir Michael Biddulph had performed. The country described had been hitherto unexplored so far as the survey department was concerned, and what he had stated was new and very valuable.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

THE ADDRESS.

The address in reply to the Queen's speech was moved by the Earl of Onslow, who, in the course of his speech, defended the Treaty of Gandamak. The desire of the Indian Government was that Afghanistan should be a friendly and independent Power. They were not unprepared for the eventualities which followed the death of Shere Ali, and had carefully considered British interests, independently of Afghan rule. After referring to the rapidity and skill of the advance on Cabul, he said that at present it would not be possible to withdraw our troops.

Earl GRANVILLE regarded the subject of Afghanistan as one in which the interest of the country is deeply concerned. He drew a parallel between the first and present Afghan wars, except as to the incompetency of our officers, and quoted Lord Lawrence's opinion. He considered that the Government was playing the game of Russia, and he desired to know what their policy really was. In his opinion the slow march on Cabul, taking a month to accomplish fifty-two miles to Jellalabad, was retarded by the want of preparations on the part of the Government of India.

The Earl of BEACONSFIELD was at a loss to know what the noble earl desired to be told with respect to Afghanistan while affairs there were unfinished. By the Treaty of Gandamak we had obtained an adequate and powerful north-west frontier; that policy had been interrupted by terrible circumstances, but remained unchanged, as supporting the independence of Afghanistan and opposed to annexation. It was an error to suppose that country to have been formerly under one ruler, and it might be necessary to restore the condition of things previous to Dost Mahomed. It was our object to have prosperous and contented neighbours, and, though a difficult and anxious time, we believed that a satisfactory settlement, resulting in establishing a tranquil and commercially friendly Afghanistan, would be accomplished. It was an error to represent the whole population as opposed to us. The Premier referred to the Afghan memorial imputing most criminal and cruel conduct to our soldiers. His reply had been a request for documentary proofs, which had not been furnished. All knew the skill and bravery of Sir F. Roberts, and he had been described as a most merciful man. It had been necessary to institute inquiries as to the charges made against him by the memorialists, but in doing so he had expressed his disbelief in the allegations, which would doubtless be soon stigmatised and forgotten.

The Duke of ARGYLL contended that General Roberts had proclaimed that he would shoot men for defending their country, which they had a right to do. The question of the war in Afghanistan could not be treated in a desultory discussion on the address, and consequently he had given notice of a motion which would bring it fully under the consideration of the House. He wished to know whether the Secretary for India approved the Chairman of Foreign Relations in the India-office publishing a grave recommendation of annexation in Afghanistan and of a guarantee to Persia. The papers showed that in India some one—he did not say it was Lord Lytton, though it was rumoured that he was for going further than the Government at home—had communicated to the press a telegram sent out to the Government of India by the Home Government, which telegram was published with unfavourable comments as to the effects created in India by the message of the Home Government.

Lord CRANBROOK found grave fault with an ex-Secretary of State for attacking the Governor General without having the facts before him. Lord Lytton had fully discussed and then fully carried out the policy of the Government. It was unworthy of the noble duke to charge on the Governor General or any member of the Government of India the disclosure of a telegram which might have been obtained by intrigue. He did not think it advisable that members of the Council of India should enter upon political subjects, and had declined to read Sir H. Rawlinson's article; but he could not control the members of the Council of India in respect of what they might think fit to publish. He believed it would turn out that not a single man had been shot by General Roberts in the circumstances referred to by the noble duke. In fact, General Roberts, according to the opinions of those best acquainted with the facts, had erred, if at all, on the side of mercy; but he would defer further observations on the point till General Roberts made his own defence. It would be impossible to desert those Afghans who had helped us, but he believed that without increasing our territorial responsibility we could secure them.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY, FEB. 5.

THE ADDRESS.

Col. MORAY, in moving the address in reply to the Queen's speech, referred to the lamentable massacre of our Embassy at Cabul. He said that the defence of the Residency had added another record of gallantry to our Indian annals. The command of the routes secured by the Treaty of Gandamak had facilitated the advance on Cabul, which had shown the skill of General Roberts and the devotion of the British and native troops. He thought that the system of frontier railroads would prove most valuable commercially as well as strategically, and praised the administrative abilities of Sir Donald Stewart in Southern Afghanistan.

Lord HARTINGTON complained that the speech contained no reference to our future policy in Afghanistan, and argued that the course of events had rendered it impossible to pursue the policy of the Treaty of Gandamak, for the State of Afghanistan had ceased to exist, and we could not set up a ruler or break up the country into various provinces. He wished for more information as to the military executions at Cabul, and especially as to the proclamation concerning rebels, for which the Government of India was responsible.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that papers would be presented explaining the state of affairs in Afghanistan, and, with regard to the "executions," he read the instructions which had been sent to Sir F. Roberts, on whom he passed a high eulogium, and stated that the general had been ordered to send home a full statement of the persons executed, and the reasons, which was on its way home. Although it was impossible to give up military possession of the country at present, the Government still held to the principle of its original policy—not to make any annexation, but simply to secure a strong frontier.

Mr. FAWCETT desired to ask with respect to the cost of the war. India had contributed £2,600,000, and so far £320,000, or one-seventh of that sum, was all that England had been called upon and asked to contribute. Now that hostilities had recommenced he trusted the Government would not propose to apportion the additional expenditure between England and India on the same unjust principle.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY, FEB. 6.

THE EMPRESS OF INDIA.

Sir H. D. WOLFF having asked a question as to the supposed existence of a despatch from the Duke of Argyll in which the Queen was designated "Empress of India," Mr. E. STANHOPE said that at the close of the conference between Shere Ali and Lord Mayo in 1869 it was determined to send a friendly telegram to the Ameer in answer to one from him. This was drafted by the officials in the India-office in the name of the Queen of England; and the Duke of Argyll, apparently in his own hand, altered the words to "Queen of Great Britain and Ireland and Empress of India." Mr. Stanhope added that there would be no objection to lay the despatch on the table.

THE RUSSIAN CORRESPONDENCE.

In answer to Mr. ASHBURY, Mr. E. STANHOPE said it was perfectly true that certain Russian correspondence with Shere Ali had been discovered at Cabul, and was in possession of the Government, but after careful consideration the Government had come to the conclusion not to publish it at present, and not to give any information about it.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY, FEB. 9.

THE EMPRESS OF INDIA.

The Duke of ARGYLL made a personal explanation. That morning the Secretary for India was good enough to show him the telegram in which, before the passing of the bill conferring on her Majesty the title of Empress of India, the Queen was so styled. He found that beyond all doubt he, in his own handwriting, altered the title used in that telegram as it was originally drawn up, and inserted "Empress of India." The circumstance had escaped his memory. It was, however, a mistake to suppose that he spoke against the bill conferring the title of Empress on her Majesty. He took no part in the discussions on that bill, which, at the time, he thought was viewed with exaggerated feelings on both sides. If, however, it was the foundation of the new Imperial policy of the Government in the East he owed his noble friends an apology for not having opposed it.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY, FEB. 9.

RUSSIA AND CABUL.

Mr. ONSLOW having asked whether the Russian correspondence discovered at Cabul bore on the facts related by Yakoob Khan to Sir F. Roberts, Mr. E. STANHOPE declined to answer any questions on the subject, as the Government had fully determined not to make the correspondence public at present.

THE RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.

In answer to Sir C. DILKE, Col. STANLEY said he believed that as a matter of fact the rules relating to newspaper correspondents in the field, published in the recess, were not in force. His department, he further said, had sanctioned no rules, and the rules referred to had been drawn up after the Russo-Turkish War for discussion only. As to his personal opinion, he did not think that any such rules could be enforced without considerable modification.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY, FEB. 10.

PERSIA AND HERAT.

Replying to Lord GRANVILLE, Lord BEACONSFIELD said that there was no foundation whatever for the statement that her Majesty's Government had released Persia from her treaty engagement not to enter Herat. He added, however, that, during the progress of the steps which her Majesty's Government were taking for the settlement of Afghanistan, communications had been made from the Persian Court to her Majesty, referring to the north eastern frontier. But nothing had as yet been concluded, and he appealed to their lordships to show their usual confidence in the Executive by not asking for more details of the matter at present. No doubt papers would be laid on the table when the business was concluded, but it would be most inconvenient—he might say most injurious—to the public interests that those communications should be made known at present.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY, FEB. 10.

PERSIA AND HERAT.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON having asked what truth there was in the statement of the Times that Persia had been released from the obligations of the treaty of 1857 not to occupy Herat, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said there had been communications received from the Government of Persia on this subject, and it had been a matter of consideration, but the Government had not come to any arrangement, and at present it would not be convenient to make any statement.

Digitized by Google

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY, FEB. 11.

THE EXPENSES OF THE AFGHAN WAR.

Mr. FAWCETT moved an amendment to the report on the address with the object of committing the House to the opinion that the whole or part of the expense of the Afghan war should be borne out of Imperial funds. Repeating his well-known views that, as various Ministers had justified the war as necessary for the safety of the Empire, India ought not exclusively to bear the burden of it, he offered on the present occasion not to go to a division if the Government would give an undertaking not to prejudge the question before the English Budget was brought on.

Mr. ONSLOW contended that though Imperial policy might have had something to do with the first, the second was undertaken to punish the murder of Sir L. Cavagnari. There was nothing unfair, therefore, in charging the expenses of it on the Indian revenue.

Sir G. BALFOUR insisted that the Ministerial estimate of the cost of the war was utterly inadequate; and Sir G. CAMPBELL, who asked whether the Indian Council, with which rested the control over the expenditure of Indian revenues, had sanctioned the construction of the railway to Kandahar, asserted that our operations in Afghanistan could not be continued without a large increase in our native army.

Sir WILLIAM HARCOURT read a long extract from a speech of Mr. Disraeli in 1842 condemning the policy of an invasion of Afghanistan, and urging that the expense of such a war should be paid out of Imperial revenue.

Mr. E. STANHOPE retorted that the Whig Government of that day had not contributed a single penny towards the expenses of the war; and, with regard to Mr. Disraeli's observations on policy, he remarked that circumstances had very much changed since that time. Mr. Fawcett's amendment he held to be altogether premature, as it was absolutely impossible to come to any decision in the absence of further information. By the end of this month he expected to be in possession of the figures of the Indian Budget, in which would be contained an estimate of the cost of the Afghan war up to the end of this year and the next year. Then would be the time for the Government to consider the whole subject; but before it arrived it was quite impossible to come to any conclusion. Looking to this consideration, and to the danger of making a declaration that the Home Government would defray the cost of any policy which the Indian Government undertook, he hoped the House would negative the amendment.

On the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER undertaking that before any vote was taken on the financial arrangements for this country for the year the House should have an opportunity of expressing its views on the expediency of contributing to the cost of the Afghan war, Mr. FAWCETT withdrew his amendment.

CUSTOM TARIFF.—A committee has been appointed, consisting of the Hon. T. C. Hope, Mr. Maclean, the collector of customs at Calcutta, and a non-official member whom the Bengal Chamber have been asked to nominate, for the purpose of settling the valuations to be adopted for the customs tariff for the official year 1880-1. This committee is not appointed with any view of further tinkering the cotton duties, but relates to quite a distinct idea. The commission on the customs duties, whose report was appended to the last budget resolution, submitted a second report, besides that relating especially to the cotton duties, and recommended inter alia that the valuations should be revised annually by a committee. This is the work to be undertaken now.—Pioneer.

THE MUNICIPAL DEBT OF BOMBAY.—A bill has been introduced into the local Legislative Council with the object of consolidating the balances of the several loans due by the Bombay municipality to the Government of India into one debt. The consolidation dates from Nov. 2, 1876, because previous to that time the old loans carried 5 per cent. interest, but since then interest has run on all the loans of Government to the Bombay municipality at 4½ per cent. The balances remaining unpaid on November 2, 1876, belonged to what are known as the Fifteen Lakhs Loan and the Four Lakhs Loan, of the former of which there were Rs.12,70,000, and of the latter Rs.3,70,000 remaining unpaid. To these amounts are added the Thirty-six Lakhs Loan advanced for the construction of the Tulsi Waterworks and the Six Lakhs Loan which the Government of India lent the municipality for the improvement of the surface drainage of the city. This addition gives an aggregate of Rs.58,40,000. A considerable amount has, of course, been paid since November, 1876; but sufficient of the debt remains unliquidated to necessitate that the municipality, in order to clear off the liability, with interest, within thirty years from Jan. 1, 1881, should pay the sum of one lakh seventy-eight thousand three hundred and twenty-six rupees two annas and five pies twice every year during that period. It is to secure the regular payment of this amount every half-year—the precise dates fixed are Jan. 1 and July 1—that the bill now before the Legislative Council has been introduced. In the case of an instalment not being paid on the day named for its payment, it is provided that the Accountant General "shall, within seven days after the day on which such payment ought to have been made, report the matter to the Chief Secretary to Government," who may thereupon "direc any Government officer, not being an officer of the Bombay municipality, to detain to the extent of any payment or payments then in arrear any moneys due or that may become due to the Corporation, which he may then or thereafter have in his custody or control, and such officer shall be bound to detain the moneys which he is so directed to detain and to pay the same as they become due to the Corporation into her Majesty's treasury or into any bank as aforesaid to the credit of the Secretary of State for India in Council."—Bombay Gazette.

THE NEW DIAMONDS, DIAMANTÉ BRILLIANTS,

have created an extraordinary sensation in Paris, and are rapidly and deservedly superseding real diamonds. Their cost is about 1-300th less. These magnificent Stones first attracted notice at the Paris Exhibition last year, where they were exposed side by side with real diamonds of great value, and they are now introduced into England for the first time. They are absolutely identical in size, brilliancy, lustre, and durability with real diamonds of the first water, and defy detection even by jewellers and experts. They are immeasurably superior to real diamonds of second-rate quality. THE MANUFACTURER GUARANTEES THE SURPRISE AND PLEASURE OF PURCHASERS. These brilliants can be worn in the strongest daylight, which is practically the real test of perfection, and the most sceptical will be utterly deceived. They can be mounted side by side with real diamonds of the first quality, and will be found undistinguishable therefrom. They are worn at the Court Balls, and upon all occasions in Paris and St. Petersburg. The prohibitive prices charged in England for real diamonds render their acquisition impossible to the middle classes, and the imitation diamonds hitherto sold are worthless, the imposition being manifest to the most careless observer. The DIAMANTÉ BRILLIANTS can, on the contrary, be worn with absolute and entire confidence at all times and for a lifetime, and, as we have said above, defy the closest scrutiny. Purchasers invariably repeat their purchases. The investigations and labour of two generations have been expended in bringing these remarkable jewels to their present state of perfection.

The diamonds will be forwarded packed in a box, registered by post, the same day upon receipt of order and remittance. Remittances may be made by cheques, post-office orders, postage stamps, or Cheque Bank cheques, direct to

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE,

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle

TO THE HOLDERS OF INDIA £5 PER CENT. STOCK AND INDIA £5 PER CENT. STOCK CERTIFICATES.

India-office, 22nd December, 1879.

With reference to the Advertisement issued from this Office, dated the 2nd July, 1879, and under powers given by the Act 22 and 23 Vict., chap. 39, and subsequent Acts, the Secretary of State for India in Council hereby gives notice that he is willing to grant a like amount of India £4 per Cent. Stock and India £4 per Cent. Stock Certificates respectively, in exchange for the India £5 per Cent. Stock and India £5 per Cent. Stock Certificates referred to in that Advertisement.

The Stock and Certificates so granted will be consolidated with, and will be subject to the same conditions as, the existing India £4 per Cent. Stock and Stock Certificates, and will be redeemable at par on or after the 10th October, 1888, upon one year's previous notice having been given in the London Gazette by the Secretary of State for India in Council.

The holders of India £5 per Cent. Stock or Stock Certificates who avail themselves of this offer will receive in exchange for their £5 per Cent. Stock or Stock Certificates an equal amount of India £4 per Cent. Stock or Stock Certificates, with dividend from 5th April, 1880. They will also receive, on the 5th July, 1880, a payment of £1 10s. per cent. on the amount of India £5 per Cent. Stock or Stock Certificates surrendered (making, with the £1 interest which will have accrued on the £4 per Cent Stock, a sum equal to half a year's interest at £5 per cent. per annum on the original Stock).

The holders of India £5 per Cent. Stock or Stock Certificates, who may desire to convert their Stock or Certificates upon the terms above mentioned, are hereby required to signify their assent to the Secretary of State for India in Council in a form to be obtained at the Chief Accountant's Office at the Bank of England; and such assents must be delivered at the Chief Accountant's Office at the Bank of England on or before Monday, the 1st March, 1880. From the time of the delivery of such assents the holders of India £5 per Cent. Stock will be precluded from dealing with their respective shares of that Stock; but on the 8th of March, or, in the case of assents sent in on or before the 23 d February, on the 2nd March their shares of India £5 per Cent. Stock having been cancelled, corresponding amounts of India £4 per Cent. Stock will be inscribed in their names, and may from that date be dealt in. The assents of holders of India £5 per Cent. Stock Certificates must be accompanied by the Stock Certificates therein referred to, for which a receipt will be given, that will be exchangeable for the new India £4 per Cent. Stock Certificates after the expiration of seven days from the date of surrender.

In the case of Stock transferable at the Bank of Ireland, and of Certificates issued in respect thereof, the forms must be obtained from the Accountant General's Office at the Bank of Ireland, and the assents must be delivered at that Office on or before the 1st March, 1880, as aforesaid.

All holders of India £5 per Cent. Stock or India £5 per Cent. Stock Certificates who do not, on or before Monday, the 1st March, 1880, signify in the manner above prescribed their assent to accept India £4 per Cent. Stock or India £4 per Cent. ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1880.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Jan. 31; Madras and Allahabad, Jan. 29; Calcutta, Jan. 28.

THE reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending Jan. 20 state that slight rain fell during the week in the eastern districts of Bengal, Assam, and in the Punjab; in the North Western Provinces there was a slight shower in Meerut and plentiful rain in Kumaun. Rain is in most provinces wanted for the spring crops. Agricultural prospects remain good on the whole. Public health good, save in the Deccan.

THE health reports for the same week, as quoted in the Pioneer, are briefly as follows:—Bombay: Seventy-nine deaths from cholera in Puna city; fever in Kanara, Dharwar, and Surat. Bengal: Fever, cholera, and small pox still reported in places; general health, on the whole, good. North Western Provinces and Oudh: Health improving. British Burma: General health good; small pox somewhat prevalent; some cholera and fever. Bangalore: Fever prevalent in some places, otherwise health good. Hyderabad: No sickness. Marwar: Health good; also in Ajmir.

THE telegraphic news from Cabul received since our last issue is chiefly of rumoured preparations for attack on the part of Mahomed Jan, between whom and Mushk-i-alam dissension has arisen. The exact state of affairs at Herat is unknown, so are the precise movements of Abdurrahman. Reports come from St. Petersburg that Ayoob Khan has marched to Ghazni to join Mahomed Jan, and that an entrenched camp is being constructed at Herat. On one side preparations are being made for the advance from Kandahar on Ghazni. The Lughman expedition has been successful, Asmatulla and a very few other Ghilzai chiefs alone having withheld submission. In Kandahar all is quiet. The transport animals are being moved from Peshawur to Jellalabad, whence reports come of an adverse attitude being assumed by Shinwaris and some Mohmands.

COLONEL R. PHAYRE, C.B., who is to command the Bombay Army Corps in Southern Afghanistan, has just been placed on the list of majors general, consequent upon the retirement of Lieut. General W. B. Salmon. Major General G. Verner, for the same cause, becomes a lieut. general on the Indian gradation list, and Major C. W. Haines a lieutenant colonel. As General Verner has retired from the service, Major General Sir H. Ramsay, Col. J. H. M. Babington, and Major G. C. Ross get a step each.

A Daily News Lahore telegram states that a Turcoman force, under Mahomed Isa Khan, Mahomed Sirdar Khan, and Mahomed Aziz Khan, from Bokhara, has reached Akwcha, in Afghan Turkestan, forty-two miles from Balkh. Abdul Rahman, it is believed, has arrived with it. The news is said to cause great excitement in the Cabul districts.

THE expected Budget will be published this week, and the Government will move to Simla about the middle of March.

A GREAT fire at Simla has done much damage, destroying a row of new shops and for some time seriously endangering the public buildings.

THE Home News is in a position to announce that the Secretary of State for India in Council, after consulting with the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury and reference to the Government of India, has decided that the rate of exchange for the adjustment of Indian pay and allowances, and of retrenchments, family remittances, and messing money claims shall be 1s. 8d. the rupee during the official year commencing on April 1, 1880.

HER MAJESTY has been pleased to make a grant of all her Indian trophies, pictures, &c., which are at Windsor and other palaces, to the New Indian Museum.

KING THEEBAW and his Ministers have made a claim of fifteen lakhs of rupees against a Mr. Darwood, a European British subject at Mandalay, and it is said he has been forbidden to leave the city until the claim is settled.

THE members of the Byculla Club gave a farewell dinner to Mr. J. M. Maclean, late of the Bombay Gazette, on Jan. 26. The Governor of Bombay was one of the guests.

THE urgent appeal of the Lord Mayor of Dublin has met with prompt response in Bombay and Madras. In the former city a meeting, attended by European and native officials and merchants, and presided over by his Excellency the Governor, was held. A numerous and influential committee was appointed, and Dr. Weir, Mr. Dosabhoy Framjee, the Hon. Morarjee Greuldas, and Mr. Mahomed Ali Rogay were appointed secretaries. Up to the mail date the subscription list, headed by his Excellency Sir R. Temple with Rs.600, and including £100 from the Nawab of Joonaghur, amounted to £1,000. At the preliminary meeting held at Madras on Jan. 30 a sum of Rs.2,450 was subscribed in the room and arrangements made for a public meeting.

IT looks very much as if Lord Lytton was about to settle all the small arrears which the big business across the border had caused to accumulate. The Chief Commissioner of Assam was recently summoned to Government House, presumably to be consulted about Naga affairs (which may be further complicated by the raid on Mr. Blyth's estate), the Chief Commissioner of Mysore has also gone to Calcutta to receive his final orders about the important administrative changes in Mysore, and now we see that the Chief Commissioner of British Burma has arrived at the metropolis "to discuss official business with the Government of India." It would not be very hazardous to conclude that the official business refers to the "Burma difficulty," as the present relations, or rather non-relations, between the Governments of her Imperial Majesty the Queen-Empress and his Majesty King Theebaw used to be called, when they attracted more notice than the public can afford to give to the subject.

IN the Legislative Council of Jan. 29 the reports of the Select Committee on the bill to provide for revision of proceedings in trials held under the Military Cantonments Act 1864 were taken into consideration, and the bill subsequently passed. The Hon. Hazzid Ahmed Khan introduced the bill for the appointment of persons to the office of kazi, and the bill was referred to a select committee. A bill to give effect to the convention between the Governor General of British India and Portuguese India regarding the extradition of criminals was introduced into the Council by Mr. Hope and passed into law.

THE list of attendances at the Levee held on Tuesday by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, on behalf of the Queen, contains the following names:—Presented by the Persian Minister, Aboul Ghasshim Khan, Attaché to the Legation; by the Chinese Chargé d'Affaires, Mr. Chen Sing-Keng. By the Secretary of State for India: General Ballard; Major A. Currie, Bombay Cavalry; Surgeon Major W. Finden, Bengal Medical Department; Major R. P. Nisbet, B.S.C.; Sir Philip Cunliffe Owen, C.I.E.; Surgeon General Ross, C.I.E., Bengal Army; Mr. Henry Scannell, District Superintendent of Police, Bombay; Lieut. J. F. C. Thatcher, B.S.C.; Mr. T. H. Thornton, C.S.I., B.C.S.; and Mr. T. W. Wood, B.C.S.

HOLDERS of India Five per Cent. Stock who intend to avail themselves of the option to take India Four per Cent. Stock in exchange are reminded that their assents must be sent into the Bank of England not later than Monday, March 1. The stock of those holders who do not assent to the exchange will be paid off at par in July next.

THE report that during General Baker's first visit to Maidan and the Darra Narkh our soldiers drove old men, women, and children into the fields, and then fired their homesteads, is described as "utterly false" by a correspondent at Cabul, who says that "to soldiers looking upon these things in a purely military spirit, our policy seems to have been far too tolerant," and that "they resent with bitterness the taunt that they have been nothing but brutal devastators."

FROM inquiries by the Government of India whether it is the intention of her Majesty's Government that the brevet rank for length of service, heretofore granted to officers of the Indian services, should entirely cease, the Secretary of State has replied that, considering the circumstances under which the rank was originally introduced, and the fact that its immediate cessation would lead to the supersession of some staff officers, and majors, and captains of cavalry, under the old conditions of service, by the officers of the general list, he considers that these brevet promotions should not cease in each rank until the extinction of that rank among the officers of the local service.

THE Hon. Syad Ahmed Khan, the Mahomedan member of the Viceregal Legislative Council, has introduced a bill for the appointment of persons to the office of Kazi in the Madras Presidency, where the want of these practitioners by the Mahomedans is mostly felt.

A CORRESPONDENT writes to the Pioneer to give a proof of the crying necessity for provincial agricultural departments. He says that the superintendent of cotton experiments is trying to improve windmills and utilise them for irrigation, whereupon the commissioner remarks:—"This has been often tried and has always failed," and "Mr. Strachan would do well to devote his energies to matters less mechanical and more directly connected with agriculture." On the other hand, the correspondent takes the side of the windmills against the Quixotic commissioner. "I am certain," he writes, "that windmills have a great future in India. I look forward to the time when there will be luxuriant gardens forming broad zones of high cultivation round every village in India, the rich green vegetation maintained in its fresh verdure by abundant irrigation, water being raised by windmills driven by the same steady hot winds which may parch the country and wither every green thing. A cheap, strong windmill for India would be a greater boon than rhea, or fair dholera, or reana, or succirubra."

THE Gazette of India contains an amended account of the profits of the currency note circulation and of the charges and expenses incidental thereto, during the year 1878-79, made up as required by Section 20 of the Indian Paper Currency Act, 1871. The profits that Government receives from its note circulation are derived by the investment of a portion of the money against which notes are issued in Government securities, and the interest on such securities held by the department last year was Rs.23,77,573. Another source of profit to the department is the selling of currency drafts to the public at a premium, and from this source Rs.16,392 were received, and the miscellaneous receipts were Rs.1,529. The entire charges and expenses were only Rs.5,18,910. Of this sum the salaries of commissioners and assistant commissioners absorbed Rs.41,589, and the establishment Rs.1,60,804. There were Rs.11,179 expended upon temporary establishments. Apart from the cost of the establishment, the two largest items of expenditure were incurred as charges for remittances and as cost of note forms. The clear profit to Government from the note circulation in 1878-79 was Rs.1,876,585, received not by harassing the public, but by affording it a very great convenience.

IN the Administration Report of the North Western Provinces for 1878-79 an opportunity is taken by Sir George Couper to notice the offers of assistance which have been so generously made by the leading noblemen and gentlemen of the North Western Provinces and Oudh since the Afghan war broke out. "Up to the close of the year under review," it is stated, "from thirty to forty native gentlemen from all parts of the provinces came forward voluntarily offering to assist the Government in various ways (with men, money, transport, personal services, &c.) in the expedition against Cabul; and the Lieutenant Governor and Chief Commissioner has much pleasure in thus placing on permanent and public record his sense of the loyal feelings which prompted these offers."

THE Bombay journals publish a minute by his Excellency the Governor of Bombay on the comparative merits of the Bolan and Sibi Railway routes. On the merits, as shown with the exhaustive comparison, the latter—viz., by Sibi, Hurnai, and Gwal to Kandahar, was approved by the Government of India, and the 133½ miles to Sibi completed by the promptitude of the Governor in 101 days. We quote the concluding paragraph of the minute:—

"It will have been seen that we contemplate Gulistan Kariz being the obligatory place for which the railway is to make. This place is at the foot of the Gwaja Pass, by which we hope to see the rail carried onward to Kandahar. The old Gwaja Pass runs during a part of its course through a granitic formation quite impracticable for a railway. But parallel to the Gwaja Pass, and answering all its purposes, is the Durra Pass, to which my attention was drawn by Col. de Bourbel, and which I have visited in company with Lieut. Whiteford, R.E. There seems to be no doubt that the Durra Pass is very well suited for a railway in respect to gradients and curves, and will answer very well if no pass still better shall be found. It is scarcely to be hoped that a better pass will be found, as the main pass, the Khojuk, is, as we all see, manifestly inferior, and as the remaining pass, the Roghani, is believed to be worse still. I merely mention this to explain why we indicate Gulistan Khariz as the point to which the survey is directed for the railway from the Indus Valley to Southern Afghanistan."

The forty-five miles between Sibi and Spin Tangi are to be completed during the months of February, March, and April, before the hot weather comes on. From Spin Tangi onwards the climate is more moderate, supplies are procurable, and the water good. Consequently, the work will be continued during the summer, and the section of the line to Dargur will be laid, temporarily, if necessary, at first; and by May, 1881, the whole line from Sukkur to Gwal, in the midst of the Pishin plateau, will be open for traffic.

A CALCULATION of the Bombay troops lately ordered either to go on service or to hold themselves in readiness to proceed to Southern Afghanistan, should they be required, shows the total to be 15,000 men and eighty-three guns.

As might have been expected from previous complaints of the traffic management, a collision took place near Tantah on Thursday morning last between the Indian mail train from Suez and a goods train. The European driver was killed. Conflicting accounts have been received of the injury sustained by the passengers, but all the Indian homeward bound escaped without injury worth mentioning, and were able to proceed by the Peru, which left at 6 p.m. and made a very quick passage to Brindisi, arriving at 10 p.m. on Sunday.

WE see that the Indian Mirror repudiates Dayananda Saraswati Swami as not belonging to the Brahmo. This reforming Pandit (whose pupil and follower assisted Professor Williams in his lecture on Monday) bases his theory on the Veda, whereas the Brahmos reject the Veda and Vedanta. We wonder if it would be possible to arrange for Pandit Krishnu Varma to give an exposition of the tenets professed by his co-religionist. His brief rationalistic explanations of the ancient creed and ceremonial commanded intense attention from his hearers, who would doubtless gladly embrace an opportunity of listening to a more elaborate discourse with fuller details.

WE understand that the scheme of the Oxford Indian Institute has been submitted to her Majesty, whose consent to become patron has been given. Her Majesty has also approved of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales as vice-patron, and expressed her desire that the Maharajas who have become benefactors to the institute shall also be placed on the list of vice-patrons.

THE report that Mr. St. Barbe would be transferred from Burma to Central India was correct. Mr. St. Barbe's new appointment is that of second assistant to Sir Henry Daly, agent to the Governor General.

THE Gazette of India notifies that Lieut. Col. J. Johnstone, political agent, Manipur, has been appointed to officiate as Deputy Commissioner of the Naga Hills, in the third grade of deputy commissioners, in addition to his own duties, with effect from Oct. 22, 1879, until further orders.

A regulation has been made by the Governor General in Council, at the suggestion of Sir S. C. Bayley, providing for the removal of certain frontier tracts in Assam inhabited or frequented by barbarians or semi-civilised tribes from the operation of enactments in force therein. The regulation, which is called "The Assam Frontier Tracts Regulation, 1880," extends to such frontier tracts within the territories administered by the Chief Commissioner of Assam as the Governor General in Council may by notification in the usual way from time to time direct.

A BATCH OF "V.C.'S"

IT is not unlikely that there will be a batch of "V.C.'s" for the late fighting. Vousden, Cunningham, and Hammond, of the 5th Punjab Cavalry, the 92nd Highlanders, and Guides have, I believe, been recommended for the distinction, as also Lance Corporal Seller, of the 72nd Highlanders. Captain Vousden's charge on Dec. 14 is worth recording. With twelve troopers he charged several hundred men who were streaming out of the city after being driven off the Asmai heights. He cut his way through the crowd and reached the city wall, and then rode through them again. Out of the twelve men who accompanied him one was killed on the spot, one mortally, and four others more or less wounded. The ten survivors have already been rewarded with the Order of Merit. With the exception of a native officer (a Punjabi Mussulman), they were all Sikh sowars. Pioneer.

THE LATE DR. PORTER.

The following divisional order has been published by Lieut. General Sir F. Roberts:—"The Lieutenant General announces with deep regret the death of Officiating Deputy Surgeon General T. H. Porter, principal medical officer of the division. Dr. Porter served in the Crimean, Ashantee, and the late Afghan campaigns with distinction, and had gained experience from them which has been invaluable in the important office he has lately held. By his death her Majesty's service is deprived of an officer of great merit. The Lieutenant General, in company with the officers and men of the force, loses a friend whose professional skill was always at the service of the sick and suffering, and whose kindness of disposition had endeared him to all."

THE DURBAR AT CABUL.

At the durbar held on Jan 9, in addition to Wali Mahomed Khan, there were many other members of the Barukzai family present, the chief of whom were Sirdars Ibrahim Khan (brother of Shere Ali), Ahmed Ali Jan, Mahomed Hashim Khan, Abdulla Khan, and Mahomed Gusaf Khan. The Logari and Ghilzai chiefs having salaamed, there were presented en masse some thirty-four Jagri and Besud Hazara chiefs and maliks. These men have remained true to their promises, and as their country bounds Ghuzni on the west and also marches with the Wardak districts, they are likely to be useful allies. Being of the Shiah sect of Mahomedans, they have nothing in common with the Afghan Sunnis, and we shall be able to employ them in harassing Mahomed Jan's army if that leader collects a force at Ghuzni. With a column marching up from Kandahar, and our own army moving down the Ghuzni road from Cabul, the insurgents would be held in check westwards by the Hazaras, and their only road for retreat would be eastwards towards Khost and the Shutar Gardan districts. Saftar Ali Khan, head of the Jagri Hazaras, was unable to attend owing to sickness; but his son, Ahmed Ali Khan, was present to receive the handsome khilluts bestowed upon his father and himself. The presentations being over, Sir Frederick Roberts read the following address to the Kohistanis, which was translated into Persian by Mahomed Hyat Khan:—

"SIRDARS AND MALIKS,—I am very glad to see that so many of the Kohistan maliks have taken advantage of the amnesty published on Dec. 26 last, and have come to Cabul to pay their respects to the British Government, and to express their regrets for having taken a part in the recent disturbances. I trust that those maliks who are still holding aloof will follow the good example that has been set them, and will soon make their appearance at Cabul. I told you, when you visited me in my camp at Siah Sung, after the arrival of the British troops at Cabul, that the British Government had nothing but goodwill towards the people of Afghanistan; that it is their desire to respect your lives, your property, and your religion, and to molest no one who would live at peace with them. You have had ample proof of the truth of what I told you. At the instigation of ill-advised men you came from your homes in Kohistan to attack the British troops at Sherpur. All that you succeeded in doing was to plunder your own countrymen who live in the city of Cabul. You did the British troops but little injury, and in a few days you were beaten off, and had to return to your homes with the loss of several hundred killed and wounded. You brought this punishment upon yourselves, and must not blame the British Government. What that Government did was to offer a pardon to all who would come in, except the malik who, it is believed, was the main cause of your being led astray. It was necessary he should be punished; but in doing so every care was taken that no one else should suffer injury. The British troops marched through your country as far as Baba Kuch Kar, treating you all as friends, and paying liberally for everything in the shape of food and forage you were able or willing to provide. I hope the lesson will not be lost upon you, and that you will not misunderstand the generosity and forbearance with which you have been treated. It is a great pleasure to me to find that so many of the more intelligent and well-informed of the people of Afghanistan took no part in the recent disturbances. First and foremost I would name Sirdars Wali Mahomed Khan, Ibrahim Khan, Hashim Khan, Abdullah Khan, Mahomed Yusuf Khan, Mahomed Karim Khan, Shanbuz Khan, Ahmed Ali Jan, Mahomed Sirwur Khan, Azaullah Khan, Anitoollah Khan, Habibulla Khan (the Mustaufi), Malik Hamid Khan, and Khan Mahomed Khan. Then several of your own chiefs remained with me throughout. General Faiz Mahomed Khan, the son of Naik Aminulla Khan, of Logar, the family of the Mustaufi Sirdar Habibulla Khan, of Wardak, the Kizil Bashes and men in the city of Cabul refrained from joining the disturbers of peace and order; and I am glad to have this opportunity of thanking them on the part of the British Government for the good service they thereby performed. I am now about to give khilluts to those Kohistanis who remained at Sherpur with me; after which you are at liberty to return to your homes. I am sending back with you to Kohistan Sirdar Shabaz Khan, whom you have yourselves asked for as your governor. He will settle your disputes and preserve order in the country. Also that I may be fully informed by yourselves of all that passes, and of all that you may wish to represent hereafter. I invite you to select certain of your number who will remain here and act as a medium of communication between us. They will be treated with consideration, and will have free access to me. The rest of you return to your homes, and for your own sake remember all that has passed."

Sir Frederick Roberts then presented the khilluts, which consisted of handsome chogas and a certain number of rupees, to the chiefs who had remained with us or faithfully kept their promises. Those who had merely come in answer to the amnesty were of course not rewarded. Besides the sirdars mentioned in the speech who were rewarded for their loyalty to the British Government, there were eleven Kohistani maliks, twelve Logaris (including Faiz Mahomed Khan, of Ali Musjid celebrity), and thirty-four Jagri and Besud Hazara khans and maliks. With the distribution of khilluts the durbar closed and the chiefs were free to depart.—Pioneer.

THE MOHMUNDS.

LUNDI KOTAL, JAN. 20.—For the last week the various posts between Peshawur and Dakka have been in a foolish, almost unintelligible, and certainly undignified, state of scare, owing to an irruption of Mohmunds. The Kam-Dakka business of the last campaign had endowed this large, but cowardly, tribe with an importance which they certainly do not deserve. The fact of a mere handful of untried native troops having withstood about 2,000 tribesmen seems to have struck terror into the hearts of some of our leaders; but it is to be hoped that the results of the last fight will have given them that confidence which is absolutely necessary if we are to hold our own, with any chance of success, against superior, but comparitively unarmed, numbers. The Mohmunds having crossed the Cabul river, and having occupied the Gara heights—to the east of Dakka, and about three miles from the fort—to the number of 5,000 or 6,000, it was determined to give them a good lesson; and had the combination which the political officer, Mr. Cunningham, did his best to bring about, been successfully accomplished, there is little doubt that the Mohmunds would have sustained a crushing defeat, and left half their dead behind them. Unfortunately, in nearly all cases where combination of troops occur, several things have to be taken into consideration. First, the junction of the two forces between which you wish to catch your enemy; and on this particular occasion there was an unfortunate absence of military genius, and so the destruction of the Mohmund power turned into only a severe lesson, which, without doubt, they will take to heart. A force, under the command of Brigadier General Doran, consisting of 200 of the 5th Fusiliers, under Major

Taylor; 200 of the 25th King's Own Borderers, under Major Ramsay; 300 of the 31st Native Infantry, under Major Twiddell; 300 of the 1st Madras Native Infantry, under Col. Dawson; one company Madras Sappers and Miners; two mountain guns, under Capt. Duthy; and half a troop of 17th Bengal Cavalry, left Lundi Kotal at 4 a.m. on the 14th, to work round to Kam-Dakka by the Angni, Kandow, and Shilman Valley, taking the enemy's position, the Gara heights, in rear, and cutting them off from crossing the Cabul River at Kam-Dakka; whilst Col. Boisragon from Dakka, with his own splendid regiment, the 30th Punjab Native Infantry, 100 of the 25th King's Own Borderers, 120 of the 8th Native Infantry, and I-C Royal Horse Artillery, were to attack the heights in front, and drive them into the arms of the Lundi Kotal column. General Doran's force had to move over an extremely mountainous and difficult country. The troops, considerably hampered with what proved useless impedimenta in the shape of strings of baggage animals, carrying bedding, food, and thousands of rounds of reserve ammunition, which were never seen for two days afterwards, did not arrive in the Shilman Valley until three hours after Col. Boisragon had opened the ball, and were then some five miles from Kam-Dakka. Some 500 Mohmunds with a standard occupied a strong position on the Shilman heights, but were driven in gallant style by a well-planted shell to occupy the crest of the mountain, from which they were dislodged by the skirmishers of the 5th and 31st Native Infantry. Their hills were almost perpendicular; but even with this strong position in their front the enemy had to retire, leaving several dead behind them. The baggage having been left in the Shilman plain, the force moved down to Kam-Dakka in time to see the enemy streaming in thousands across the sandy stretches through which the Cabul river flows. Volley after volley was poured into them, and they left their dead where they fell. The troops slept that night in Kam-Dakka. Had Colonel Boisragon waited to attack until the first shell from the Lundi Kotal column was fired, the result would probably have been very different; and, instead of hundreds, thousands would have been killed. Colonel Boisragon's force left Dakka at noon, and advanced to the Gara heights. The enemy occupied the whole range, having built sungars even in the plain, from which, however, they were quickly shelled. Moollah Khalil and the Khan of Lalpura moved in front of the ranks of the enemy, the former dressed in complete white. Our skirmishers advanced; the 8th Native Infantry, under Captain Webb, showed conspicuous gallantry, driving the enemy before them to the higher ridges; the Royal Horse Artillery shelling them with the greatest precision, and inflicting heavy loss. Driven from point to point the enemy made a long stand on the topmost ridge; but, unable to withstand our determined advance, they fled in headlong confusion, and, after crossing the Cabul river, dispersed to their own hills. On the 16th, a force, under Colonel Boisragon, crossed the Cabul river in rafts and destroyed Raina, a village two miles below Kam-Dakka on the opposite side of the river, without meeting with any opposition, and returned the following day. The new Khan of Lalpura proved himself of great use in procuring skins for the rafts, which were put together by the Sappers.—Cor. of Pioneer.

INDIAN OUTFITS.

THE Government proposes to give to the Secretary of State for Indiain Council the power of curtailing the outfit allowances of the higher Indian officials and of reducing some of the salaries and allowances in the ecclesiastical establishment. With this view, Mr. Edward Stanhope has introduced a bill authorising the Secretary of State in Council from time to time to fix, alter, or abolish the allowances for equipment and voyages of the Governor General and the members of his Council, the Governors of Madras and Bombay and the members of their Councils, the commanders in chief of the forces and of Madras and Bombay, and the bishops and archdeacons of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay. At present the allowances are fixed by an Act of 1813 as follows:—To the Governor General, £5,000; to each member of his council, £1,200; to the Governors of Madras and Bombay, £2,500 each; to the members of their Councils, £1,000; to the commanders in chief of the forces, £2,500; to the commanders in chief at Madras and Bombay, £2,000 and £1,500 respectively; to the Bishop of Calcutta, £1,200; to the Bishops of Madras and Bombay, £500 each; to each archdeacon, £500. The provision relating to the Church enables the Secretary of State in Council "from time to time to fix and alter the salaries, and to fix, alter, or abolish the allowances, of the Bishops and Archdeacons of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay." This clause, however, will not affect any of the existing bishops and archdeacons. The salaries, it may be noticed, are at present fixed by Acts of 1813 and 1833 at £5,000 to the Bishop of Calcutta, 24,000 sicca rupees to each of the other two bishops, and £2,000 to each of the three archdeacons. That portion of an Act of 1823 which provides a pension for any archdeacon who has exercised his office in the East Indies for ten years it is proposed to repeal. A restriction on the Secretary of State in Council in exercising his powers is that nothing in the bill is to authorise an additional charge on the revenues of India.

INDIAN RELIGIOUS LIFE.

A CROWDED and attentive audience assembled on Monday at the London Institution to listen to Professor Monier Williams's lecture on this subject. He began by stating that the principal feature of religious life in Vedic times was the adoration of fire and the sun. Fire had a triple existence; first in the sun, secondly on the domestic hearth; and, thirdly, in the air, as lightning. Thus it typified the creative principle, the fostering power, and the destructive force. The sun was worshipped in a triune form as the morning, midday, and evening orb. The marriage of the householder was attested by fire. He had a domestic sanctuary with three symbolic fire hearths, whence daily his prayers and offerings were borne upwards in the ascending flames. Fortnightly and quarterly especial family services were solemnised, of which confessions of sin and hymns of praise and supplication formed the chief part. The primitive Vedism was succeeded by Brahmanism, which introduced an elaborate sacrificial system based on the doctrine that all nature was a manifestation of one spiritual essence—Brahma. This degenerated into polytheistic idolatry. The lecturer then sketched the rise and progress of the Buddhistic reformation taught by Gautama. In the seventh and eighth centuries the teachers Kamarila and Sankara restored the predominance of Brahmanism. The Vaishnavist teachings in the twelfth century were then briefly referred to. The later theistic movements headed by Cabir and Nanok, in the sixteenth century, were due to imitations of Islam, while the more recent growth of the Brahmo churches, numbering 130 strong, sprang from Christian influences. The professor described how the foundations of Hinduism had been shaken and the old sacrificial system uprooted. But the dogma of transmigration remained deeply rooted in the Hindu mind. The fear of degradation and misery in a future existence caused the modern Brahman to submit to an intolerable burden of ceremonial in order to be delivered from repeated existences and to be reunited to the divine Brahma. The lecturer then described various religious rites and places of pilgrimage, especially Benares. He, in conclusion, introduced to the audience Pandit Syamaji Krishna Varma to recite and expound Veda hymns and ceremonials. The Pandit, who is described as a theistic follower of one of the Vedic Reformers, after a few well spoken words of apology and explanation of the disabilities incurred by his having come to England as a student, chanted the first Vedic hymn. He then exemplified the variations of recital, and argued that they were needful for the accurate preservation of the sacred text by oral tradition. He claimed the gratitude of philologists to the Pandits who had thus scrupulously conserved the ancient Veds. The ceremonial forms of daily worship were next expounded, and the doctrine of transmigration defended from the Brahmanistic point of view. The Pandit was listened to with well-deserved attention and approval.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

COREA.*

TO write a history and general description, filling 400 pages of print, of a country about which scarcely anything was before known, is in itself a feat reflecting great credit upon the writer. This is exactly what Mr. Ross has done for the forbidden land of Corea, and he has done it on the whole in a way which commands approval. The history is based on original Chinese works and documents which the author appears to have translated, in many cases, almost literally. It is therefore not surprising to find that the ancient history of Corea is told in ampler detail, and with more picturesque circumstances, than the modern. Perhaps the very best chapter in the book is that on the Hienbi (Huns), which does not belong to Corean history at all. But about Chaosien, Gaoli, Fooyu, and Sinlo, the various States upon which Corea arose, Mr. Ross tells us everything we are ever likely to know, or, indeed, that is worth knowing. We cannot imagine anyone of so inquisitive a nature as to wish to follow Mr. Ross into the chronicle of the long-forgotten States whose names have been given to discover whether he has left any pearls unutilised or not. But it is different with regard to the modern history of Corea proper, of which Mr. Ross is only able to give the merest sketch—a sketch in which there occurs a gap of two centuries covered by one sentence. It is therefore clear that in this particular Mr. Ross is only the pioneer for other writers, and that there is much reason for supposing that a great addition may yet be made to our knowledge of the history of Corea since the accession of the Manchu dynasty to power. Apart, however, from this, Mr. Ross has provided the student of Chinese history with a work of distinct use and value, and for this he deserves our best thanks. It is a matter of regret that one who had acquired such a deep insight into Manchurian history should possess the literary faculty in so small a degree as Mr. Ross does. We can recommend Mr. Ross's volume as containing a great quantity of information, but we regret to have to couple with it the statement that its literary merits are very few. This is the more important as Mr. Ross announces a "History of the Manchus," a subject about which it may be doubful if the few special notes he may have acquired will compensate for the deficiencies of his style.

THE BRAHMO SOMAJ.

WE have received the Brahmo Yearbook for 1879, which furnishes full details and figures showing the progress of the religious bodies which are termed the "Theistic Churches" of India. Two-thirds of the present issue is occupied by a review of the agitation and discussions which led to the enactment of the measure known as the Native Marriage Act, or Act III. of 1872. This is supplemented by a record of the actual Brahmo marriages from 1861 to 1879, the number of which was 93, but "what proportion these marriages here recorded bear to the total number of marriages celebrated during those eighteen years among persons calling themselves Brahmos" the editor is "not able to guess." The editor has been prevented by ill health from accomplishing his usual full report of the Provincial Somajes, but retrospects of the three principal or metropolitan bodies are duly reviewed, the chief prominence and approval being bestowed on the Sadharan Brahmo Somaj, which seems to have manifested all the activity of a young and rising sect. The account which recently appeared in the Indian papers of the celebration of the jubilee of the Adi Brahmo Somaj may be accepted as a sign of the vitality in the eldest reformed communion of the Hindu religionists. We may venture to add that the audience who assembled at the London Institution on Monday must have carried away some more definite ideas of the modern religious developments which may be classed under the one term, Brahmoism, than even Professor Williams's former lecture and letter, which are referred to in the "Yearbook," could have imparted to them. The Pandit's outspoken earnestness commended him strongly to the sympathetic interest of all who listened to his exposition of his Theistic Vedism.

ALTHOUGH the history of the second Afghan war has yet to be written, the public may expect to receive from time to time detailed accounts of its most brilliant episodes. One of these, Gough's action at Futtehabad, is contained in the book under review. The story is related by the chaplain attached to the force, and we have rarely read a tale told in language more vivid or more eloquently simple. Mr. Swinnerton possesses the true art of the writer of history. He arranges his details well, puts forward prominently those of the greatest importance, and thus, with the aid of a few well-drawn plans, brings the scene clear and lucidly before the eyes of the reader. If this is his first appearance as a writer we hope it will not be his last, for we have rarely met a man more competent than he to wield the pen which traces the gallant actions of gallant men.

The action at Futtehabad was in many respects memorable. Though, for some cause, the three arms on whose thoroughly combined and connected action success in war entirely depends were not handled in a masterly manner, it is impossible to impute the fault to anyone of its representatives engaged. The artillery, infantry, and cavalry all fought magnificently. The artillery and cavalry acted well together, but there would seem to have been a want of concert in the action of the infantry. It has been shown on a thousand occasions that artillery cannot meet large masses of infantry unless well supported by infantry. To make up for that want of support at a critical moment there was made at Futtehabad that gallant charge of the Guide Cavalry which bought the defeat of the enemy with the loss of the gallant Wigram Battye. Mr. Swinnerton thinks that if Battye had followed Aleck Stewart's advice and charged the enemy's flank he would have rolled them up without loss. It is probable that had Battye been aware of the existence of the ravine between his charging point and the enemy he would have adopted this course. As it was, believing the ground to be level, he followed the plan which, with his men and with his leadership, was the most effective for the complete defeat of the enemy. He succeeded, giving, in the attempt, his life to his country. Another remarkable feature of the action was the submission of the Khugianis after their defeat. The facility with which defeated Afghans are transformed, by the fact of their defeat, into stanch allies is one of the most remarkable features of this war. We thoroughly recommend the book to our readers.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—By the Royal Warrant dated August 13, 1877, I believe that all general officers, on attaining the age of seventy, were to be placed on the retired list. I perceive that the date of commission, as ensign, of General H. Pritchard, Madras Staff Corps, is Jan. 8, 1826. I suppose we may assume that that officer's age then was at least sixteen; ergo, he must now be over seventy years old. Can you inform me how it is that his name is still on the effective list?—I remain, Sir, yours obediently,

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

BORN in the year 1786, the Indian Medical Service has ceased to exist. We propose to briefly review the past of the Indian Medical Service with a view to discover the grounds (if any) for its practical extinction. Few will be found to deny that the service has a splendid past. From the time when a medical officer gave us our first foothold on the country to the present hour of dissolution it has included amongst its officers men of distinguished ability and high attainments—a good proportion being of European reputation. It is quite unnecessary, as it would be invidious, to specify; to each one who writes or speaks on the subject an array of names will suggest themselves different according to the different fields of action chosen. In short, a whole galaxy of cultured and honourable workers could be easily enumerated, whether as physicians, surgeons, sanitarians, politicals, or otherwise. Perhaps it would not be too much to say that by giving the benefits of their experience to the natives of this vast country doctors have done almost more than any class to reconcile the nationalities of India with their various creeds and tongues to a foreign "raj." Naturally acute observers, as Orientals are, they must be struck, and, right thinking as they are in the main, propitiated in great measure when they see those belonging to an alien race spending their intellectual force, and, in many instances their lives, for the common good. Not only so, but members of this service have raised the standard of medical knowledge well-nigh from the ground until it towers aloft and is a warning, a guide, and a source of hope to thousands of aspirants. Witness the kind of scientific training that has been given to young men educated at the medical colleges, which are a glory to a Government, and who have spread the knowledge there acquired through the length and breadth of the land. Contrast the "hukeem" of the past with his tray of seeds and stock of powerful mineral drugs for internal treatment, and heated irons and blacknut for external application, with the enlightened graduate of a college primed with the newest scientific discoveries, and with practical knowledge of his work, and who can doubt the magnitude of the blessing conferred by medical education? Wonderful contrast and change indeed!—a change which has lowered the death rate of the masses and raised their intelligence, since such men, not only in Presidency towns, but scattered through the Mofussil, prove centres from which light radiates. The history of the Indian Medical Service, when it comes to be written, will afford one of the brightest examples of self-sacrificing devotion to duty and self-denying work for the public weal. Whether in the field, where so many have been struck down while tending the wounded, or in the quiet round of civil professional life, where numbers have fallen victims when treating disease or tracking it to its secret lair, it will be a record Englishmen will read with pride. It would seem that the Indian is sacrificed to the Army Medical Department. It became necessary to offer inducements to the schools at home to join the A.M.D. A new warrant was accordingly issued, in which, amongst other improvements, pensions are laid down on absolutely a more liberal scale than holds good in the Indian service, the members of which pass their lives in the tropics. Many changes for the better were made, and doubtless this wholesale handing over of administrative posts from the Indian to the A.M.D. is a sop thrown to the latter. Anyhow the Army Medical Department has killed the Indian. The "amalgamation" is as though a snake had swallowed a fowl—the latter is assimilated to the former and goes to strengthen it; but where is the fowl? It is hard to see the prospects of a deserving body of men ruined in this high-handed fashion. The suddenness of the blow, too, we cannot but regard as a piece of needless injustice. There can be no question about its illegality, but officers are long suffering men and more energetic in battling for the Government that injures them than for their own rights. Only one reparation is possible to those whose chances of administrative prizes are so deplorably affected. This, which, after all, is of the barest, consists in allowing seniors who desire to do so to retire on liberal terms from an all but extinct service. They are no longer wanted; pay well and be rid of them. The Government have broken faith and altogether altered the character of the service. The medical officers must be anxious to quit a service which is lowered in prestige by no act of its own, and offers no longer sufficient rewards of merit which, after the satisfaction of conscience, are the best incentives to labour.—Bombay Gazette.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

Forestry in the Central Provinces.—In the new report on forest administration in the Central Provinces occurs a very significant testimony to the good effects of tree cultivation on water supply. For some time past the Baujar forest has been under careful protection, and the apparent result has been an improvement in surface drainage, manifesting itself in an "unusually steady flow of water in the Gungur river." In place of this "steady flow" in denuded localities throughout India we find drought for most part of the year, and destructive torrents and inundations during the remaining portion of it. The case of the Baujar forest, however, is exceptional, and it only shows how mighty a change may gradually be effected in the agricultural resources of a country by an enlightened system of forestry conducted by energetic officers.—Bombay Gazette.

The Secretary of State has sanctioned the retirement, on the full pension of £1,000 a-year, of Mr. E. G. Jenkinson, C.S., Commissioner in Oude, with effect from Dec. 2 last. Mr. Jenkinson's service was considerably under the necessary minimum, but the circumstances of his case were very exceptional, and the strong recommendation of the local Government had the desired effect.

Rainfall.—The total rainfall at Cherra Punji last year was 499·55 inches, the next wettest stations in Assam being Jowai with 335·14 inches, and Sunamganj with 237·07 inches.—Englishman.

Joint-Stock Companies in the Punjab.—Trade is evidently improving in the Punjab, as no less than ten limited joint-stock companies were registered in that province in the year 1878-79.—Englishman.

The Naga Troubles.—The Nagas have again assumed the aggressive. They attacked the Nichi (native) guard near Samaguting on the night of the 11th, but were beaten off, without loss on our side. There have been no fresh raids in North Cachar, and the military authorities deem the precautions adopted there sufficient. This does not, however, appear to be the opinion of the planters of the district, who insist that a stronger military force is necessary for their protection. The Government has sent a supply of rifles for distribution among the tea gardens. Nearly all the coolies who deserted after the raid on Baladhan have returned to work. The Baladhan raiders were, it is believed, men of Konoma, the village which three months ago offered such obstinate resistance to our troops. Paplongmai, a village in the south west of the Naga Hills, has been captured by a flying column under Lieut. M'Gregor, and some slight skirmishes are reported near Konoma.—Times Telegram.

Domestic Life of the Central Provinces.—The report on the trade and resources of the Central Provinces for 1878-79 is a record of fair industrial progress and prosperity during the year of which it treats. Twelve lakhs of rupees were spent on railways, and half as much on roads; many of them important railway feeders. The statistics of traffic are obtained from the returns provided by the railway authorities, from data supplied by all municipal towns, and also from a system of registration by paid clerks on the principal trade routes, the latter open to the same suspicion of untrustworthiness as in other provinces. The resources of the Central Provinces are summed up as agricultural, mineral (including coal) and manufactures. Owing to the want of seasonable rain for the cold weather crops, the outturn was greatly affected; the average estimated for Seoni being only two standard bushels per acre, and for Jubbulpore seven. These estimates are based on experimental cuttings carried out by specially selected officers, and may be accepted, therefore, as approximately correct. With so short a crop it becomes a matter of importance to ascertain the source of the exports which, though in vastly diminished amounts, compared to those of 1877-78, did take place. It is proved that stocks were exhausted in Saugor and Seoni by the demand for seed-grain from other more favoured localities. Mr. Morris enters into no calculation of the probable food demand for the year, by which some idea of the amount of grain possibly available for export might be obtained. It is probable that the poorer grains were more largely consumed, and a larger area was certainly sown with them. The Central Provinces (and especially the Nerbudda Valley) wheat has a high name in the English market; samples recently examined by Dr. Forbes Watson have been pronounced equal to the best Australian, Californian, or American wheat. But the great drawback to a sound trade with Europe is the mixture of the several varieties and the admixture of dirt and other foreign substances. For the latter fault the cultivator is responsible, for he is generally alive to the advantage of keeping the seed clean. Those, however, who supply him with seed-grain do not take the trouble to keep the varieties distinct in their storing-houses, and the unfortunate cultivator has to take what he can get. There was a great decrease both in the area sown with cotton and the outturn. "The season was an exceptionally disastrous one for the cotton crop," says Mr. Morris. The demand, too, from Bombay fell off, and, but for an unusually large demand from the North Western Provinces, both agriculturists and traders would have suffered great loss. Next to these important industries, that of coal mining attracts the greatest interest. At the Warora colliery 43,248 tons were raised and sold readily; but for an accident to the machinery the output would have been much greater. As it was, a return of 8 per cent. was obtained in the outlay. Manganese ore has been discovered some eighteen miles from Jubbulpore, but by what appears a mistaken policy a lease on favourable terms to an enterprising contractor was refused. Excellent limestone is also found in the Jubbulpore district, and a demand for the lime has arisen even in Calcutta. The actual figures showing imports and exports are of like interest, apart from the fact that the high prices prevailing during the year disturbed the proportions between quantities and values. The import trade increased by a million and a quarter maunds; the exports, on the contrary, fell nearly 50 per cent. But 1877-78 was an exceptional year. The grain traffic, owing to the large demands made by the famine districts of Madras and Bombay, rose to abnormal proportions. The price also obtainable for good wheat in England was greatly in advance of that obtainable in 1878-79, and a general falling off in the export trade was experienced all over India. The ghee trade is expanding, the demand being in advance of the supply. In nearly every other item the year under review contrasts unfavourably with its predecessor. Mr. Morris concludes his report by saying:—"The year is marked as one of bad harvests and ravaging epidemics, the statistics in every department testifying to the exceptionally severe conditions of life in 1878-79;" but the prospects are brighter for the current year so far.—Pioneer.

Baboo Nanda Krishna Bose, M.A, and Kumar Suttya Shree Ghosal have been gazetted probationers under the new Native Civil Service Rules, and are posted, respectively, to the Rajshahye and Burdwan Districts.

Soldiers and Afridis.—I hear from Jellalabad that the men of the 12th Regiment and C-3 Royal Artillery, who behaved so scandalously when on guard over the liquor stores on Christmas Eve, have had prompt and summary justice dealt out to them, the majority receiving twenty-five lashss and two years' imprisonment, with their discharge with ignominy from her Majesty's service. The punishment has been none too light for so serious a crime. A large amount of treasure was brought through the Kohat Pass some days since, about fifteen lakhs in all. It was as first feared that so large a sum might tempt our very avaricious neighbours, the Pass Afridis, to commit themselves; however, no obstruction of any kind was offered, which speaks well for the good order that prevails in this hitherto very turbulent region.—Correspondent of Pioneer.

Sunday.—The following circular order, dated Jan. 10, 1880, has been published:—The attention of the court has recently been drawn to more than one instance in which magistrates have held trials on Sundays. It has not hitherto been deemed necessary to enter Sundays in the published lists of close holidays as no such recognition of the general practice of closing the civil and criminal courts on these days appeared to be necessary. Cases must no doubt occur in which an inquiry by a magistrate should proceed even on a Sunday or gazetted holiday, but, without the consent of parties, and in the absence of urgent necessity, no civil or criminal trial should proceed on such days.—Pioneer.

Simla.—A correspondent writes on Jan. 20:—We have had a change of weather. From genial spring we are now in the depth of winter. From a temperature of upwards of 60 we have now dropped to 38. On Sunday, the 18th, we had wind and occasional showers of rain; at night it rained heavily, and also last night; and this morning there is a depth of six inches of snow over all Simla. The fall is so general that even the waterfalls have had a taste of it, and Subathoo, which so seldom has a white mantle, is now covered.—Pioneer.

Tea.—We see that the total quantity of tea shipped from Calcutta to London during the year 1879 was 37,862,269lbs., as compared with 33,975,509lbs. exported in 1878.—Englishman.

MADRAS.

Reductions.—We learn that from Saturday the services of twenty-seven accountants, seventeen in the Presidency and ten in the Mofussil, have been dispensed with. The worst is, however, yet to come, for we are credibly informed that his Grace the Governor wishes a further reduction of eight lakhs of rupees to be shown per annum, and this is to be carried out by the end of the present official year. The present five circles are to be reduced to three, and there are to be only seventeen divisions. The examiner and some of his staff are for the greater part of the year to be on

We learn, on good authority, that his Grace, on his return from the Godavery district, intends visiting some of the P.W.D. offices at Chepauk, and personally ascertaining for himself whether the existing establishments are required for the efficient conduct of the work of the departments concerned.—Madras Times.

RECRUITS.—On the recommendation of the Surgeon General I.M.D., Government have directed that Paragraph 2825 of the Madras Army Regulations, inflicting a penalty of a fine on medical officers for passing as fit for the service recruits who may be subsequently rejected by a regimental committee, be cancelled, as in many cases it has been impossible to decide with certainty whether or not the disqualification existed at the time of the primary examination by the medical officer.—Ibid.

MEDICAL.—Honorary Surgeon Samuel Wells, M.D., in medicharge of Oossoor, has been recommended to Government as a candidate on whom the rank of honorary surgeon major may be conferred. Dr. Wells is a graduate of a European college, and has served the Madras Government for a period of nearly twenty-eight years.—Ibid.

THE MASONIC INSTITUTION.—The Masons of Southern India are taking active measures to start an institution for educating and maintaining the children of indigent and deceased members of the craft. An association for this purpose has been formed which will, by donations and subscriptions, get up a fund to which already five thousand rupees have been promised. It is the first time, we believe, that such a provision for the children of poor and deceased members has in this presidency been contemplated.—Ibid.

CIVIL ENGINEERING COLLEGE.—We learn that Lieut. Love, R.E., who for some time acted as principal of this institution, but who is at present doing duty as an assistant examiner of Public Works Accounts, is, at the request of his Grace the Governor, to take up the principalship as a permanent measure on a salary of Rs.1,200 a month, this being considered more economical than the existing measure.—Ibid.

PLANTING NOTES FROM THE CHEVARRYS.—The failure of the N. E. monsoon has affected our corps materially, and the outturn will not be so satisfactory as was expected. The trees are yet loaded with green coffee, which cannot possibly be expected to ripen at this stage of the season; the strippings will, consequently, be enormous, yielding an unusually large proportion of native coffee. The rainfall for 1879 is decidedly below the average of the past three years, being only 61·8 against 73·65 in 1878, and 76·37 in 1877.—Correspondent.

THE WYNAAD GOLD FIELDS.—The Government has published an important memorandum on the Wynaad gold fields. It begins by summarising the conclusions arrived at by Mr. Brough Smyth, practical mining engineer, employed by the Government to examine the quartz reefs. The reefs, according to his statement, are very numerous and of more than average thickness, are of great longitudinal extent, and highly auriferous. The country presents the greatest facilities for prosecuting mining operations at the smallest cost, and sooner or later gold mining will be established as an important industry in Southern India. The Government of India has proposed to the Secretary of State that the Madras Government should be authorised to grant gold-mining leases in lots of one to thirty acres, for a term of ten to twenty years, at a rent of five rupees an acre, subject to the condition that not less than five labourers are regularly employed per acre on bonâ fide mining operations in such a manner as the Government may approve. Leases to be liable to forfeiture on failure of this condition. No royalty or other tax to be levied for the present, as the Government deems it most important to attract capital to the Wynaad gold fields.—Times Telegram.

MADRAS MEDICAL ANNUITIES.—The medical fund annuities for January, 1880, are granted as follows:—To retired Deputy Surgeon General W. Williamson; to retired Surgeon Major F. Day, a member on small annuity; to retired Veterinary Surgeon T. Pritchard, a member on small annuity; a large annuity from Jan. 1, 1880. To Surgeon Major J. J. Heffernan, the established sick small annuity, from the date of payment of the balance of minimum or from the date of retirement from the service, whichever may be the later, provided both events take place on or before March 1, 1880. To Retired Surgeon Major F. Duckworth, M.D., the liberated small annuity, from the date of payment of the balances of minimum and maximum, which should take place on or before March 1, 1880. To Surgeon Major H. T. Shaw, a large annuity, there being no applicants for the small annuities liberated by Retired Veterinary Surgeon T. Pritchard and forfeited by Retired Surgeon Major D. Kearney; they have accordingly been converted into one large annuity, which is assigned to Surgeon Major Shaw, and which will take effect from the date of the payment of balance of minimum, or from the date of retirement from the service, whichever may be the later, provided both events take place on or before March 1, 1880.—Fort St. George Gazette.

THE COBDEN MEDAL.—At the last meeting of the senate of the university it was proposed by Mr. Thompson, and seconded by the Rev. W. Steavenson, and carried:—"That the recommendation of the syndicate to accept the offer of the Cobden Club to award a silver medal annually to the candidate who passes for the degree of Master of Arts in the 5th branch, and obtains the highest number of marks in Political Economy, be adopted." In regard to this proposition, Mr. Krishnama Charriar was understood to say that, as the medal and the Norton prize were intended to encourage an intelligent study of Political Economy, something should be done to prevent any candidate carrying off the prizes for a mere perfunctory study of the subject, and suggested, for the consideration of the senate, whether it might not be as well to prescribe a certain minimum, say a third or half, of the total marks assigned to the subject, and to award the medal to the candidate who obtains the highest number of marks, the same being not less than the prescribed minimum. Psychology was understood to be a favourite subject of the candidates, and consequently a person might get but ten marks out of 303 in Political Economy, and yet pass in the 4th branch of the M.A. course by securing the requisite aggregate marks in Psychology and kindred subjects, and claim the Cobden Club medal and the Norton prize for the subject in question, to which he had paid the least attention perhaps. The Rev. W. Steavenson, the examiner in the 5th Branch, having been asked by Mr. Thompson to state his experience, he said that the candidates who passed generally did well in Political Economy.—Madras Times.

REWARDS FOR KILLING VENOMOUS SNAKES.—In February last Government called upon all presidents of local fund boards to report on a suggestion made by the Government of India that rewards for killing snakes in towns and large villages might with advantage be given by local bodies with or without help from provincial revenues. The only boards which are willing to grant rewards for the destruction of snakes from the funds at their disposal are Chatrapur, Ellore, Masulipatam, Guntur, Gooly, Chingleput, Cuddalore, Tanjore, Negapatam, and Madura. The Ellore circle are prepared to devote Rs.500 annually for the purpose, and the Guntur circle Rs.1,000; the other circle boards do not specify the grants they are ready to allot, but the Masulipatam board will pay a reward of four annas for every cobra and one anna for snakes of any other description; the Chingleput circle board will give half an anna for every snake killed of the four poisonous kinds mentioned by Dr. Shortt in his letter recorded in G.O. dated Jan. 19, 1872, No. 119. The Cuddalore circle will give one anna for all poisonous snakes. The Tanjore board will only grant rewards on condition that Government bear three-fourths of the cost, and the Cuddalore board expect Government to contribute. The Cocanada and Tinnevelly boards approve the grant of rewards, but consider the charge should be debited to imperial funds; the Salem circle board approve the principle that local bodies should bear the cost, but do not consider it applicable at present to the district. No reasons are assigned for this opinion. The Nellore board question whether much good can be effected by the grant of rewards; but, if it can, they think it a fair object for local fund expenditure. The remaining two-thirds of the local bodies consulted decline to make any allotment, some because the mortality from snake bites in their circle is not considerable, others on the ground that they have no funds to spare; some are of opinion that the measure would not produce any appreciable results, and that the instinct of self-preservation is a sufficient inducement to ensure the destruction of these reptiles in the neighbourhood of houses and frequented ways, whilst the offer of rewards would be likely to lead to fraud, looking to the difficulty of supervising disbursements; others, again, do not consider that local funds can legally be expended on this object, and that rewards for killing snakes are no more a legitimate charge on such funds than rewards for killing other wild animals.—Madras Times.

UNIFORM OF THE MADRAS SEPOYS.—Before leaving the shores of Madras Sir Neville Chamberlain seems determined to leave his mark on the Native Army, the interests of which he has always had at heart. All who have had chances of comparing the Madras sepoy with his comrade of Bengal admit that the British uniform (scarlet coat, black trousers, and ammunition boots) which Private Ramasswamy wears, is unsuited to him; and the Madras Mail tells us that this fact has so forcibly struck his Excellency that he has taken the matter in hand and recommended to Government that a new and better dress be substituted for that in use at present. The new dress is known as the "Zouave," and is worn by Bengal troops. It consists of a short tunic, knickerbockers, gaiters, and native shoes. If we recollect aright, Sir Hope Grant, when in command of the Army in 1862 or 1863, placed the subject of the sepoy's dress before Government. Now, Sir Neville has revived it, and with success, for we learn that the Madras Government are not averse to the new dress. The sanction of the Supreme Government, however, has to be obtained.—Calcutta Statesman.

DEATH OF MAJOR BAYLEY.—The death is announced of Major W. C. Bayley, 10th Regiment Madras N.I., at Aditugala, in the Rajahmundry District. He proceeded (says a local paper) with his regiment a couple of months ago to quell the disturbance in the Godavery, and during this short period his services were highly appreciated, as he always kept to the front while in pursuit of the rebels. The date of his first commission is June 12, 1858.—Times of India.

THE Linnæan Society of London have conferred on Mr. J. Cameron, F.L.S., the superintendent of the Lal Bagh Gardens, Bangalore, the honour of a fellowship.

RAMPA REBELLION.—A Madras telegram says:—"Aditugala, the Moonsiff of Sundurti, has been arrested, charged with complicity, having housed Tamandora. He will be tried in a few days.

His defence is that, had he refused, he would have lost his head. The authorities have decided to take possession of disloyal villages and seize the cattle and grain, with a view of cutting off supplies from the rebels. The rebel Salbaradu Luchmadu has appealed to the Madras High Court against the sentence of transportation for life passed on him by the Sessions Judge of Godavery. Sentence confirmed. A correspondent writes that the party of Jeypore police, under the command of Mr. Willock, which was despatched to the assistance of the escort at Gurtern, arrived at that place and found the enemy surrounding the provision escort. Finding that escape was impossible, the enemy offered resistance, and, in doing so, six of their number were killed and one wounded, and the remainder retired into a thick jungle. It is believed that among those who escaped some must have been wounded severely, as traces of blood were discovered along the way they fled. About eight guns and other ammunition which the enemy left behind were taken possession of by the police under Mr. Willock. An engagement also took place between a small military party and the rebels, and the latter, notwithstanding that they were superior in number, were kept in check. In this engagement Havildar Bahadur Sing, of the 10th Regiment N.I., and a private were slightly wounded. All attempts to trace the whereabouts of the notorious chief Chendriah have proved futile, and it is reported that the villagers are very reluctant to afford any information regarding him and his followers. Their attitude seems hostile, and it is suspected that they indirectly and secretly aid the rebels in affording them information regarding the different movements of the troops and the police. It is reported that fever is prevalent at Gurtern, and, in consequence, greatly interferes with any active and vigorous measures being adopted. Medical arrangements are being made to treat the patients. Heliographic communication has been established between Gurtern and the place where the officer commanding Rampa and Golconda resides, and it has been found of immense value where postal and other communications are almost impossible. At Kinnaparate the other day four persons were carried off and ill used, but three managed to escape from their captors.—Times of India.

THE TINNEVELLY MISSION.—The centenary of the introduction of Christianity into Tinnevelly was celebrated at Pallamacottah on the Jan. 25. Bishops Gell, Caldwell, and Sargent took part in the proceedings.—Ibid.

THE NAGA HILLS.—News has been received by a Calcutta contemporary from the Naga country that on the 15th a small party escorting coolies from the Zamba stockade to Samaguting was attacked at Dipupani. One man of the 44th was wounded by three bullets, and one man of the Naugong police was also wounded. The Nagas then made rushes to obtain their arms and ammunition, but one man of the 42nd and two men of the Sibsaugor Frontier police placed the wounded men under a tree, stood over them, and, using their own rifles, repulsed the Naga attacks till the arrival of reinforcements from Zamba, where the firing was heard. Their names, it is added, have been sent up to the General. The Hindoo Patriot understands that Sir Steuart Bayley, who is now in Calcutta consulting with the Viceroy about the future of the Naga territory, will soon hold a durbar in honour of the Raja of Munipore, who rendered loyal and effective assistance in the suppression of the Naga outbreak. It is said that rewards will be offered to the Raja for his loyal services.—Times of India.

THE FACTORY BILL.—In view of the proposed Factory Act legislation a deputation from the Supreme Council, consisting of the Hon. Messrs. Colvin, Hope, Grant, and Batten, visited a few days ago the Samnuggur cotton and jute mills, as also Hastings Mill, owned by Birkmyre Brothers. Much uneasiness exists as to the proposed legislation, and it is generally feared that, as with the cotton duties, so with this Factory Act, India will be sacrificed to Manchester. One ominous and objectionable feature is that none of the native members of Council are members of the select committee to which the bill is referred, clearly indicating that fears are not groundless.—Statesman.

THE Viceroy has paid the volunteers a compliment by appointing Colonel Graham, commandant of the Calcutta Rifle Corps, to be ex-officio an honorary aide de camp on the personal staff of his Excellency.

Brahmo Public Opinion states that "it is proposed to establish a Commercial Bank to be called the Bengal Banking Corporation (Limited), with a capital of twenty lakhs of rupees, divided into two lakhs of shares of Rs.10 each. The head office will be in Calcutta, and branch offices in centres of commerce in the Mofussil."

BOMBAY.

THE HEALTH OF BOMBAY.—From the health officer's report for the third quarter of 1879 we learn that 5,627 deaths were registered in that quarter, exclusive of still-born, being 228 less than in the first quarter and 255 more than in the second quarter of this year, but 1,293 less than in the corresponding period of 1878. The rate of mortality calculated on the population given by the census of 1872 is 34·92. From the total number of deaths should be deducted the deaths that occurred amongst the famine immigrants from Kattiwar; 61 are known to us to have died—22 men, 18 women, and 21 children. 3,661 living (2,040 males, 1,621 females) and 137 still-born births were registered. The increase in the number of births registered is satisfactory. The birth-rate is equal to 22·72 per 1,000 of population this quarter. Water Supply. —With the progress of the monsoon the impurities in the waters from Vehar and Tulsi diminished to such an extent as to bring the water supply well within the limits of wholesomeness.—Bombay Gazette.

CERTIFICATES FOR PASSENGER STEAMERS.—The Gazette of India publishes an announcement to the effect that, seeing that the Legislature of Bombay has provided for the survey of and grant of certificates for passenger steamers, and that the Board of Trade are satisfied that such certificates are in all respects similar to those granted in the United Kingdom, it is provided that the certificates granted by the Legislature of Bombay for passenger steamers shall be of the same force as if they had been granted for the same purpose in the United Kingdom; that it shall not be lawful for a passenger steamer to which this order relates to proceed to sea with passengers on board from any port or place in the United Kingdom on any voyage other than to Bombay or to any intermediate place or places situate on such voyage, and that if any passenger steamer goes to sea from any place in the United Kingdom with any passengers on board upon any voyage other than to Bombay or any intermediate place, the owner shall for every such offence incur a penalty not exceeding fifty pounds.

THE COTTON CROP IN GUZERAT.—I am happy to say that the cotton crop all over Guzerat promises to be the largest one on record since during the last decade. The general outturn in the Baroda districts, however, is considered lower than the Broach districts, but the quality is expected to be much better than even the yield of the last two years. Kuppas will be picked in some places in the Baroda districts in the latter part of this month, and it is expected that at Nulla, the chief emporium of the cotton trade in the Baroda territory, the large cotton mill belonging to a Parsee gentleman will be at work by Feb. 5. Since the introduction of some mills on the Nulla mill principles in the Baroda districts better cotton is coming out for sale in the Bombay market. Much yet remains to be done to improve the Baroda cotton, which, if properly looked after in its pristine state, can rival any cotton in the whole of India. If Sir Madhava Rao directs a little of his energy towards the quality and classification, and, not least, the adulteration —kalas mixed with kuppas in its raw state, and allowing the kuppas to be stored in pits, which gives it a disagreeable yellow stain or colouring—he will give life to this rising industry, which promises, in course of time, to be a source of great wealth to the Baroda State.—Correspondent Bombay Gazette.

THE BARODA JEWELS.—An inspection of the Baroda State jewels make one understand the barbaric splendour of India which caused the early travellers to regard her as a country overflowing with riches. On a small round table we saw a dazzling collection of jewels fit to ransom a monarch. There was the far-famed diamond necklace, probably the richest necklace in the world. It is said to be worth half a million. One stone, "the star of the south," cost £70,000. The necklace also contains "the star of Dresden." There were many diamond bangles and armlets, and diamond rings in profusion. The setting and cutting of these diamonds were not pleasing to the European eye, but the whole effect was brilliant in the extreme. It must be borne in mind that the Hindus value diamonds in jewellery solely for their decorative effect, and they particularly value them when the natural crystal is so perfect and clear that it requires only to have its natural faults polished. It would not be fair to judge the Baroda necklace by a European standard. The whole effect of the jewels is most rich and brilliant. The most poetical jewel, however, is a necklet of two hundred and fifty pearls, of very great size and very great price. The whole effect is simply exquisite. It would be wearisome to describe all the bracelets and pendants starred with gems. One earring of "tallow drop" emeralds and pearls would excite the envy of Juno herself, who, every schoolboy knows, possesses or possessed a fine pair of earrings.—Pioneer.

MUSKETRY PRACTICE RETURNS.—We have before us the last return of the musketry practice of the Bombay army for the current year, and we cannot say that it is altogether satisfactory. That the Marine Battalion heads the list with the respectable figure of 82·54 is largely owing to the exertions of the late Captain Becke, whose characteristic it was to throw himself heart and soul into whatever he undertook, whether work or pleasure. The present adjutant general has laid it down as a self-evident proposition that "a good regiment cannot shoot badly," and it is understood in the service that bad shooting regiments will not be sent into the field. It is a somewhat curious commentary, then, on the above that the 28th N.I. is at the tail of the army as yet with the small figure of 49·46, and that the 28th N.I. has just gone to the front. But theory is one thing and practice is another, and everyone knows that really good shooting regiments often have very bad years, in which they fall off from their former high averages, and there are few steadier regiments in the Bombay army than the 28th. We are glad to notice that the 13th N.I., which comes third on the list, has fifty-nine marksmen out of 372 men exercised. We note this with satisfaction, because it is the highest percentage of marksmen ever yet attained by a regiment of native infantry on this side, but there is one point in regard to the musketry practice this year which we are bound to mention. We hear grave complaints from all sides of the badness of the ammunition. Many of the cartridges are said to be "whistlers," and many are so weak that they fall short of the targets. Now, it is very hard on the native army to be blamed for shooting badly while it has had indifferent ammunition issued to it. We think that if all officers commanding native regiments were to be called upon to report on their ammunition, supporting their statements, of course, by the number of miss fires, &c., the result would show that the ammunition is far from being everything that might be desired.—Bombay Gazette.

GREAT FIRE.—Damage to the extent of nearly £10,000 was done by a fire which occurred in some godowns stored with kerosine oil and other stores at Elphinstone Bunder, Bombay, on Jan. 24.—Times of India,

ELEMENTARY DRAWING.—The Government of Bombay have sanctioned the teaching of elementary drawing concurrently with general education in middle-class schools, and the course of instruction is to be designated "First Grade Art." The subjects forming the course are:—(a) Freehand drawing; (b) model and object drawing; and (c) practical geometry. The subjects comprised in the second grade course are: (a) Freehand drawing from flat examples; (b) freehand drawing from models; (c) practical geometry; (d) linear perspective; and (e) delineation of diagrams on the black-board. The provisional rules are published in the Government Gazette.

THE MUNICIPAL LOAN.—At the meeting of the Legislative Council the bill to provide for consolidating the loans due by the Bombay Municipality to Government and for their liquidation within thirty years from the 1st January next, was read a third time and passed. The only further alteration made in the bill was by the adoption of two or three merely verbal amendments; but Mr. Ashburner said inquiry had been made whether, in the case of any instalment falling in arrear, interest will be charged upon the whole instalment, a portion of which will consist of interest. The intention of the Government is to exact interest on the whole instalment in arrear, but in that contingency only will compound interest be charged.—Times of India.

THE PORT TRUST LOAN.—Tenders for a ten lakh debenture loan bearing interest at 4½ per cent., and repayable in seven years, were opened by the trustees of the Port of Bombay at their meeting on Thursday, when it was found that Rs.24,70,500 were offered.—Times of India.

DEATH OF A NATIVE OFFICIAL.—We are sorry to learn that Rao Saheb Gunpatrao Raghoba, superintendent of the post-master general's office, and a justice of the peace for Bombay, died on Jan. 27. The deceased, who was forty-four years old, was an able and zealous servant of the Government, who marked their appreciation of his service by conferring on him the title of Rao Saheb. The Rao Saheb belonged to a highly respectable Prabhu family of Bombay, his father being Principal Sudder Ameen in the judicial line of the public service. A large circle of friends, both in and out of the department in which he served, will hear of his death with feelings of great regret.—Times of India.

THE ACCUSATIONS AGAINST THE ARMY OF OCCUPATION.

THESE accusations are based upon the absurd reports which have been given of such operations as General Baker's first visit to Maidan and the Darra Narkh. That they were not given by eye-witnesses counts as nothing with partisans in England, who are only to eager to seize upon sensational stories. Our soldiers are described as driving old men, women, and children into the fields, and then firing their homesteads. This is utterly false. Not a soul was found in the doomed villages; the mulliks had carefully removed all their families to the hills, and nothing but untenanted houses were destroyed. As, personally, I saw the whole affair, I can state distinctly that the fanciful picture of our sepoys driving the old and helpless before them was untrue in every particular. Take, also, the behaviour of our troops during the occupation. Except on the day following Charasiab, where a few men disobeyed orders, and began looting near Beni-Shahr, no complaints have been lodged against our soldiers. The strictest discipline has been enforced, and has always been cheerfully submitted to by British and native alike. To take a present instance of our forbearance and consideration, it has been found necessary for the proper defence of Sherpur to level to the ground many fortified enclosures and villages within the 1,000 yards' radius of Sherpur, which is to be clear of all obstacles in future. With the exception of three forts (Killas Mahomed Shareef, Rikabashee, and Mahomed Khan), compensation has been paid to the owners of the places destroyed for all wood, forage, &c., taken out of their houses. They have further been informed that they are at liberty to build new enclosures at a fair distance from Sherpur walls; and so long as they remain at peace they will not be molested. The three forts exempted were too notorious resorts for city blackguards to be spared in any way. They played a prominent part in the 1841-2 campaign, and were a menace to us so long as their walls remained. Certainly such mildness as compensation for losses sustained is not part of a Russianising policy. If we are judged honestly by our actions, there was even before such a benevolent army of occupation the wild world over. Cabul was spared, its citizens treated with tolerance and encouraged to trade freely with us, and rebellious chiefs welcomed and forgiven, while our hospitals are still filled with men wounded in the recent fighting. To soldiers, looking upon these things in purely a military spirit, our policy seems to have been far too tolerant, and they reesnt with bitterness the taunt that they have been nothing but brutal devastators.—Pioneer.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1880.

THE AFGHAN ATROCITIES.

THE recent telegrams from Cabul contain little news of what can be described as action. On our side steady concentration of force, and preparation for possible movements against the irreconcilable elements, which are reported to be combining for a new attack on the side of the enemy; gradual yielding of the leaders, and reports, said to be mere rumours, of gathering of the clans. There is still the unsatisfied desire for the revelation of the policy which the Government intend to pursue. This desire finds vent also at home not only in general expressions, but in the special questions as to Herat, concerning which not only Afghanistan, but Russia, is disquieted about the intentions of the British Government. In the interim the opponents of the Government, who profess to be totally dissatisfied with our operations against Afghanistan, have gratified themselves by pressing home the charges of cruelty against the General in command and the soldiers who have shown so much endurance and gallantry. Beginning with scattered rumours attacking a few soldiers of a single regiment, the cry of "atrocities" has grown louder, and at the same time vaguer, until, copied from the pages of a would-be leading magazine, it was embodied in the memorial published a few weeks back, and thereafter assumed the importance of a parliamentary inquiry. The allegations of unnecessary cruelty against the non-combatant population were ingeniously confounded with imputations against the General of punishing armed resistance by execution of prisoners, and against the soldiers of atrocious cruelty to the wounded Afghans. The last-named charge, brought against our gallant Highlanders, was speedily rebutted. The brave little Goorkhas, of some of whom it was said that, exasperated by the cruelty practised on some of their comrades, they had retorted in kind, have been, by the statements of the General, exonerated even from that accusation. The charge of wholesale execution of prisoners, whose only crime was to have obeyed their regimental officers and fought against the invaders of their country, has been dissipated by General Roberts's letter read to both Houses of Parliament. Yet still the rancorous hostility, not of enemies of England, but of Englishmen, expressed itself by charges of needless severity shown both in the treatment of individuals and of villages. Still more safely and vaguely does it find vent in abuse of General Roberts, for the proclamation which accompanied the advance on and occupation of Cabul. Those of our Indian contemporaries who are most forward to find fault with the policy of the Indian Government in the Afghan business do not, to do them justice, attack the general or vilify our soldiers. That unworthy mode of manifesting political hostility has been left to essayists and politicians at home, who have eagerly caught up, and, so to speak, multiplied as well as exaggerated, each original scrap of camp gossip with the credulity of gobemouches and the virulence of partisans. The terms of the original proclamation issued by General Roberts, and accompanied by a corresponding manifesto from the Ameer, scarcely need repetition. The population was distinctly warned that they should withdraw themselves, if necessary, by flight, from taking any part with those who had been guilty of the murder of the Envoy or the plunder of the Residency. Asmatulla Khan was invited to circulate that proclamation, "so that the tribes and people who had not taken part in the base massacre of the Embassy might rest assured that revenge would be inflicted only on the participators in the crime.' Mutiny and murder of an Envoy and his suite, combined with actual rebellion against their own Sovereign, have ever been held crimes of which the just punishment is death. Armed resistance to the punitive force can hardly be held to assume such a patriotic character as to convert those who were proved guilty of those crimes into innocent combatants and heroes. If it had been possible to capture and convict every man concerned in the attack on the Residency a sentence of death could not have been impugned as too severe, nor can it be said that the offer of rewards for the surrender of those who, by fighting against the army advancing to Cabul with the consent of the Ameer, then actually present, had been guilty of rebellion, was not justified by right and usage. If we are to suffer the massacre of a British Embassy in the city of a friendly Sovereign, by troops who mutiny against their ruler, to pass with slight punishment; if rebellion, mutiny, and murder are not held to be crimes worthy of death, our Empire in Asia or elsewhere had better be resigned. The warning proclamation might rather be held with good reason to have been the expression of cautious clemency, and the subsequent proceedings of the commission appointed to try all prisoners accused of complicity in these crimes should be accounted as marked by careful moderation. When the nominal list of those who suffered the fitting punishment due to murderers and brigands is published we shall expect the verdict of all honest minded Englishmen to be that mercy prevailed over justice. The proclamation of Nov. 11 is a striking proof of the care that was taken not to confound the innocent with the guilty. By it the people of Cabul were assured that, as the British General had learned that some of those who had fought against the advancing forces had been misled by misrepresentations as to the position of the Ameer in the British camp, a free amnesty was declared to all such. Not one of them from that day need fear punishment, except those actually concerned in the attack on the Residency, or who, well knowing the truth as to the Ameer's position and authority, had instigated the resistance to the British troops. It seems incredible that the charge of having punished men for simple obedience as soldiers to the order of their officers should have been brought against a General whose proclamations were already before the public. It is not with a view of substantiating his indignant denial of the imputations that we have recalled these facts, but to show how unworthy of the promoters of the attack upon his fair fame have been their allegations, indicating as they do a wilful ignorance of the history of the campaign. Despatches may remain unknown until the Blue-book reveals them, but these proclamations and their effect have been made public months ago. The assailants, however, of our officers and soldiers have alleged unjustifiable severity exercised towards unoffending villagers; piteous pictures have been drawn of blazing houses and homeless families. The tribesmen have been presented in the light of innocent and unoffending victims. The able correspondent of the Pioneer describes these innocent and unoffending villagers, and their actions, somewhat differently. The city of Cabul, after the ten days' occupation by the tribesmen under Mahomed Jan, presented the appearance of an utterly sacked and plundered town. During the English tenure the inhabitants had lived and treated peaceably, none making them afraid. No home had been wronged, no shopkeeper injured; all had profited largely by the expenditure, and the only complaints received are on the part of the invaders, who were compelled to pay exorbitant prices. The Afghan patriots, during their brief period of power, looted systematically; no property, no home, was safe. We are told that the ladies of Wali Mahomed Zenana were stripped of every article of their clothing and turned out in all the shame of nakedness into the streets. The correspondent sums up his graphic description by saying, "A more wretched picture than Cabul presented as I rode through it cannot be imagined." Thus did the unoffending Afghans treat the traders of Cabul. Of their conduct towards our soldiers we are told that they killed all the wounded and mutilated the dead. The villagers endeavoured to entrap parties of the soldiers by a show of hospitality and attacked unarmed followers. For fair fighting none can be said to have been punished; for treachery and robbery prompt and well-deserved punishment has been inflicted. It must be remembered that these villagers swarmed from their homes to take part in the attack on Sherpur and the plunder of Cabul. When the force of Mahomed Jan was defeated they returned home to await another opportunity. Yet, to quote the correspondent of the Pioneer, referring to the amnesty offered after the dispersion of Mahomed Jan's force, "Before carrying fire and sword into their villages we nvite them to come in and say what they really want, and guarantee their personal safety. If we followed their own savage custom we should kill every man who had joined to attack our army; but, instead of bloodthirsty reprisals, the tribesmen find pursuing them messengers bearing offers of pardon if they will merely visit Sherpur and make their obeisance to the British General." More than that, the villagers near Cabul have been invited to send in their friends wounded in fighting against our troops to be attended to by our doctors. They killed our wounded; we cure theirs. It is a "strange satire on our benevolent mode of warfare," says the correspondent, "if the basis of a settlement is really come to." It will be accounted a stranger comment when those who have fought, and, after the fight, have shown leniency and humanity to their beaten, but savage foes, learn that they are credited at home with the atrocities that the Afghans have inflicted not only on their enemies but their own countrymen.

To the careful supervision of the quartermaster general and of the officers of his department was due the successfully embarkation of the expedition to Malta. His conscientious discharge of his multifarious duties and his impartial adherence to the orders and regulations of the army have secured for Brigadier General Burrows the respect of every rank as well as the high commendation of the civil and military authorities. The Commander in Chief feels sure that the Bombay army will join with his Excellency in wishing Brigadier General Burrows success and health to carry out the very important duty with which he has been entrusted in command of a brigade of the Bombay army about to be employed on active service in the field. The Chief Commissioner of Assam has closed the Scottpore and Kumbirgram Tea Gardens in Cachar against the importation of unacclimatised coolies from the North West Provinces, Oudh, and Behar.

The report of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway working for the closing half-year of 1879, as compared with the same period of 1878, announces £100,000 decrease in the receipts, and £97,000 increase in the working cost. The larger proportion of the coal consumed on this line is obtained direct from England at a high cost—a circumstance which might be turned to advantage, possibly, by some of the Indian mines. Goods traffic decrease is one of the causes which have affected the receipts so adversely.—Indian Daily News.

We commend to the army authorities at home the fact that of the 668 men at Cabul, who, from Oct. 31 to Jan. 13 suffered from pneumonia, the majority was contributed by the 72nd and 92nd Regiments. Further, of the 192 European soldiers sick on Jan. 13, seventy-two were suffering from chest complaint. Of the 794 men sick on Jan. 13, 126 were suffering from gunshot wounds, and 138 from pneumonia. This is a terrible commentary on the system of recruiting lads for military service. It is, moreover, a commentary that was not needed, for, if the military authorities had turned to the French records of the war in Germany and France in 1813-1814, they would never have sent immature soldiers into the field.—Indian Daily News.

The following are the totals of the trade of Calcutta, both imports and exports, compared for the years 1871-72 and 1878-79, vid the Suez Canal. It will be seen from these figures how large the increase in the total, for the last-mentioned year is:—

Year.	Route.	Total Value.
1871-72	Canal	Rs.14,54,93,879
1878-79	„	22,15,75,150
1878-79	Total increase	Rs.7,60,81,271

or more than 52 per cent. increase in the seven years, and if a comparison is made with the years 1877-78, and its total of Rs.28,80,28,993, the increase would stand at 97 per cent. more for that year. These figures speak pointedly of the great commercial advantages which have been gained for India by the opening of the Suez Canal.

The following royal order was issued at the Court of Mandalay on the 3rd day Pyatho labye Gyaw, 1241, corresponding with Dec. 29, 1879:—"It is our royal wish that the trade between foreign countries and Upper Burma shall be improved and strengthened, and for this purpose we desire to make it known that, as an encouragement to traders, and those who have commercial interests in our dominions, we have resolved to reduce the customs charge from 10 to 5 per cent. on the following articles of produce:—Resin, jute, wax, ivory, cow-hides, shellac, tumeric, &c., reckoned as belonging to the forests, except timber, bamboo, and cane, which will be charged for as usual. These changes will take effect from the 1st of the Burmese New Year (March 27). Secondly, it is our royal wish and intention to maintain the order issued by our royal predecessor, viz., that throughout the whole extent of our royal dominions no crime shall be summarily dealt with, or punishment with death inflicted, without reference to our royal court, which shall in each case decide the punishment to be inflicted. Furthurmore in regard to our landholders, and those who are in charge of our districts and petty states, it is our royal command that such as are now in possession of these shall be in no wise interfered with, but shall continue to administer our rule and collect our revenue. No disputed right to such possessions shall now be considered; but any other complaint against the authorities in question may be brought before our royal court, the complaint in each case coming in person with his petition."

The question papers connected with the Gilchsist examination having been previously received from the Gilchrist Prize Committee by the Government of India through the Secretary of State, the examination commenced at the Presidency College on Monday, Jan. 19, and terminated on Friday, Jan. 23. There were eight candidates—three Christians or Eurasians, and five Hindoos. The examination was conducted by the principal of the Presidency College. The answer papers will probably be despatched by the next mail to enable the committee to determine the result.

On the 22nd ult. H. E. the Viceroy received H. H. the Maharao Raja of Ulwar, at a private interview. The Brigadier General commanding the Presidency district and the district staff were present. A carriage, containing the Under Secretary in the Foreign Department, and an aide-de-camp to his Excellency the Viceroy, started from Government House at 1 p.m., for the purpose of escorting his Highness from his private residance at No. 2, Elysium-row. On alighting from the carriage, his Highness was received at the top of the grand staircase by the Foreign Secretary, who conducted him to the throne room. The Viceroy received the Maharao Raja, standing on the dais of the throne, and showed him to a seat at his right hand. On the right hand of H.H. were seated the political agent for Ulwar, and four of the Maharao Raja's attendants. On the left hand of the Viceroy were seated the Foreign Secretary, the Brigadier General commanding the Presidency district, the private and military secretaries. His Excellency's staff, and the district staff. After taking his seat, the Maharao Raja arose, and presented a nuzzur of 101 goldmohurs, which was touched and remitted. After a short conversation, the attendants were introduced by the political agent, and offered nuzzurs of one goldmohur each, which were touched and remitted. Uttar and pan were served to the Maharao Raja by the Viceroy, and to his suite by the Foreign Under Secretary. The Viceroy took leave of the Maharao Rajah, standing on the dais of the throne; the Foreign Secretary conducted H.H. to the top of the grand staircase, and the Under Secretary and the aide de camp accompanied H.H. back to his residence. H.H. was escorted to and from Government House by a party of cavalry. The marble hall was lined by a party of the body guard. During the interview a band played at the head of the grand staircase. A guard of honour was drawn up in front of the Government House, and saluted H.H. on arrival and departure. A salute of fifteen guns was fired from the ramparts of Fort William upon the arrival and departure of the Maharao Raja.

At the "New Mart," on Jan. 22, 786 chests of indigo were sold out of 926 chests offered. The remaining 140 chests were withdrawn. At this sale the proportion at the highest range of prices was small, owing to the quality of much that was put up. The general average of the sale was lower, only 57 chests having realised over Rs.300 per maund, and the highest figure touched was Rs.325.

HOME NEWS.

THE BISHOP OF COLOMBO.—The Bishop of Colombo has arrived in England in order to "confer with certain English bishops that, after hearing their wishes and advice, he may endeavour to arrive at conditions under which license and ordination may be granted to the members of the Church Missionary Society." His lordship refuses to admit an appeal to any one but his own metropolitan, the Bishop of Calcutta.

THE BODEN SANSKRIT SCHOLARSHIP.—Mr. John Lionel Postgate, exhibitioner of Queen's College, Oxford, has been elected to the above scholarship, while Mr. Charles Wynter Payne, junior student of Christchurch, is deserving of honourable mention.

DISASTER AT SEA.—Lloyd's agent at Port Said, in a telegram dated 12th inst., 9.15 a.m., stated that a collision is reported to have occurred at Ushruffe, between the Fulica, steamer, bound from Penarth for Aden, and the Eden, from Cardiff for Aden. The former vessel sank; the latter arrived at Suez badly damaged. All hands safe.

THE British Medical Journal understands that it is proposed to place a memorial in the chapel at the Royal Victoria Hospital, Netley, to the late Deputy Surgeon General Porter, who died, as principal medical officer of the Cabul Field Force, at the Sherpur Cantonment on Jan. 9.

MEMORIAL TO LORD LAWRENCE.—A public meeting was held in the Egyptian Hall of the Mansion House on Friday in furtherance of the proposed memorial to the late Lord Lawrence. The Lord Mayor (Sir Francis Wyatt Truscott) occupied the chair; and the Earl of Derby moved the first resolution:—"That Lord Lawrence was a statesman of whom England is proud; and that he deserves an honourable memorial at the hands of his countrymen." In the course of a speech of some length the noble earl pronounced an eloquent eulogy on the deceased statesman. Malice, he remarked, had never fastened on the career of Lord Lawrence an imputation of one discreditable incident or one unworthy act. The impression which his character and conversation left was that it would only be described as a "certain heroic simplicity." Many of the audience must recollect that the brother of Lord Lawrence, when dying at Lucknow, expressed a wish that his epitaph might be "Here lies Henry Lawrence, who tried to do his duty." On the tomb of his younger and more fortunate, it hardly more illustrious, brother the inscription might well run, "Here lies John Lawrence, who did his duty to the last." Dean Stanley seconded the resolution, which was adopted. Lord George Hamilton, M.P., moved the second resolution:—"That it is necessary to collect funds for the memorial resolved on; and that this meeting pledges itself to do so." His colleague (he remarked), Mr. Stanhope, Under Secretary for India, would have had pleasure in being present, and in submitting this resolution to the meeting, had he not been detained elsewhere by pressing official business. He believed the great majority of Englishmen were proud of the achievements of Lord Lawrence; yet it was a melancholy fact that the total amount of subscriptions up to the present moment for the intended memorial only came to £2,400, and that the number of contributors was only a little over 200 persons. Mr. Justice Stephen seconded the resolution, which was agreed to. On the motion of the Earl of Northbrook, seconded by Mr. Seton-Karr, a cordial vote of thanks was given to the Lord Mayor for presiding.

SMOKERS' PASTILLES.—An Oriental custom, quoted by Lady Wortley Montague, is made Occidental by Messrs. Piesse and Lubin. The Bonbon Pastilles, sweet and aromatic, are commended by those who desire to disguise the nicotian perfume. For that purpose they are certainly effective—"Stealing and giving odours."

ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.—On Monday, Feb. 16—Sir H. C. Rawlinson, K.C.B., president, in the chair—Professor F. Max Müller read a paper "On Sanskrit Texts discovered in Japan," in which he showed that the long-hoped-for wish of the late Professor H. A. Wilson and of other scholars had been at length realised by the obtaining from Japan of certain MSS. containing a glossary of Chinese words, with their equivalents in Sanskrit, together with the transliteration of the Sanskrit words in Japanese. The Sanskrit is written in an alphabet very nearly the same as the old Nepalese. Major Gen. Johnstone, Col. Haig, and T. R. Gill were elected resident members of the society. Mr. J. W. Redhouse read a paper "On the Identification of the 'False Dawn' of the Muslims with the 'Zodiacal Light' of the Europeans," in continuation of his former paper.

* Corporals F. T. L. Dames and Charles D. Guinness, although qualified for the Royal Engineers, elected to be appointed to the Royal Artillery.

The prizes obtained were yesterday presented by H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge as follows:—Mr. Edward H. Hemming, for distinguished proficiency, Pollock medal and memoir; for artillery, a dressing-bag; for military drawing, a travelling clock; for chemistry and physics, an aneroid barometer; for drills and exercises, a revolver holster and belt; and for classics, a compass, scale, and pen in case; Mr. Hugh Huleatt, for military history, a revolver holster and belt; Mr. Robert S. Maclagan, for exemplary conduct, a regulation sword; Mr. Francis T. L. Dames, senior cadet, Royal Artillery, Timbs memorial scholarship; for mathematics and mechanics, mathematical instruments and field-glass; Mr. Charles D. Guinness, for riding, a saddle and bridle; M. C. B. St. John Mildmay, for landscape drawing, a box of moist colours; Mr. Louis P. Carden, for gymnastics, a revolver; Mr. James E. Edmonds, for German, a field-glass; Mr. Edwin M. B. Newman, for French, a field-glass.

THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.—A sum of £985 has to be provided in respect of the Abyssinian expedition of 1867-8. A vote was taken in 1878-9 for £19,865, of which only £17,513 was actually expended. The present estimate is, therefore, a re-vote of a portion of the surplus of the grant for 1878-9, and is to meet expenditure disallowed on the account for that year, pending explanations from the India-office. The total cost of the expedition, including the amount now submitted, has been £8,977,500.

HOME CHARGES.—A vote of £15,050 is required for repayment of charges defrayed by the War-office on account of India. The total amount of the charge incurred by the War-office on behalf of India, and advanced out of the army moneys in the years from 1870-71 to 1876-77 was £685,050; out of this sum, £500,000 was repaid out of the vote for 1875-76, and £170,000 out of that for 1876-77, leaving £15,050 still due to the War-office. This amount was shown as a "deficiency to be voted" on the appropriation account of the vote of 1876-77, but the presentation of an estimate was deferred until the committee of public accounts had reported.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received to-day at the Bank of England for £450,000 in Government Bills on India. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, £659,300; Bombay, £88,900; and Madras, £1,800. Tenders on all presidencies at 1s. 8d. will receive about 58 per cent.; above that price in full.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

PERSIA AND HERAT.

The Earl of BEACONSFIELD said that a misconception had arisen with respect to his answer in reference to communications which had been going on with Persia. What he wished to convey was "that during the measures which had been taken to effect the settlement of Afghanistan communications had been received from the Persian Government which, though not infrequent, had hitherto led to no conclusion. The specific statement that the Persian Government had been released from their engagement not to occupy Herat was entirely incorrect."

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY, FEB. 12.

PERSIA AND HERAT.

In answer to a question from Mr. W. Holms, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that no treaty had been concluded with Persia for the occupation of Herat, but at present it was not convenient to make any further statement on the subject.

THE KIRWEE BOOTY.

Sir J. HAY asked the Under Secretary of State for India whether he would lay upon the table copies of all unpublished correspondence on the subject of the Kirwee Booty between officers interested in the Prize Grant and the India Department subsequent to the presentation of the last retur nof papers relating to this matter—viz., No. 213, of 1876; and of the shorthand notes of the proceedings in the Vice-Chancellor's Court, including the arguments of counsel and Sir C. Hall's judgment in the action "Kinloch v. the Secretary of State in Council," on the 4th of November, 1879.

Mr. E. STANHOPE said that there was at the India-office a copy of the recent judgment, but not the arguments of counsel; but he hardly thought these papers of sufficient general interest to be printed at the public expense.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY, FEB. 13.

GENERAL ROBERTS.

Viscount CRANBROOK read the following letter from Gen. Sir F. Roberts:—

"I am extremely grateful to you for so kindly writing to me with regard to attacks being made on me in certain quarters respecting ill treatment of prisoners and wounded at the battle of Charasiab, and also for forwarding to me a copy of the article in the Fortnightly Review for December, headed 'Martial Law in Cabul.' I think that a short explanation of what has really occurred since we entered Afghanistan last September will enable you to satisfy all those who may refer to the subject in Parliament that wounded Afghans have not been ill treated, and that there is no foundation for the remarks made by Mr. Harrison in the Fortnightly Review. With regard to the burning of Afghan bodies at the battle of Charasiab, I would beg to say that I first heard of the circumstances from the newspapers, and that I at once directed a court of inquiry to investigate the matter, the proceedings of which have some time since been forwarded for the information of the Commander in Chief and Government of India. It would appear that the act was committed in the rear of the troops engaged by two or three Goorkhas who were by themselves, and by the evidence given life must have been as good as extinct at the time the clothes were set on fire. I need not assure you that no blame for the act in question can be attached to any officer of the force under my command, and that with this exception every consideration has been shown to the wounded and dead, inasmuch as they have been treated as if they were our own soldiers, and after Charasiab some of the wounded Afghans were taken into hospital and placed alongside of our own wounded men. This fact, I think, speaks for itself as regards the general treatment of the Afghans who fought against us. With reference to martial law having been proclaimed within a radius of ten miles round Cabul, I can safely affirm that for many reasons it was absolutely necessary to do so—(hear, hear)—the chief one being to prevent the inhabitants carrying firearms and other weapons which might render it possible for them to make sudden attacks on soldiers and other individuals belonging to this force. Had this precaution not been taken I venture to say that, living as we are among a nation of fanatics, murders would have been of frequent occurrence. I am not at all in favour of martial law, and shall be glad to see it discontinued as soon as some other form of government can be decided upon. As to the proclamation published relative to the treatment of soldiers and others concerned in the attack on the Embassy and of those who had apparently shown themselves to be rebels against the Ameer by fighting against us, I would mention that at the same time the proclamation was issued Yakoob Khan was outwardly our friend and repeatedly spoke to me of the people who fought against us at Charasiab as rebels to his rule; and on that account they were referred to in the terms of the proclamation. As to men being hanged for the simple fact of their having fought against us, such was not the case. Rewards were certainly offered for their capture, but this was done with a view of arresting those who, directly or indirectly, had taken part in the massacre of the several members of the British Embassy. All convicted of such a crime would, I believe, have been sentenced to death in any country whether civil or martial law had been in force. The Kotwal (chief magistrate of the city) was found guilty of having incited the troops to the massacre, of having taken an active part in dishonouring the dead bodies, and in having subsequently instigated the troops and people of Cabul to resist our advance. On these accounts he was hanged. As to prisoners taken in fight being shot, such is totally devoid of truth—(cheers)—further than in one or two instances summary punishment has been inflicted on individuals who have been found mutilating our wounded soldiers; indeed, all the wounded that have fallen into the enemy's hands at different times have been treated in the most cruel manner and horribly mutilated. With regard to men who were not implicated in the attack on the Embassy, some short time after Yakoob Khan had been made a prisoner an amnesty was proclaimed, and the people of every district visited by our troops have invariably been informed that those soldiers have nothing to fear from us; but, on the other hand, if they came in and gave up their rifles or guns they would receive the amount authorised for the same. This was fully understood, and a considerable number of arms have from time to time been brought in. Recently, quite irrespective of any action taken by us, the mollahs have been preaching a 'jehad,' or religious war, and have by these means got together by coercion, practical as well as religious, a gigantic collection of people. On reaching Cabul this mass was joined by all the riff-raff of the city and neighbouring villages; but the Kazil bashis, merchants, and respectable inhabitants, so far from throwing in their lot with our opponents, held aloof, and from time to time gave us valuable information. The greater portion also of the sirdars of Cabul remained during the disturbances in our camp. As soon as I was aware that the enemy had been completely dispersed I published a general amnesty, feeling that the people generally were not to blame for what had occurred, and the quickest way of restoring order was to invite the people to Cabul and to let them see that they could trust implicitly to our forbearance and generosity. At the same time our civil dispensary was re-established, and notice was sent through the city and to all the neighbouring villages inviting the wounded to hospital and assuring them that they had nothing to fear. Many wounded have been brought in and are being taken every care of. Afghans are naturally very suspicious and require time to be reassured; but so many maliks and other headmen had responded to the amnesty proclamation that yesterday I was enabled to hold a durbar at which nearly 200 of the principal men who had fought against us were present. Others will doubtless follow their example, and I hope in time the country will quiet down. Referring to the administration of affairs in the city and surroundings of Cabul, I can conscientiously say that our rule from the first has been extraordinarily mild and lenient. No harsh measures of any kind have been adopted. On the contrary, I have since had reason to regret that, from a desire not to do anything that could possibly set the people against us, I abstained, on our first occupation of Sherpur, from levelling the forts and enclosures by which it is surrounded on all sides, and which during the late siege, by affording shelter to the enemy, were the causes of much annoyance and some loss to us. Two proofs which to my mind are fairly conclusive as to the feelings of security and trust which the people of Cabul city and adjoining villages reposed in us are the rapid manner in which the city filled immediately the enemy dispersed, and the fact that since our arrival there had not been a single complaint against a European soldier, and only a few of a trivial nature against one or two of the men belonging to the native regiments. The strictest discipline has been maintained, and there has not been an instance of violence against the people, notwithstanding that our soldiers have witnessed the cruel treatment of their comrades on every occasion of their falling into the enemy's hands. There is one point mentioned by Mr. Harrison in the Fortnightly Review—viz., that civilian special correspondents have been prevented from accompanying the force under my command—in answer to which I would like to say a few words. I certainly never received any orders prohibiting civilian correspondents accompanying the force, and from the first one has been in my camp. He had considerable difficulty in reaching Ali-Khel before the force marched, as our movements were very rapid after the order for an advance on Cabul was received. This may have prevented other correspondents joining me at the time. Had any come they would have received every assistance. Some correspondents have arrived since we reached this. No restrictions whatever are placed on them, and they are allowed to send any telegrams they please, even when the information contained in them is incorrect, always excepting such information as by nature of its inaccuracy is calculated to produce an evil effect."

Lord GRANVILLE inquired what was the misunderstanding which the Prime Minister wished to correct by his statement of the previous evening, which, with the unimportant difference of a transposition of two passages, appeared to be exactly the same as that on which the misunderstanding had arisen. He wished also to know whether releasing Persia from her treaty engagement in respect of Herat would be contrary to the policy of her Majesty's Government.

Lord BEACONSFIELD replied that the misunderstanding was an idea that he had said no communications had been made by Persia to her Majesty's Government with regard to Herat. He declined to go beyond what he had already said on this point, as fragmentary allusions to negotiations might lead to further misunderstanding.

GENERAL ROBERTS.

Mr. E. STANHOPE read General Roberts's letter, and added, in answer to a question of Sir C. Dilke, that a detailed statement of the executions was coming home.

POPULAR REPRESENTATION IN INDIA.

Sir D. WEDDERBURN called attention to the importance of conferring upon the people of India some measure of representation, either in the Legislative Councils or otherwise, in order that the Indian Government may have greater facilities than those at present existing for ascertaining native opinion upon public questions.

Mr. E. STANHOPE, on the part of the Government, while sympathising with the desire to extend representative institutions, pointed out that the inhabitants of India were not one people, but a conglomeration of peoples, without cohesion and without any basis for representation. Nevertheless there were at present no less than 894 municipalities, comprising twelve millions of people, and the governing bodies of these municipalities contained three natives to one European. By the India Councils Act of 1861 considerable privileges were accorded to natives and of the non-official members of those councils. In Madras, out of seven four were natives; in Bombay there were four out of six, and in Bengal five out of seven; and in the Council of the Governor General there were four out of seven. But outside the centres of population there was a vast inert mass of people who had no capacity for representation at present, and wanted nothing but to be let alone and not be overtaxed. The Government did all in its power to elicit native opinion as to the laws which were proposed, and would be glad, wherever it was possible, to obtain the co-operation of the natives in legislation, but it would be unwise to press on this idea of representation too fast.

Sir G. CAMPBELL dwelt on the difficulty of getting at native opinion, and stated that the expression of the opinion of the Punjabees was too frequently that of a German Jew who had established himself at Lahore. He referred to the ancient self-governing institutions, which existed in some parts, and might be usefully developed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY, FEB. 16.

EMIGRATION OF COOLIES TO REUNION.

In answer to Mr. Errington, Mr. E. STANHOPE said that the Government of India did have it in contemplation last year to suspend the emigration to Réunion at the end of the year in consequence of certain evils brought to light by an international commission of inquiry. It had been decided to continue the emigration, at any rate until October next, and in the meantime negotiations are taking place with the French Government with the view of remedying those evils. It would be premature to produce the correspondence at present.

THE NAGA HILL TRIBES.

In answer to a question of Mr. Dalrymple, as to a raid by these tribes upon the Baladhan tea gardens at Cachar, Mr. E. STANHOPE had no official information upon the subject at present. He gathered from the newspapers that the police were in pursuit of the party that committed the raid, and had no doubt that the Government of India had already taken such precautions as are possible to guard against the recurrence of such an event.

GENERAL ROBERTS'S PROCLAMATION.

Sir C. DILKE asked the Under Secretary of State for India whether the Government would at once lay before the House the various proclamations issued by Sir F. Roberts and communicated to the Indian press, but not contained in the Blue-book Afghanistan, 1880 (No. 1); and whether it would be possible to include in correspondence laid before the House relative to the military executions in Afghanistan the despatches from General Roberts and portions of the Cabul Diary bearing upon this subject which had not been printed in the papers laid before Parliament; and any correspondence upon the matter between Sir Donald Stewart and Sir F. Roberts.

Mr. E. STANHOPE: The only proclamations issued by Sir F. Roberts which we have received and have not as yet published arrived by the last mail. They are only telegraphic summaries, and we should naturally have waited until the full text arrived. But if the hon. member likes to move for them we will give them at once. As we are expecting by an early mail complete statements regarding the executions in Cabul, we do not think it would be right to give any incomplete statements in the meantime. As regards any correspondence between Sir Donald Stewart and Sir F. Roberts on the subject, we have received no information officially. I believe that certain statements as to such a correspondence have been made in private letters which were clearly not meant to be published.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY, FEB. 17.

NEWSPAPER CORRESPONDENTS WITH AN ARMY IN THE FIELD.

In answer to Sir C. Dilke, Mr. E. STANHOPE said her Majesty's Government had no information on the subject of the rules for the guidance of editors of newspapers and of correspondents with an army in the field, which were communicated through the Press Commissioner to the Indian Press in October last, but he understood that those rules had been withdrawn.

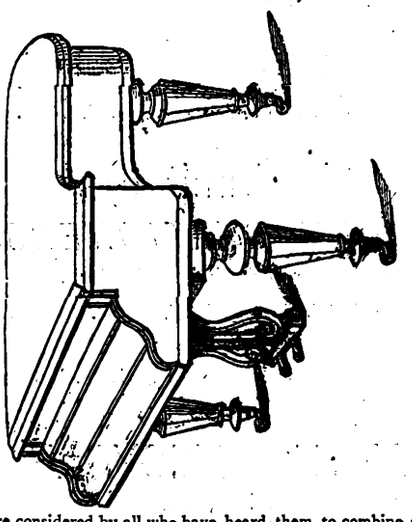
KIRKMAN AND SON,

ESTABLISHED NEARLY 150 YEARS.



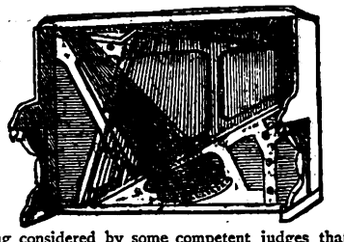
3 and 9, SOHO-SQUARE, LONDON, W.

KIRKMAN AND SON'S

PATENT STEEL FRAME

SHORT GRAND PIANOS,

SIX FEET LONG, IN ELEGANT ROSEWOOD OR WALNUT CASES,



Are considered by all who have heard them to combine a greater amount and resonance of tone, consistent with adaptability of size, shape, and elegance of appearance, than those of any other manufacturer.

KIRKMAN AND SON'S

OVERSTRUNG

GRAND AND COTTAGE PIANOS.

Is being considered by some competent judges that the German method of over or cross-stringing Pianos is attended with great advantage, Messrs. Kirkman and Son are now manufacturing both Grand and Cottage Pianos on this principle, the latter having the plain Sticker Action, which is not the case with Pianos of this class manufactured by other makers; in fact, the extreme simplicity of the action used by Messrs. Kirkman and Son in all their Pianos render them eminently suitable for exportation to the Colonies, where skilled workmen are few and far between All useless checks and complications are carefully avoided, thus enabling any tuner, with however superficial a knowledge of the business, to regulate them or repair any damage they may sustain.

KIRKMAN AND SON

Have a reputation extending over nearly a Century and a Half.

There are now in the possession of the house Harpsichords and Virginals dated 1758 and 1778, manufactured by Jacobus and Abraham Kirckman.

The present members of the firm beg to call the attention of shippers and exporters to the fact that in ordering of this house they are dealing with a firm who manufacture on principles derived from experience of this almost unprecedented length.

KIRKMAN AND SON

Have at present a Fine Selection at their Extensive Show Rooms in Soho-square.

NO MORE CHICORY IN YOUR COFFEE!!!

MOCHARA, CAFE DE SANTÉ.

MOCHARA, the pure produce of finest ripe figs, roasted and powdered, known as "COFFEE OF HEALTH," has long been used in the East as a supplement for mixing with Coffee.

MOCHARA imparts to Coffee that beautiful dark brown, yet transparent, colour, mellow flavour, and rich body so much admired in French Coffee.

MOCHARA neutralises the heating properties of Coffee, and is recommended by the Faculty as a remedy against indigestion, &c., (if used in larger proportions), the sanative properties of figs being well known.

MOCHARA, to improve even the best Colonial Coffee, which is empty and watery without it, may be mixed to the extent of 10 to 20 per cent. to 1lb. of pure Coffee, according to taste. For invalids, nervous persons, and children, from 25 to 50 per cent., with MILK FREELY used. Condensed milk preferable where good country milk or cream cannot be had.

MOCHARA, if well stored and kept dry, the air being excluded, will keep any length of time—at least, for some years.

MOCHARA is sold by Grocers and Chemists in 1lb. tins, at 1s. per lb. retail. Wholesale in 28lb. tins, and in barrels of 2 to 4 cwt. Half-pound Sample Tins sent for 10d. free by post.

THE MOCHARA COFFEE COMPANY, 60a, Watling-street, E.C., London.

LAMPLOUGH'S EFFERVESCING

PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators; also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates

Her Majesty's Representative the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1880.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Feb. 7; Madras and Allahabad, Feb. 6; Calcutta, Feb. 5.

THE following is the report on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending the 27th January, 1880:—Slight rain fell during the week in most of the districts of Madras, Bengal, Assam, Mysore, and Coorg, and also in parts of the North Western Provinces and Oudh and the Punjab. These showers have benefited the spring crops, but rain is still wanted in several districts of Upper India. Agricultural prospects and the public health continue good on the whole.

THERE is little news from Cabul, except that Mahomed Jan has opened negotiations by means of Mastaup Habibullah Khan, who has proceeded to Waidak for the purpose. General Bright's Lughman expedition has been unopposed. The 45th Sikhs and the 24th Punjab Native Infantry have been ordered from Lataband to Cabul. The 51st Regiment escorting the 13th Battery, the 9th Brigade of Artillery, and the heavy battery of 40-pounders, will also move on Cabul when the road of the Lataband Pass has been sufficiently improved for them by Col. Blair, who is now, for that purpose, at Seibaba with two companies of Sappers. It is rumoured in the second division that General Roberts will advance on Ghazni about the end of March, meeting General Stewart's division from Kandahar, and, after occupying Ghazni, return to India by the Kuram route. During General Roberts's advance, Cabul, it is also stated, will be held by two strong brigades from the Khyber line under General Bright, who will retire to Jellalabad when General Roberts leaves Ghazni. Over 2,000 mules and ponies have reached Jellalabad from Peshawur. All are said to be in capital condition. The weather in the Khyber line is very severe. Heavy snow has fallen at Jagdalak, telling greatly on the transport animals.

"All is quiet throughout the Kandahar, Khelat-i-Ghilzai, and Zamindawar districts. Yusuf Khan, representative of Ayoob Khan at Farrah, has been endeavouring, but without success, to raise the Zamindawar people against Sirdar Shere Ali and the British. Ayoob Khan, of Kharan, has sent a mission here, requesting to be appointed sirdar, and declaring his allegiance to the Kandahar State. All communication has for the present ceased between Farrah and Herat. There is no special news from Seistan, save that Ibrahim Khan, of Chaknasur, has made friends with Yusuf Khan at Girishk. The weather at Kandahar and in the neighbourhood is very severe, presenting a strong contrast to that of last year. Very heavy snow has fallen on the Khojuck and at Quetta, greatly retarding the movement of the Bombay Corps. No advance of this division is, for the present, in contemplation. On the Khelat-i-Ghilzai side there have been very heavy snowfalls, and all roads are blocked. Accounts from Ghazni represent the defence of that town as of no importance. The harvest prospects here are very good. A large number of labourers are being engaged here for the proposed Kandahar railway in the Peshin Valley, the surveys for which have not yet been completed on this side of Quetta. The 2nd Sikhs marched in here on Friday from Chaman, having there been relieved from outpost duty by the Bombay troops. The Bishop of Lahore has also arrived here. Col. St. John left here for Calcutta on the 16th inst., but will probably return here for a short time. Major Euan Smith has taken the political charge in his place. The health of the troops continues to be very good. An accident occurred on the morning of the 17th inst., on the Kandahar Railway, near Mittri, twelve miles from Sibi. Some wagons blown along the line by a heavy gale came into collision with a train from Jacobabad containing Puna Horse and coolies. Seven coolies were killed and four injured. The Puna Horse escaped. Sir Richard Temple arrived at Karachi on the 17th, and left for Bombay on the 19th."

CALCUTTA telegrams of 22nd inst. state that there is no fresh news of the Naga war, save that the Government has at last yielded to the cry for more troops, and ordered the 10th Native Infantry from Barrackpore to Cachar. Chendriah, the leader of the Rampa insurgents, has been beheaded by his own followers. His head was brought in and identified by his wife and mother, and his lieutenant, Ammalreddi.

A RECENT telegram reports that the only incident from the Kuram Valley is the death of General Tytler, V.C., who at Thull, on the 14th inst., succumbed to an attack of pneumonia. The death of this distinguished officer is a most serious loss to the Indian Army.

IN our issue of Nov. 1, recording the appointment of this distinguished officer to the command of the Zaimukht expedition, we gave a full account of his services. As our readers know, the operations of the force under his command were skilfully and successfully conducted, and doubtless would have earned that honourable recognition which it is now too late to award. To quote the eloquent euthanasy of a leading journal:—

"A long record of hard service has been closed by a death no less honourable than if won on a battlefield. He will be mourned, not merely by the few who knew and loved him well, but by the many who admired his daring gallantry, his earnest perseverance, and the patience with which he bore what most men would have deemed official neglect; for though General Tytler commanded his regiment on three separate campaigns and earned the warmest praises of all the generals under whom he served he never received brevet promotion for his distinguished services in the field. Even his brilliant conduct in the late Afghan war was unrewarded by riband or professional advancement. His death deprives the Queen of the services of one of the best and bravest men who have ever won her Cross, and the Indian Army of a general whose place it will not be easy to fill. He was an officer of the old school, and one of its best and most valued representatives."

COLONEL JAMES J. O'BRYEN, of the Bengal Staff Corps, and late commandant of the 22nd Bengal Native Infantry, died at Sufed Sung, Afghanistan, of pneumonia, on the 22nd ult., in his 58th year. He served throughout the Sutlej campaign of 1845-6, including the battles of Moodkee, Ferozeshah, and Sobraon (wounded), and for his services obtained the medal and two clasps.

ACCORDING to a Reuter's telegram of Feb. 19 Sir G. P. Colley has been appointed Governor and High Commissioner of Natal and commander of the troops in the south eastern district, in succession to Sir Garnet Wolseley and Sir Henry Bulwer. Colonel Brackenbury, at present military secretary to Sir Garnet Wolseley, will succeed Sir George Colley as private secretary to Lord Lytton.

THE Queen has been graciously pleased to nominate and appoint the Maharaja Sing of Munipore to be an Extra Knight Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. The prompt and loyal services which have earned this distinction are thus chronicled by the Calcutta Statesman:—

"When the Maharaja of Munipore was informed of the outrages committed by the savages who inhabit the greater part of our Eastern frontier, viz., the Nagas, his Highness ordered his brigade to be held in readiness, anticipating he might be called on to render assistance to the Paramount Power. In the meantime Colonel Johnstone, the Political Agent of Munipore, receiving instructions to proceed to the scene of disturbance, asked the Maharaja to furnish him with some troops, and the Maharaja at once placed all his available forces at our disposal. The Munipore brigade under the command of Colonel Johnstone consisted of the following:—The Maharaja's first son, his Brigadier-General Thangal, and another son, with 98 sirdars attending; 2,041 Munipore troops, 1,000 Kookies. Besides these, the actual belligerents, 18 sirdars and 140 men were sent to guard the provisions on their way to the front; 4 sirdars and 61 men to carry daks between the base and the scene of action; 25 officers, headed by the Maharaja's Major-General Balloram Sing, and 432 men, to collect supplies; and 3 sirdars and 44 men to escort Captain Sabie, of Cachar. The number of retainers and coolies employed in the expedition was—271 coolies for the Political Agent, the surgeon, and Captain Sabie; 179 retainers and 1,400 coolies for the two sons of the Maharaja, his brigadier-general, and other sirdars in attendance; 2,872 coolies for carrying supplies and baggage for the troops. Of the numbers given above, 2 officers and 332 men have died, and 887 are invalided. The cost incurred by the Maharaja for the transport and supplies of the sirdars, troops, and the coolies, amounts nearly to Rs.15,000. The Munipore contingent went to work with enthusiasm, and had they been allowed after the relief of Kohima to advance in pursuit of the enemy they would no doubt have given a good account of them. This not being required of them they returned to Munipore."

THE Queen has been pleased to appoint Andrew Mure, Esq., M.A., to be a puisne judge of the Supreme Court of the colony of Mauritius; Edward Morehead Wood, Esq., to be procureur and advocate general; and William Henry Lionel Cox, Esq., to be substitute procureur and advocate general for the same colony.

THE Raja of Jheend and Mr. H. J. Reynolds, secretary to the Government of Bengal, have been appointed additional members of the Council of the Governor General for making laws and regulations.

IT is stated that dacoity in the Deccan has been entirely suppressed.

THE Indian papers contain fuller details of the murder of Mr. Blyth and the looting of the Baladhun tea gardens. Great alarm prevailed subsequently in adjacent tea districts, and the coolies in many cases "bolted." Supplies of Martini-Henri rifles and ammunition were sent up by the Government for the use of the managers. It has become evident that the Angami Nagas must be thoroughly subdued.

FROM Bombay Rs.6,000 have been remitted to the Duchess of Marlborough and the same amount to the Lord Mayor of Dublin in aid of the Irish relief fund. The subscriptions include Rs.3,000 from the Baroda Government and £500 from Mr. Ardasseer Hormasjie Wadia, a Parsee merchant. A meeting was held in Colombo on Jan. 27 to organise a collection. There has been up to date of mail no movement in the Punjab or in Bengal, but a Calcutta paper has been offered large subscriptions. In Bombay all classes, Indian and native, are subscribing. Madras has remitted £1,000 to the Lord Mayor's fund, to which all the local subscriptions will be sent. Bangalore has also responded to the appeal.

WE hear from a Cairo correspondent, writing on the 12th inst., that Col. Sir Lewis Pelly had been a few days previously subjected to a gross outrage on the part of some Arabs. Accompanied by Lady Pelly, he was walking up a hill near the citadel, when a crowd of urchins collected, and, joined by some Arabs of larger growth, began pelting them with stones, one stone having struck Lady Pelly on the head. On complaining to the officer of the nearest guardhouse and excise, they both declined to interfere and Sir Lewis and Lady Pelly had to escape as best they could. Col. Pelly at once reported the case to Mr. Borg, the acting consul, who immediately demanded of the prefect of police the proper punishment of the offence. Osman Pacha most summarily took the case in hand, and has imprisoned and dismissed the officers and imprisoned the Arab rascals.

A RECENT Gazette of India contains a resolution of the Government of India giving the basis on which promotions in the Engineer Establishment will be carried out. The total sanctioned strength of the engineer staff throughout India is 896—18 chief, 46 superintending, 356 executive, and 476 assistant engineers. Deducting the number in Bombay and Madras, there will thus be—14 chief, 37 superintending, 285 executive, and 381 assistant engineers, or a total of 719 officers directly under the Government of India. Our next issue will contain the full resolution giving the distribution according to provisional scales.

IT has been decided by the military authorities that, whenever there is spare accommodation at the date of the sailing of a troopship, passages will be granted to the wives and families of officers of either service, provided the officer be below the rank of field officer; in case of families travelling unaccompanied by officers, as in the case of those who are accompanied, it is to be distinctly understood that the passage is granted solely on the condition of space being available on the date of the sailing of the troopship, and that the grant is liable to be cancelled if on that date the accommodation allotted as spare is found at the last moment to be required for officers and their families entitled to free passage, and no claim for compensation will be admitted in consequence of any disappointment. The actual cost of messing will be charged for each individual embarked. All applications for passages under the above conditions should be submitted to the office of the Quartermaster General in India, Simla.

UNDER a recent order of the Government of India Civil Engineers are to be removed from the Military Works Branch as soon as the Royal Engineer officers, now on field service, are able to take their places.

Two minutes by the Governor of Bombay have been issued: one relating to the military road-making by the Bombay Brigade in the Bolan Pass, and the other urging the importance of conserving the timber along the railway route in the assigned districts of Southern Afghanistan.

AT the annual dinner of the Calcutta Trades' Association Sir Ashley Eden stated that the financial position of Bengal has never been so good as at present, and the provincial revenue would give interest on one and a-half millions more of capital; but he added:—

"Unfortunately, I am not in a position to spend a penny on new productive works. And the construction of railways, though they are shown by experience to be profitable and successful in Bengal, both directly and indirectly, is practically at a standstill, and we are making no greater progress in opening out the country by railway and canals than we were twenty years ago, though much is being done in the way of making roads. I cannot pretend to say who is responsible for this; it is certainly not the local Government or the Government of India. The policy which is now repressing us is the outcome of the panic caused by the ridiculously exaggerated writings and speeches of men who, though unable to master the first principles of Indian accounts, put themselves forward as experts, and declare India to be impoverished and bankrupt. Certainly at no time has this been less true of Bengal than at the present time, and, though it is not my duty to say so, I believe that the same might be said for the rest of India. We cannot close our eyes to the fact that if it were not for the exceptional expenditure of the Afghan war the financial position of India would be excellent, and with these facts before us I must say that the agitation which has been got up in England with the view of stopping expenditure on public works is mischievous and short-sighted to the last degree."

SOME native gentlemen lately forwarded a memorial to the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, the object of which was to obtain permission for the native gentlemen who have adopted "brimless caps" to wear them on official occasions, respect being shown by uncovering the head. The enforced wearing of pugris was described as a cause of moral depression, and a drawback to easy intercourse between European and native gentlemen. Sir Ashley Eden's reply was a crushing refusal. The new fashion was declared to be neither Oriental nor Occidental. So far from being a sign of "culture," he regarded it as slovenly, and read a sharp lecture to the young men of the present day, whose tendency it is to neglect their personal appearance on public occasions.

THE amount of money in the public treasuries, and at credit of the Government in the Presidency banks and their branches on the last day of the month of December, 1879, was Rs.11,57,92,073. The corresponding figures on the same date in 1878 were Rs.10,44,10,910, and in 1877, Rs.10,31,25,200.

THE amount of cash in the reserve treasury of the Government of India on Jan. 29 was Rs.1,74,97,044. In last week's return the amount was Rs.1,47,46,907.

DURING the year 1879 the value of gold imported into India was Rs.1,66,29,422, and of that exported Rs.1,24,44,599, whilst the value of silver imported was

Digitized by Google

Rs.10,18,88,874, and of that exported Rs.2,08,36,965. This leaves a balance in favour of imports of Rs.8,52,36,632.

THE Ceylon Times of Feb. 4, just received, says that to date the published manifests of cargoes outwards show a total of coffee shipments of 235,161 cwt. as compared with 307,782 cwt. at the corresponding period of last year. Cinnamon has been shipped to the extent of 4,689 bales against 5,503 bales; and cinchona 255,887lb. as compared with 65,939lb. last year.

THE official rate of exchange for the ensuing year has been fixed at 1s. 8½d. per rupee. A typographical error of omission in our last issue not only omitted the half-penny, but made our esteemed contemporary, the Home News, responsible for the mistake.

THE special correspondent of the Standard telegraphs from Thayetmyo as follows :—

"The Chief Commissioner has replied to the Burmese Ambassador that the royal order which has been forwarded does not convey plenary powers, but only authorises the discussion of preliminaries. The Embassy, therefore, appears to have no more authority than before to propose anything likely to be acceptable to the British. A fresh reference to Mandalay might overcome the initial obstacle, and for this the Chief Commissioner would gladly wait. Several of the proposals advanced could not possibly be agreed to—indeed, the Burmese could hardly have any expectation that the British would entertain them. The Ambassador made no allusion to the various points at issue, but has placed them before the Burmese Ministers, and stated that serious dissatisfaction will be caused unless a reasonable hope should be created that substantial overtures will be submitted shortly. The Burmese deny that they know what are the British wishes, and it is reported that they are requesting definite information on the subject."

THE Cologne correspondent of the Standard quotes a report from Cairo that the British Resident at Aden has been instructed to send a man of war, with "two hundred men, artillery and engineers," to "Tadchurrah, on the Abyssinian coast," in order to counterbalance Italian influence at Assb Bay. The islands of Mussah or Musheh were ceded to the British crown by the Danarkli Sultan of Tajourah or Tejooreb, in 1840, and formally taken possession of on August 31 of that year. Tejooreh itself, the seaport of the Danarkli tribe, is, according to Captain Dundas Taylor, an entrepot of the Abyssinian commerce and the slave trade, about 200 female slaves being exported annually. This must be the place referred to in the Cairo rumour.

THE CABUL EXECUTIONS.

THE Indian Government has issued an abstract statement of the executions at Cabul, from which it appears that the charges against the persons concerned and the number executed and acquitted were as follow :—Dishonouring the bodies of officers of the Embassy—executed, four. Possessing property of the Embasy—executed, four; released, four. Being armed within five miles of the camp—executed, six, released, fifteen. Attacking escorts with the view of releasing prisoners—executed, four. Murdering camp followers, participation in the attack on the Residency, inciting people to rise, treacherously killing wounded soldiers—executed, sixty-nine; released, fifty-seven. Total executed, eighty-seven; released, seventy-six. The instructions issued on Oct. 9 for the guidance of the military commission were :—(1) All prisoners not belonging to the force will be brought before the commission; (2) all natives of the country found armed in the city or within a radius of five miles, and all persons suspected of being soldiers, will be made prisoners; (3) every soldier or civilian who took part in the massacre of the Embassy will be executed; (4) the cases of all other prisoners will be inquired into and referred to General Roberts. Every case was tried by the military commisssion, presided over by a general officer, and no sentence of death was awarded without confirmation by the Lieutenant General commanding. The defence of the accused was fully heard, and remands granted when rebutting evidence was stated to be forthcoming. When reasonable doubt existed the benefit of the doubt was given to the accused. Rewards were offered for the capture of those who fought against us at Charasiab, because it was known that the regiments which attacked the mission took part against us on that occasion. In no instance, however, were soldiers thus brought in executed unless proved to have taken part in the attack on the Residency, or to have committed any other of the crimes enumerated in the proclamation. Rs.400 were paid in rewards, of which 200 were given as compensation to the family of a man killed when arresting an armed band. The result of the disarming order has been that our force has been unmolested by assassins or fanatics. The order was widely circulated and well understood. Few suffered for its non-observance, and all who proved that they were ignorant of it were released. The disarming order was further of service in permitting foraging parties to be accompanied by smaller escorts than would otherwise have been required. The villages close to Sherpur were destroyed for purely military reasons. Compensation was paid and fresh ground assigned to the families thus deprived of their homes.—Times Telegram.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

A REUTER'S telegram from Calcutta states that Sir John Strachey made his financial statement in the Legislative Council on Tuesday. The result he announced to be highly favourable. In the financial year 1878-79 there was a surplus of £2,044,000, and in 1879-80 £119,000. The budget estimate for 1880-81 shows a surplus of £417,000. The foregoing figures are arrived at in each case after paying from the ordinary revenue all charges on account of the famine, the Afghan war, and the frontier railways. The war expenses in 1878-79 amounted to £676,000, in 1879-80 to £3,216,000, and in 1881 are estimated at £2,090,000. After setting off the increased railway and telegraph revenue, the total net war expenditure to the end of 1881 is estimated at £5,750,000. The gross expenditure in frontier railways during the present financial year will be £1,670,000, and next year £2,270,000. The total net expenditure under this head is fixed at £3,500,000. The expenditure on productive works in 1878-79 was £3,381,000; in 1879-80, £3,700,000; and in 1880-81 will be £2,500,000, besides the outlay on the East Indian Railway. During the present financial year the Council bills on India will amount to £15,750,000, and next year to £16,900,000. According to the present intention of the Government no loans will be required during the coming year unless unforeseen events should occur, but full powers are reserved to borrow in case of need. The closing cash balances in India at the end of 1879-80 amounted to £14,193,000, and in 1880-81 are estimated at £11,444,000. The rate of exchange is estimated for next year at 1s. 8d. per rupee. The extension of taxation to the official and professional classes has been abandoned for the present. Sir John Strachey considers fresh taxation undesirable under existing financial circumstances. The license tax therefore remains unaltered, except that all incomes below Rs.500 will be exempted. This exemption is tantamount to a remission of taxation to the extent of £340,000. The export duties on indigo and lac are abandoned, causing a loss to the revenue of £54,000. No export duty now remains except on rice No change is proposed at present in the cotton duties, but the pro longed maintenance of these duties is declared to be impossible. The loss to the revenue next year from the previous remission of cotton duties is estimated at £250,000. Notwithstanding the reduction of the salt tax in the greater part of India, salt shows a large increase, both in consumption and revenue. The principal improvement in 1879-80, compared with the estimates, is shown by the following items ;—Opium, £1,900,000; exchange, £1,010,000; public works savings, £661,000; land revenue, £450,000; salt, £362,000; interest, £389,000. Sir John Strachey announced that the Army Commission recommends important measures for increasing the efficiency of the army, combined with an estimated annual saving of £1,250,000. This amount is not credited in the budget. Sir John Strachey stated that his plans regarding the Famine Insurance Fund had completely succeeded, and that the object of this fund had been thoroughly fulfilled. The restriction of the expenditure on productive public works to £2,500,000 had, however, checked the efforts of the Indian Government to protect the country from famine by the construction of cheap railways and canals. The war estimates had hitherto proved, and were believed to be, ample for all contingencies at present contemplated. A comparison between the present total net ordinary expenditure compared with that of twelve years back shows, apart from the loss by exchange, only a trifling increase either in the civil or military charges. Even including the loss by exchange the total net expenditure shows no increase, owing to the improvement in railways and canals.

THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

WE understand that a committee is being formed and a fund organised to assist individual efforts under due advice to obtain redress or compensation for the ruin to prospects of the officers of the Indian Medical Services caused by the Orders of the Government of India, published in the Gazette of India of Jan. 3, comments on which extracted from the Indian Press have already appeared in our columns. This general order reduces the numbers of deputy surgeons general to less than one-half of the present fixed establishment, and thus precludes the possibility of even 2 per cent. of the present members of the service ever attaining an adequate retiring pension. By abolishing the highest office (surgeon general) and placing the department in each presidency under a surgeon general of the British service, the general order quoted is held by those affected to practically convert the Indian Medical Service into a subordinate section of the Army Medical Department. And it is argued that the changes directed in the constitution, organisation, and the sweeping reductions made in the superior grades of the Indian Medical Services, by General Order No. 13, of Jan. 3, 1880, constitute beyond doubt a direct violation of guarantees given by Parliament to the medical officers of the late East India Company's forces in 1858 and 1862. It is obvious that the action of the committee must depend on the results of Dr. Playfair's advocacy in the House of Commons and the reply given to his question. The committee, under the presidency of Mr. James Cowan, M.P., have in tbe meantime established their temporary offices at 8, Northumberland-street, and invite the adhesion of all friends of Indian medical officers, who are themselves precluded by the Army Regulations from "adopting collective action." It is feared that the general order referred to having been published is now irrevocable, but it is confidently hoped that the movement for reparation will result in its modification, as far as causing the surgeon general in each Presidency to be selected on every alternative terms from the Indian services, and in procuring substantial increase to the rates of retiring pensions for all members of the service, in lieu of the special pensions now granted to surgeon general and deputy surgeon general.

THE EUPHRATES VALLEY ROUTE TO INDIA.

ON Wednesday evening Mr. W. P. Andrew read a paper before the Society of Arts on this topic. The chair was occupied by Lord Stathnairn. The lecturer introduced the subject by pointing out the present interests of the Central Asian Question and the importance of preparing to counteract the Russian schemes by a direct and rapid route to our Eastern possessions. The lecturer sketched the ancient history of the Valley of the Euphrates, and described the former fertility of Mesopotamia which could be restored by irrigation and the colonisation attendant on the construction of the Euphrates Valley Railroad. Compared with other routes this possesses the advantage of being the shortest, cheapest, and most defensible. From an engineering and political point of view its superiority had been established before the select committee of the House of Commons which in 1872 investigated the various proposals for connecting the Mediterranean and the Black Sea with the Persian Gulf. The advantages of the proposed undertaking from a military point of view were placed beyond question by the evidence of Gen. Chesney, of Capt. Tyler, R.E., and of those experienced soldiers, Sir Henry Green and Col. Malcolm Green, and more especially by the weighty testimony of Field Marshal Lord Strathnairn; whilst its importance in a political sense was established by many witnesses, including Sir Bartle Frere, the late lamented Sir Donald M'Leod, Mr. Palgrave, Col. Herbert, her Majesty's Consul General at Bagdad, Mr. Eldridge, Consul General at Beyrout, and, pre-eminently, the "Great Elchi," the venerated Lord Stratford de Redcliffe. Since that time the French, Italians, and Russians had been extending their lines of steamers with the East, while the Russians, by pushing roads and railways, had their desire to obtain the trade of Central Asia, which would be secured for us by the Euphrates and Indian lines together, making Karachi the European port of India. This would save 1,000 miles, as well as the monsoon divergence, besides avoiding the heat of the Red Sea. Mr. Andrew admitted the importance of a through railway from Constantinople to India, but considered it too vast a project, while his proposed line from Scanderoon to Kowait would naturally form a part of such a future scheme, which would require a port in Northern Syria for its construction although the precise line to be adopted was not insisted on. Mr. Andrew observed that, passing, in the first place, from Alexandretta, the proposed terminus on the Mediterranean, to Aleppo, a great entrepôt of trade, the route from that place to the Persian Gulf having much the strongest arguments in its favour, would appear to be that recommended by Captain Felix Jones, keeping on the right bank of the Euphrates for the whole distance, beyond the reach of inundations, and passing by way of Annah, Hit (the Is of Herodotus), the holy cities of Kerbela and Nedjef (or Meshed Ali), Semárwah, and Súk-esh-Sheyukh to Kowait or Grain, on the Persian Gulf. This line would not pass many miles from Bagdad, and would not cross the Euphrates, thus being the shortest and cheapest. The general features of the projected Euphrates Valley Railway were thus briefly summed up:—It would connect the Mediterranean with the head of the Persian Gulf, between which and Karachi and Bombay regular communication is now maintained by a line of powerful steamers subsidised by the Indian Government. Making Karachi the European port of India in place of Bombay, it would save about 1,000 miles in the distance between England and India, and would reduce the time occupied in the journey by several days. It would render it possible to maintain India with a smaller European garrison than is now necessary, and would thus reduce our military expenditure. It would save the Government large sums, in sudden emergencies, by the facilities it would afford—and that at all seasons of the year—for the transport of troops and stores. It would enable troops from England to be landed at Karachi in about fourteen days, and in two or three days more at Lahore, Peshawur, or Delhi. It would subject an enemy advancing towards the north western frontier of India to easy attack in the flank and rear, and would render the invasion of India all but impossible. It would render the resources of England so promptly available in the East that any hostile movement directed against us, whether from within or without our Indian frontier, might thus be effectually checked before it could assume formidable proportions. It would give our extensive military establishments in India a direct influence in support of our power and prestige in Europe. It would give England the first strategical position in the world. It would facilitate the protection of Asia Minor by England. It would relieve Persia from the predominating influence of Russia by giving her access to a port on the Mediterranean. It would be easily defensible by England, both of its termini being on the open sea. It would be protected, on the flank most likely to be assailed, by two formidable rivers, the Euphrates and Tigris. The length of the railway, from Alexandretta, on the Mediterranean, to Grain, on the Persian Gulf, would be about 920 miles. The country is admirably adapted for the construction of a railway, and the cost of the line is estimated at from £8,000 to £10,000 per mile. The capital which would be required would thus be under ten millions. The military and political value of the Euphrates line is a matter of extreme moment, and its decided bearing on the defence, not only of Turkey, but of Persia, and the whole district lying between the Mediterranean, the Caspian, and the Indian Ocean, was shown by reference to the recorded opinions of Baron Von Kuhnenfeldt. Mr. Andrew concluded by saying that "another nation, as Lord Beaconsfield, some years ago, took occasion to remind us, is slowly, but surely, extending her power eastwards, and is gradually establishing a footing in military positions from which she can at once menace our empire in the East and diminish our power and prestige among the nations of Europe; and I would close this paper by urging my conviction that, if we continue to neglect securing the establishment of the Euphrates route under the auspices of Great Britain, we shall speedily find that the shortest, easiest, and safest route to our Eastern possessions has fallen into the hands of our most powerful rival for commercial and political ascendency in the East."

A discussion followed, in which Sir Henry Tyler (president of the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada), Sir H. Drummond Wolff, M.P., and other gentlemen took part, and the two gentlemen named cordially acquiesced in the value of the Euphrates Valley Railway.—Commander Cameron, R.N., however, while agreeing with Mr. Andrew as to the vast importance of a railway from the Mediterranea nto the Persian Gulf, urged the advantages which the route of the Tigris presented over the Euphrates Valley route. He suggested a line commencing at Tripoli and extending to Bushire, and ultimately to Karachi, with extensions into Persia.—Mr. Hanbury, M.P., endorsed Commander Cameron's views.—Mr. Scott Russell warmly advocated, in opposition to the Euphrates Valley scheme, a through line of communication from Calais, through Vienna, Belgrade, Constantinople, Mosul, along the Tigris to Bagdad, through Persia, and thence to Karachi. Such a line would, he said, have the warm co-operation of all the European States, and would prove remunerative.—Mr. Andrew briefly replied, pointing out that it had been found utterly impossible to obtain a combination of capitalists sufficiently strong to carry out the scheme advocated by Mr. Scott Russell, which he had himself considered years ago.

THE PROPOSED "INDO-MEDITERRANEAN" RAILWAY.

COMMANDER V. L. CAMERON C.B., R.N., on Friday, in the presence of a very large audience, at the Royal United Service Institution, gave a lecture on the subject of "My Travels in Mesopotamia, especially with reference to the proposed Euphrates Valley Railway." General Sir W. Codrington presided. Commander Cameron reminded his audience that the subject of railway communication between the Mediterranean and the Persian Gulf had already been discussed, but the difference between his views and those of his predecessors was on the subject of route only, for he agreed in the main idea that it was of the utmost importance to us, as a country, strategically, commercially, and politically, to connect the Persian Gulf and the Mediterranean Sea by a line of railway which ultimately might be prolonged so as to join our Indian railway system. Instead of being a rival to the Suez Canal, such a line would prove a most important ally, and would enable us to thwart any attempt on our present lines of communication with India.—Colonel Champain questioned whether the railway, if made, would be of any such service to the army, and he pointed out that the transhipments over this route would cause loss of time which would neutralise the shorter distance travelled.—General Sir John Adye, K.C.B., said he had not been convinced that England should, either from a commercial or military point of view, assist in making a railway through Asiatic Turkey. At the present moment our troops and goods for India were taken through the Suez Canal; but, if we had the proposed railway, we should have to throw them on the unhealthy coast of Syria, transport them from the Persian Gulf—not across our own territory, but across that of another country—thus depending upon another nation for the safety of our line of communications. The Suez Canal could not be attacked from the land, and its defence would be a naval question; but, if we had to depend upon the Indo-Mediterranean Railway for our passage to India, we should have to depend upon a route which crossed the very front of Russia. Commercially this proposed line would be foolish, and in a military sense, from a British point of view, it would not only be useless, but dangerous.—Captain Colomb and other speakers followed.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE BURMESE WAR.*

THE readers of Anglo-Burmese history do not make the acquaintance of the author of this well-timed work for the first time. Colonel Laurie is well known to the diminishing number of those who fought in the second Burmese war as one of the old Madras gunners who could write as well as fight. His personal experiences of the second Burmese war have for a long time, in the form of the volumes entitled "Rangoon and Pegu," furnished the standard works of reference on the subject, and the latter, at least, has been for some time out of print. It is not to be wondered at that the events of the last twelve months in Upper Burma have induced him to seek to recall to his countrymen the causes and events of those campaigns which united the fertile and prosperous province of Lower Burma to the Empire of India. As, he says, "people require to be reminded as well as informed," but he has not contented himself merely with a second edition of the former works. The handsome volume before us commences with a sketch of the great Burmese war of 1824, the most expensive and harassing war in which the British had ever been engaged in India. The Burmese arrogance, which regarded the Company as no stronger than it was in the days when a British Governor of Fort St. George "presented a few toys before the footstool of the throne of his Imperial Majesty of Ava, and implored an audience to my servants and a gracious answer to my petition," made the declaration of war a matter of necessity. There is little to be proud of in the ignorance of the conditions and the resources of the country which characterised the plans of Lord Amherst's Government. The two years' war ended indeed in complete victory, the valiant resistance of the Burmese having collapsed after the death of the brave Maha Bandoola, at Donabew. The Burmese showed themselves as enemies not to be depised when posted behind their favourite stockades, and following leaders on whom they could rely. The treaty of Yandaboo placed the Company in possession of Assam and its dependencies and the contiguous petty States of Cachar and Jaintia were excluded from Burman interference. The State of Manipur, whose Raja has just been rewarded with the Star of India for his loyal services in the Naga Hills, was also recognised as independent. The provinces of "Arakan, Yeh, Tavoy, Mergui, and Tenasserim" seemed at the time dearly purchased by an outlay of twelve millions sterling, and a loss of 5,000 men, of whom all but two hundred died of disease. Colonel Laurie offers some very sensible reflections on the lessons to be learned from the operations even of this war half-a-century old. He points out that in the event of our having to reassert the superiority of British arms at Mandalay and coerce the young King, if possible, into common sense, Mandalay could be threatened from Assam. "It has been recently ascertained," says our author, "that the route by which the Burmese effected their last invasion of Assam crossed the Pat-Koi Mountains by a depression of the range where its height is only about 2,500 feet above the sea." We presume the Colonel quotes Mr. Peal, who is our only living authority on the Nongyang route over the Pat-Koi Hills. He says, moreover, that "the range is much lower at a short distance to the east, where it is easily seen that passes exist at 2,000 feet, or less, where the old track is reputed to have been by which the Ahoms and the Burmese army entered. The whole range is covered by a dense tree jungle, and the present route is selected because it presents an easy passage, the country to the east being absolutely uninhabited. Trade communications with China, vid Burma, were the object of Mr. Peal's "adventurous explorations," but it may be again, as it has been, that war must prepare the way for peace and commerce. This is clearly Colonel Laurie's view. He looks back on the past Burmese war and Burmese treaties, and regards the whole subject of our relations with the Court, whether of Amarapura, Ava, or Mandalay, from the standpoint of one who desires to see the substantial benefits of peaceful trade accruing to our fellow-subjects and our neighbours. If this seems somewhat digressive, we have caught the trick from him, but we trust that our digression, like his, will not be uninstructive. Colonel Laurie refers to the productiveness of wars, and sums up the objects of the first Burmese war as "precaution, defence, and reparation." He proves to the patient and careful reader that the costly war, as it then seemed, has proved reproductive in the end, if we may use the term, when the end is not yet. Future events are likely to strengthen his proof still more. He quotes two interesting facts àpropos of the first Burmese war: first, the Maharaja of Burdwan refused, and Scindia advanced a loan to the Company. The present Maharaja of Burdwan is about to visit England, as the seat of his feudatory Sovereign, with very different notions from those of his predecessor. Of Scindia's action, Colonel Laurie most strangely remarks, "We question if any of our feudatories of the present day would do likewise." He has certainly not attended closely to the conduct of the Indian princes during the last twelve months or he would not have done such injustice to the loyalty of the great Indian feudatories. We can venture to prophesy that if a third Burmese war made it needful, not only money, but men, would be forthcoming. The Manipur contingent who relieved Kohima would readily march on Mandalay. A needful war, not for lust of annexation, but to vindicate the honour of the Suzerain, or defend the threatened public peace, would find abundant support volunteered Colonel Laurie introduces the second Burmese war with these words:—"The Treaty of Yandabu guaranteed the security of our merchants and of our commerce. There was to be no oppression of British subjects. The merchants trading at Rangoon were to be liable to no inordinate exactions. On the whole, it seemed as if civilisation had taken a stride, and, from intercourse with our countrymen, that the empire founded by Alompra was in a fair way to gain reason and wisdom." The story of the insults to our Residents, of unjust exaction, and more intolerable insults inflicted on British merchants, of insolence on the part of the Burmese officials, and evasions on the part of the Burmese Court, which resulted "in the determination to enforce satisfaction from the Golden Foot" on the part of the vigorous and brilliant ruler of British India, are well retold by Colonel Laurie. Desirous of peace, but sternly resolute to let them have war with a vengeance if they would, Lord Dalhousie offered terms, but paltered not with the enemies of the Empire. The author's account, vivacious and graphic, of the warlike operations in which he took part, and of those which complete the stirring story of the second Burmese war, well deserves perusal. The last war but one, in which a prominent part was taken by the Indian Navy, to whose share fell so much of the hard work that they deserved more of the laurels of success, added renown to the Madras Army as well as to that of Bengal, nor less to the most recently enrolled troops of the Indian Army, the gallant Sikhs, whose splendid service the author was one of the first to chronicle. The storming of the Shwe Dagon Pagoda and the defence of Pegu are episodes of British warfare that are ever new. In this second as in the first war, the Burmese troops proved themselves no ignoble or despicable foe. The story of the small but difficult campaign against the gallant partisan Myat-H'toon, in the storming of whose stockade Sir Garnet Wolseley, then ensign of her Majesty's 80th Regiment, was wounded whilst leading the assault, forms a most interesting supplement to the history which closes with the annexation of Pegu. The Governor General in his despatch, quoted by Colonel Laurie, said, "By the annexation of Pegu we hold in the easy grasp of our hand the kernel of the Burmese Empire; why should we, by the occupation of Ava, encumber ourselves with an armful of worthless rind? But if, after all, peace cannot be procured by anything short of the conquest of Burma; if the lapse of time and the course of events shall establish a real necessity for advance, then let us advance." Colonel Laurie in the third part of his work summarises the subsequent history of our own province of British Burma, with its marvellous growth of prosperity, and of our relations with the late and the present King. The shrewd and sensible monarch who combined a strong desire to make money by trade with an intense eagerness to secure "merits" against his next transmigration, was fully aware of the danger of quarrelling with his powerful neighbours. The mad and vicious career of his successor, which our readers have had presented to them from time to time in our columns, is admirably described and commented on by Colonel Laurie. His views on the possible outcome of the present unsatisfactory state of things are best stated in his own words. "Ever since the conquest of Pegu we have virtually had the entire Burmese Empire at our disposal, so even to talk of annexing now appears hardly correct. We wish peace, good government, and steady commercial prosperity in Upper Burma, and, if there be not in Upper, there can be neither peace nor a thriving commerce in Lower, Burma or Pegu. The one country, through the course of events, has become a part and parcel of the other, which would seem to put the word 'annexation' entirely out of the question." "We all know our empire is too large for more annexation anywhere. Conservatives and Liberals, as a rule, are now

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

THE AFGHAN CAMPAIGN.

THE news from Afghanistan itself has been quite dwarfed in interest by the active preparations made in Bombay for the despatch of troops for Kandahar. Including the Reserves, no less than 15,000 troops are under orders, whilst the despatch of eighty-three guns seems to indicate the speedy commencement of siege operations, and indeed the rumours of an advance from Kandahar are now assuming definite shape. We believe that men have been telegraphed for to take charge of the stores that cannot be carried forward, and that the Bombay troops are to be hurried up with all possible speed. General Stewart will, it is believed, take the Bengal troops on to Ghuzni and upon the Bombay troops under General Phayre will devolve the honourable duty of marching on Herat. In this way the country would simultaneously be overspread; the four leading cities of Cabul, Kandahar, Ghuzni, and Herat be all occupied at the same time; and we should be in an admirable position to dictate terms of peace to the inhabitants of the different districts. The march to Herat would be long, but not difficult, and, so far as the weather is concerned, the troops could probably start for Herat before they could start for Ghuzni. Of course, the difficulties of the political situation would be immensely increased if there was any notion of permanently occupying Herat. But if we merely seized Herat and then gave it over to the Persians, we might undo the effect of much of our late diplomatic blundering. The Persians have had enough of Russia, and if they were assured of our surpport could be turned into warm allies. With an English garrison at Kandahar we might leave the Persians the expensive duty of garrisoning Herat, and yet be able to assist them in the event of a Russian approach. But unless some definite assurance be given that the advance to Herat does not portend anything like permanent occupation, it would be met with strenuous opposition from almost all parties at home. A careful study of the situation itself tells us a good deal. It appears that the Mohmunds are dispersing, but that Ghuzni and Charikar are the headquarsers of many thousands of an unsubdued enemy who are kept in disorderly foment by Mahomed Jan and Meer Butcha, very greatly assisted by the preaching of fanatical mollahs, whilst General Roberts's force is altogether occupied in fortifying the hills which command the Bala Hissar, bridging the Cabul River, constructing roads, and comfortably housing themselves for the winter. We have again and again strongly insisted upon the necessity of augmenting the force at Cabul, and we find that this opinion is universally shared by our contemporaries. If Mahomed Jan could only be driven out of Ghuzni, and his way of escape blocked at Argandeh by a small brigade of all arms from Cabul, one of the most serious of all the recent combinations would be thoroughly broken up. The time is approaching when such a determined blow will be feasible. The Bombay troops are to be hurried to Kandahar as fast as possible, and in six weeks or two months the winter will be nearly over, and then General Stewart, if he be still in command at Kandahar, will be able, at the head of the Bengal troops, to push northward and capture Ghuzni; and, if necessary, effect a junction with the Khyber Valley column headquarters at Cabul. The Government note of Dec. 20 assured us that the Kandahar force could move on Cabul if required. From this we may at least presume that there will be no lack of transport in six weeks or two months. The road to Ghuzni is 230 miles long, and is almost uniformly good throughout, and from the neighbouring country forage and a certain amount of supplies are obtainable. About forty miles, however, from Kandahar near the ruins of the ancient city of Shahr-i-Sofa, the lower or level valley of the Turnak River is covered with snow to a great depth during the winter months. This, however, dissolves about the middle of March, and there is a short defile near Tirandaz. The only serious obstacle, therefore, which presents itself is the snow valley, which, as it cannot, we believe, be turned, will necessitate some further delay, but only such a delay, after all, as will allow the Bombay troops time to start for Herat and give his Excellency Sir Richard Temple the opportunity of being present when they march. A small body of General Stewart's men have recently marched to Khelat-i-Ghilzai, the worst third of the road, in eight days, and might, it is believed, accomplish the whole distance to Ghuzni in from twenty to twenty-four days. And, as a case in point, we may remember that Sir John Keane's force, which left Kandahar on June 27, 1839, reached Ghuzni on the 21st of the next month. The town of Ghuzni, about one mile in circumference, is fortified with walls forty feet high and surrounded by a wet ditch, but we do not believe these ramparts could long resist the fire of our siege guns. Once arrived at Ghuzni, there would be no difficulty in collecting abundant supplies of food and forage, for the surrounding country is largely cultivated. If, however, it should prove that the Government have miscalculated the transport train required to enable General Stewart to advance, it is just possible that a dashing march, like that of Gourko's over the Balkans, without tents, halting for a few days and establishing a depot at Khelat-i-Ghilzai, would surmount all difficulties. From Ghuzni to Cabul, another eighty miles, the road is fairly good, and has nothing tactically significant about it except the Leana-i-Sher (Ghuzni) Pass, which is about two miles long, and the ascent of which, though considerable, is easy. The dispersion, if not utter destruction, of Mahomed Jan's rabble, coupled with the junction of the Kandahar force with that of Cabul, would assuredly tend to strike terror into the hearts of the Kohistanis and the people in the Logar Valley. The total distance from Kandahar to Cabul, 316 miles, is usually traversed by caravans in fifteen days and by horsemen in eight days. Water is abundant, and supplies are procurable at any time of the year. As far as Ghuzni, at all events, the enemy are very unlikely to make a stand, and the only difficulty to be overcome is the snow. But by the time we are really ready to march the worst of the snow will have disappeared, and, while the Bengal men join their comrades at Cabul, the Bombay troops will at last have the opportunity afforded them of playing one of the most important parts in the whole campaign and of bringing the war in Afghanistan to a much-desired conclusion.—Times of India.

THE IRISH RELIEF FUND.

THREE years have scarcely passed over us since the terrible and heartrending accounts of the famine in India elicited substantial response from the land peculiarly known for its hospitality and generosity, of the three small countries of the Far West. Now, though not called upon directly, for Ireland modestly and becomingly appeals to Irishmen in India, it is no less incumbent on us to come forward with the aid which it is our bounden duty to render. The Lord Mayor, who makes this appeal, was the medium through which £13,000 were transmitted to the Indian Famine Relief Fund in its severest stage. The princes, rajas, and maharajas will no doubt heartily answer this call of distress, but it should be obligatory on each citizen of this place to contribute according to his means. Many have been engaged on these famine relief works directly and indirectly, and have witnessed more or less the dire and ghastly spectacles that were at times seen; with the memory of that we trust that no sooner is a subscription list opened in Madras than all will willingly throw in their mite. There is a saying, and not the less true because it is a saying, that the poor help the poor, so poverty need not be scared at the large sums contributed by others. If we do our best it is all that is required, for the best can do no more.—Madras Native Opinion.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

THE NORTHERN PUNJAB RAILWAY.—The progress of the Northern Punjab State Railway contrasts unfavourably with that of the Kandahar line. It is now clear that the extension to Rawul Pindi will not, as was expected, be opened in May. It is, however, hoped that a temporary line may be ready by July.—Times Telegram.

WOOLLEN MANUFACTURE IN INDIA.—We have received the prospectus of a new business which is being started in the Punjab under the title of the Egerton Woollen Mills Company. The object of this new company is to manufacture, by machinery, not only blankets, but the form of shawl so much in demand from Peshawur to Calcutta, called the lohi. The company also propose to manufacture serges of all kinds. If the figures in the estimates are in any way correct—and we understand they have been thoroughly gone into, down to the smallest matter of detail both here and in England—there is evidently a great future before this new industry—new only as regards India. For hitherto there has been no attempt to manufacture wool by machinery in India, if we except gaol blankets and carpeting and a small manufactory of blankets at Cawnpore. Apart from the manufacture of blankets and lohis, the manufacture ought to receive at the hands of Government every kind of encouragement, for the amount of serge annually consumed by the European and native troops in India must be something very large. We are credibly informed that the cost of cloth imported from England to the Army Clothing Agency in Calcutta amounts to halt a million ot money, and the saving of the exchange alone on such a sum ought to afford the Government sufficient reason to encourage this new enterprise, it the company can furnish as good an article as that supplied from England.—Pioneer.

THE FOREIGN TRADERS AND THE BURMESE.—According to the Rangoon Gazette the British Embassy, which has now been stationed for some months on the frontier, is withdrawn to Mandalay. Trade with the latter place is improving, and everything done by the King and his officials to make British subjects believe that they are far better off without a British political agent residing in the Burmese capital. The Embassy sent was composed of officials of low rank, and the British Government has done wisely in not receiving it. Instead of an apology, the British Government was scolded for the hurried removal of its representative, to which was attributed the damage to the trade of both countries. Men of note were carefully kept from being the bearers of this missive to show the people of Upper Burma that the arrogant Court of Theebaw had had no need to choose particular messengers to send to the ruler of the trading "kalas."—Englishman.

THE COMMISSARIAT FRAUDS.—A further batch of European invalids from the frontier recently came to Rangoon. Some inquiry should be made as to the diet these unfortunate soldiers have received of late, and if any sickness is to be traced to inferior food supplied by bribing contractors through bribed officials all the heavier punishment should be meted out to those concerned, it found guilty. England cannot afford to thus trifle with the lives of her soldiers, and it is to be feared a good many of these for some years in Thayetmyo and Tounghoo have suffered at the hands of those who received high pay for looking after their supplies.—Englishman.

BRITISH BURMA—CIVIL JUSTICE.—The Civil Justice Report of British Burma for the year 1878 made its appearance in January, 1880. We imagined, at first, that 1878 must be a misprint for 1879, but closer inspection shows that the title-page is quite correct. The report of the Judicial Commissioner, Mr. R. J. Crosthwaite, is dated April, 1879. The Chief Commissioner took precisely five months to review it. At this rate composition in the Burma Secretariat must be a deliberate affair, as it proceeded at the rate of two short paragraphs a month. Five months more elapsed before the report penetrated to the wilds of Upper India. The remarks regarding the decrease of litigation in the Arakan Hill Tracts seem very strange. The civil suits have decreased from 119 in 1876 to 49 in 1878. "The decrease is due to the fact that such cases are now as often as possible relegated to chiefs of clans for arbitration." "With litigation of so very simple a character, the advantage of having recourse to arbitration is not very apparent" (a decided difference of opinion on this point between the people and their governors' being plain); "and one probable result would be the increase of cost to suitors, and pressure on the part of the chiefs to induce the people to employ services for which they would receive remuneration; as, in Rangoon, the Burmese are said to be prevented from resorting to the courts by the principal men, who constitute themselves arbitrators, and exact large fees for deciding disputes. It is well known that arbitration in Burma is a most unsatisfactory kind of procedure; and, with the growing popularity of the courts in the province generally, as evidenced by the increase in the number of suits of small value, any retrograde measure in the direction of encouragement of arbitration is to be deprecated."—Pioneer.

The deceased had taken two trips to the Sandheads for the benefit of his health, but without deriving much benefit.—Englishman.

THE Madras papers announce the death at the General Hospital of Captain J. F. W. Kane, of H.M.'s 48th Foot, under orders from Cannanore to Secunderabad. The deceased officer fell a victim to fever. Captain Kane entered the army in 1868.

THE TRAIN SERVICE.—The Madras Chamber of Commerce has addressed the board of directors of the Madras Railway in England against the new train service, pointing out that the interests of the mercantile community have not been consulted; that the time allowed between the arrival of the incoming mail from England and the departure of the outward is insufficient for the purposes of correspondence; and that, after all the sacrifice of the interests of the trading community, the saving effected is only 2½ lakhs.—Times of India.

THE RAMPA REBELLION.—The Madras correspondent of a Calcutta paper says:—"It has long been suspected that certain native officials residing in the disaffected districts have been lending aid, and this in more ways than one, to the rebel leaders, and the escape of one of the latter, and one or two rebels of notoriety, from the Rajamundry Gaol a short time since did not lessen the suspicion. It now transpires that the moonsiff of the village of Sundurti has been in league with the celebrated Tamandora, one of Chendriah's lieutenants; he has been detected in giving him food and shelter, and, as a consequence, he has been arrested, and now awaits his trial. Like the majority of natives in Southern India, he was not slow to find a defence. On being questioned as to why he had permitted himself to get entangled in so serious a connection, he alleged that Tamandora had threatened to behead him if he refused the shelter demanded. The argument is no doubt an ingenious one, but it is destroyed by its utter improbability, for it is certain that, with so many of the police and military at hand, he might easily have contrived to warn them of the presence of any rebel leader in the village, to say nothing of his own house, and by this means to have secured the unwelcome visitor's arrest, and the reward set upon the head of every one concerned in the rebellion. A correspondent writes to the Madras Times that every endeavour is being made to give a final and decisive blow to the Rampa rebellion. In order to facilitate this object the agent to the Government of Fort St. George has proposed, and his proposal has been since confirmed, that a party consisting of twenty picked hillmen be raised and ordered to serve directly under Mr. Willock, who is at present actively employed in intercepting the movement of Chendriah and Zamman Dora. The object in raising this body of men is to arrest the movements of the rebel chiefs, as the hillmen are believed to know much about the country and the haunts of the enemy. It is said that the feeling and demeanour of the people of the country are considered to be satisfactory and better disposed towards us. The rebels who were threatening the country between Gutem and Gurtern, it is reported, were surprised by Mr. Willock and defeated at Ramanur. It is rumoured that after the defeat Chendriah and Zamman Dora had proceeded in the direction of Koyyur, but this is considered untrustworthy. It is believed that the rebel chiefs and the remnant of their followers are concealing themselves near Gurtern. The country around Golconda and Batular is now being closely watched by our troops. The inhabitants at the different stations have been warned to watch and report any movement of the rebels and their chiefs. The men who were laid up with fever are fast recovering from it."—Times of India.

ROBBERY OF TELEGRAPH EMPLOYES ON THE EUPHRATES.—Three gentlemen of the Persian Gulf telegraph, out on a shooting excursion along the banks of the Euphrates, are said to have fallen in with pirates, whom they attempted to resist, but came off second best. These gentlemen have returned to the telegraph station at Fao with less property and spirits than when they set out. The pirates have, as usual, escaped; the authorities profess to be making inquiries, and will doubtless shirk the drogoman who, in the absence of the consul, Mr. Robertson, at Bayhood, has to inquire into the case.—Pioneer.

ADEN REPORT.—The Political Agent at Aden reports as follows, under date Jan. 28 :—"The new Governor General of Yemen has arrived at Hodeida, and met with a very hearty reception from the inhabitants, who are as much pleased with him as they were dissatisfied with the retiring Governor General, his predecessor, on account of the oppressive taxes imposed upon them by his order. The new Governor General was formerly at the head of the Turkish Army Corps quartered at Sunea, in which position he gave proofs of his high ability. He is very popular with all classes on account of his kindly disposition. A week before the arrival of the new Governor General at Hodeida a telegram was received from Constantinople ordering the late Governor General to at once release all the Munsuks, Shaiks, and other leading merchants who had been imprisoned at Hodeida for about two years under suspicion of their having indirectly given help, and of keeping up a correspondence with, the Hashed tribe, with whom the Pasha (Governor General) is at war. It is said that the release of these persons was effected through the influence of the new Governor General when he was at Constantinople. It is also reported that a quarantine doctor at Hodeida, who goes on board all buggalows and other vessels to see if there are any cases of disease on board, discovered in one of the buggalows which he visited thirty slaves and gave them in charge of the Motasil (superintendent of police), who, instead of keeping them safe in his charge, privately made them over to an agent of the Daukali slave dealers to be returned to the owners. Some days after this, when the quarantine doctor inquired from the police superintendent about the slaves he (the police officer) looked confused and said they had gone. Thereupon the superintendent and the agent were both imprisoned. All this happened a week before the arrival of the new Governor General, who is now making every endeavour to recover the slaves, and a strict watch is kept on all persons suspected of being connected with the slave trade. The slave dealers are much discouraged by this."—Times of India.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1880.

THE CRITICAL STATE OF BURMESE AFFAIRS.

WE are glad to observe an increasing interest in Burmese affairs. For, seriously speaking, only second in importance to what has been styled the avalanche which was set in motion last year by our occupation of Cabul, and which has been rolling rapidly ever since, has been the course of events in Upper Burma since the withdrawal of the British Resident from Mandalay. Only in the case of Burma events have been gently gliding rather than rushing onward. The disposition of the Court of Mandalay to ignore its treaty obligations, and its utter want of conciliation towards the long-suffering and forbearing Government of India, cannot last much longer; and, doubtless, had our hands not been occupied with work in Afghanistan and elsewhere, the provocative insolence and defiance of the Golden Foot would have been brought to account ere this. The latest news from Burma informs us that the Burmese Embassy at Thayetmyo had failed to produce its powers to conclude a treaty, and that our Government, therefore, would not treat with it. Such a failure was predicted by a few persons not unacquainted with Burmese diplomacy, when they read a fortnight before the telegram announcing that the Burmese Government had "empowered the Embassy to negotiate a new treaty with England," and that the Ambassador had "accordingly applied to the Chief Commissioner for liberty to proceed to India." Lord Lytton, we all know, has been most desirous from the first to avoid war, if possible. What will now be done it is difficult to conjecture; but that affairs are in a critical and unsatisfactory condition as regarding our relations with Upper Burma few will venture to deny. Since Lord Dalhousie exposed the value of Burmese treaty obligations there has always been a disposition on the part of the Burmese Court to evade them if such could be done without open rupture. Next to the Treaty of Yandabu, after the first Burmese War in 1826, which was eventually violated in every possible way, came the three successive treaties in our time of 1855, 1862, and 1867. In the first, notwithstanding the persuasive and conciliatory utterances of such an able administrator and Oriental diplomatist as Sir Arthur Phayre, the King would not sign away Pegu, the glorious inheritance of Alompra. However, some mistrust was removed, and what were considered friendly relations and intercourse with the Burmese Court was established, and, notwithstanding the monopolising obstructiveness of the Burmese monarch, in seven years the merchandise exported from Rangoon rose wonderfully, and the tonnage of the vessels became doubled. Such a steady prosperity as this is perhaps unparalleled in the history of British connection with the East, and when we come to think that the value of the export and import trade, excluding treasure, in 1877-78 amounted to Rs.81,920,257, as compared with Rs.21,310,561 in 1858-59, we must also give Sir Arthur Phayre the highest credit for his labours in the interest of commerce, in the face of many difficulties, by the settlement of the Treaty of 1862. Here, again, although a treaty was signed, the King would not agree to the joint English and Burmese Mission, desired by the Indian Government, to explore the trade of South West China; however, the way was paved on this occasion for the well-known mission, under Major Sladen, in 1867, which, notwithstanding the credit attached to all the officers engaged in it, led to few practical results. Possibly King Mengdon was not displeased at our want of success; but, strange enough, provoking, and frequently petty, obstructions have in some way or other surrounded British exertions with regard to commerce in Upper Burma, ever since the latter year; and when Mengdon died at the end of 1878, his eccentric son Theebaw's dissipated and murderous career began, as if to make the chance of sound friendly relations with the British, in the interest of commerce and civilisation, more distant than ever. It seemed as if King Theebaw, like Siva, as described in the Puranas, was walking up and down Mandalay, bent on every evil, probably "sometimes laughing and sometimes crying." If he could not get back Pegu he seemed determined to make us leave Mandalay, and so the coolness and distrust which had existed for some years between the British and Burmese Governments became more apparent than ever. Affairs are now in a critical state. There are only three courses of action open to us. The first is, to let King Theebaw entirely alone, until he comes to his proper senses, or, losing them altogether, he becomes the aggressor; the next is, to depose the insolent and obstructive sovereign, and place the Nyoungyan Prince on the throne, under our own conditions, and to act thus we must be prepared for a brief and inexpensive war; while the third is the summary annexation of Burma to Pegu, to which "act of violence" the Governments of India and England are decidedly opposed. Perhaps the first plan is the best, when we may await patiently the course of events or the "force of circumstances;" but the present state of Burmese affairs cannot be tolerated very long; and the sooner King Theebaw resolves to put his house in order, the better. Such a prosperous trade as that of British Burma is not easily paralysed; but why should

Digitized by Google

the future of such a rising province be endangered by the acts of a ruler in Upper Burma devoid of all courtesy and humanity, who has turned his capital into a gambling hell, and seems steadily bent on bringing about the ruin of an interesting, beautiful, and valuable country? We must obtain somehow "the goodwill" both of Upper Burma and China; but we are afraid this will never be effected if, under any circumstances, we are led into making a treaty with such an obstructive, self-willed, and licentious potentate as King Theebaw. The last act of this notorious sovereign is characteristic. It is that Theebaw has adopted a policy of "blackmail," having "made a claim of upwards of £10,000 against a Mr. Darwood, a European British subject at Mandalay," forbidding him to leave the capital without payment. The particulars of this remarkable claim have not reached us; but, in a country whence so much silver has been removed, and where even lead, instead of copper, is fast becoming the currency, his unfortunate subjects helplessly regarding the gathering cloud, no act of the present King of Burma will excite the least surprise after the long list of terrible iniquities he has already committed. The late Political Agent at Mandalay will doubtless be glad of his removal to a sphere of order in Central India after the chaos which he witnessed in Upper Burma. Its condition at present is simply deplorable; and the hand of a forbearing and humane Government like ours could not be better employed than in its amelioration. Such a Government, Lord Dalhousie wrote, in immortal words, must never give "countenance to a doubt of the absolute superiority of its arms and of its continued resolution to assert it." It has been remarked that the present King's youth and want of judgment has brought Upper Burma into its present lamentable condition. This might serve as an excuse in some cases; but we are afraid, judging from what has taken place at Mandalay during the past year, in the case of King Theebaw it is "Just as the twig is bent the tree's inclined!"

The condition of affairs in Burma, though not at present alarming, is certainly critical, and deserves serious attention to prevent any sad result from surprise which may come upon us at any moment. The "Shoe question" and the murder of so many sons and daughters of the royal blood may possibly be forgotten in what may yet come. A few people are now beginning to learn that where every corner of the King's palace at Mandalay is considered a sacred shrine of Gautama under the sacred H'tee, to require foreigners to doff their shoes is not a political exaction on the part of the Golden Foot; and, again, that in a land where the King is bound by no rules of primogeniture, and may nominate what successor he pleases, to murder superfluous princes and get rid of intriguing princesses—considering "Burman custom" in general—is not a very extraordinary proceeding after all. They have a right to think in this manner if they please. Still, nineteenth century civilisation and humanity shudder at the wholesale massacres which have taken place, and demand that we should look earnestly and promptly into the state of affairs in Upper Burma. If this be not done we are afraid that King Theebaw, while bringing ruin on himself and his country, will yet raise a minor storm in the political atmosphere of Mandalay which may cause us as much anxiety as Cabul and Herat. The crisis which has arisen in the Valley of the Irrawadi requires "a calm head, a clear eye, and and an iron hand" to ensure its removal.

EQUESTRIAN STATUE TO LORD GOUGH.—The ceremony of unveiling the equestrian statue of Lord Gough took place in the Phœnix-park, Dublin, on Saturday. The statue was cast from cannon taken by troops under Lord Gough's command, and granted by Parliament for the purpose. The Lord Lieutenant and the Duchess of Marlborough were received by the committee and conducted to the daïs. The Lord Lieutenant described the statue as the enduring monument of a nation's homage to one of her worthiest and bravest sons. He referred to the characteristics of Lord Gough who, he said, was pre-eminently an Irishman. Five times he was thanked by Parliament, and his Sovereign raised him to the peerage. After alluding to the fitness of the site, his Grace handed over the statue to Sir John Michel, commander of the forces in Dublin, who urged Irishmen to keep it as an everlasting memento of their glory.

HER MAJESTY'S TROOPSHIP "EUPHRATES."—After a long deliberation as to the expediency of incurring the expense of a voyage of the Euphrates to India and back for the sake of providing passage accommodation for officers, it has been decided by the India-office that she shall leave as originally settled on March 16. We understand that no troops will be carried either on the outward or homeward voyage. It will be relief to officers who have families to take out to learn that the troopship is going, as the prospect of having to pay for their passages even at contract rates was a very serious one.—Broad Arrow.

DISASTER AT SEA.—The ship Twigg, Captain Byce, which put into Plymouth on Tuesday, while on a voyage from Calcutta to London, with wheat, jute, &c., reports having experienced heavy weather, during which two of the crew were lost overboard and two others died from exposure. The Twigg left Calcutta on Nov. 29, and experienced fair weather up to the 13th inst., when a gale sprang up. On the following day a native was washed overboard and drowned, and another native died from exposure. The gale gradually increased in violence, and on Wednesday it blew a hurricane. During the afternoon of that day a heavy sea broke over the vessel, and Robert Michell, the mate, of Greenock, who was working at the pumps, was carried overboard and drowned. On this day, also, another native died from exposure. The seas continued to break over the vessel, filling the deck cabins with water to a depth of 3ft. The water was, however, with difficulty pumped out. Soon after the gale moderated, and fine weather was met with to Plymouth.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

COL. MACGREGOR'S MEMORANDUM.

Mr. GRANT-DUFF having asked for some information from the Chancellor of the Exchequer relative to a plan for sending British and Indian troops from India to Armenia, supposed to have been drawn up by Lieut. Col. Macgregor, assistant quartermaster general, before the Constantinople Conference, and published in the Statesman newspaper,

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that he had never heard of the document before, but the Under Secretary for India would state what was known about it. Thereupon,

Mr. E. STANHOPE explained that it was a note received from Lieut. Col. Macgregor of his return journey to Asia, through Western Asia and Beluchistan, but it was entirely unofficial, and had never been recorded in any department, nor was he aware how it came to be printed in the Statesman; as it was of a confidential character it was not intended to publish it.

Mr. GRANT-DUFF repeated a part of his question which had not been answered—whether any document more hostile to us than this was to Russia had been discovered at Cabul, and, if so, whether the Government would publish it.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER declined to enter into any discussion on this point.

THE TROOPS IN AFGHANISTAN.

Mr. GOURLEY asked the Under Secretary of State for India if he would inform the House if the whole of the troops engaged in the Afghan campaign had been provided with proper winter camp equipments, including fur coats, caps, and mittens; if it was correc that large numbers of transport animals when forwarded from depott were either to old, too weedy, or too sore, so as to be totally un-s fitted for working purposes; whether it was also true that large numbers of valuable elephants, horses, and bullocks were lost for want of food and proper drivers; and whether he could state why General Gough's supplies at Jugdulluk, when ordered to relieve General Roberts, had been reduced to six days' food and forage.

Mr. STANHOPE said the troops on the 16th January last were fully supplied. In all campaigns certain transport animals were rendered unfit for service, but there was no reason to suppose that in this case the number of horses, elephants, and bullocks that had died was large. General Gough was not ordered to advance to the relief of General Roberts, but the fact remained that he did advance, and that he had sufficient supplies.

THE EXECUTIONS AT CABUL.

Sir C. DILKE asked the Under Secretary for India whether the report expected from India on this subject would contain a complete list of the names of the Afghans executed, together with full statement of the offences with which they were charged, and th ndings of the courts or commission which tried them.

Mr. E. STANHOPE said that what the Government of India stated that they are sending home was a complete and tabular statement.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY, FEB. 20.

THE DUKE OF ARGYLL ON AFGHANISTAN.

The Duke of ARGYLL attacked the policy of her Majesty's Government in reference to the kingdom of Afghanistan. He conceived the Ministerial reasons for that policy to be—first, the danger of Russian advance; secondly, the growing hostility of the late Ameer; and, thirdly, the policy of the late Government. He took issue with the Ministers on those propositions. The great advances of Russia were made between the years 1864 and 1869; and there was not a shadow of truth in the allegation that any change as to Russian advances had occurred between the time when Lord Mayo made his promises to the Ameer and that at which Lord Northbrook was Viceroy under the late Administration. He then proceeded to argue, on the authority of papers printed in the Blue-book, that the late Government had promised quite as much to Shere Ali as the present Government had to Yakoob Khan; but what Shere Ali had always striven for was that this country should give him an unconditional guarantee. He acquitted Lord Cranbrook of any intentional unfairness; but the noble viscount drew up a most misleading despatch, on which Ministerial candidates all over the country had been making perfectly unfounded charges against the late Government in representing that they had offered nothing to Shere Ali. He attributed this to the circumstance that, on assuming the office of Secretary for India, Lord Cranbrook found himself in the hands of a body of Russophobists. If the Ameer had been thrown into the hands of Russia it was by the conduct of her Majesty's Government. He believed that had they treated him kindly he would have come round to us. He characterised as "twaddle" the reported words of Yakoob Khan, when sitting, with a rope round his neck, in the camp of General Roberts, of his father's hostility towards this country having existed since 1873. In reference to one of Lord Lyton's despatches, accusing Shere Ali of coquetting with Russia, the noble duke quoted the commandment, "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour," and he declared that Sir Louis Cavagnari was a victim of the wilful ignorance and of the policy of her Majesty's Government. Amid cheers, he concluded an animated speech, which occupied two hours and twenty minutes in its delivery, by asserting that we had elements of permanent strength in India if we only reverted to the policy of forty years ago, and reversed that of the present Ministry, which had cast a lasting stain on the honour of the British Crown. Before sitting down he moved for the Russian correspondence found at Cabul.

Lord CRANBROOK considered that the history of the noble duke was opposed to the facts. He seemed to argue that a policy forty years old was still to be adhered to. The account given by himself in his despatch was accurate and complete. The papers moved for would not be produced, and the Duke of Argyll knew that the Pioneer was not a Government organ, and that the Secretary was not answerable for Sir H. Rawlinson's statements. With regard to the condition of Afghanistan, the Government would not be turned aside from their policy by a great calamity such as the murder of the envoy. Lord Cranbrook referred to communications between Lord Northbrook and the then Government and Shere Ali to show that the Viceroy had been prepared to give the desired assurances to the Ameer, but had been checked, and the matter had been postponed. It seemed clear that at the time of the Umballa conferences the Ameer would have admitted English envoys to some of the cities if he could have obtained the desired concessions. The events of 1877 had been already fully discussed and were long and irrelevant. As to the ridicule thrown by the noble duke on the idea of Russian advances, Lord Cranbrook argued that the Russian messages and missions to Shere Ali could leave no doubt on any man's mind that Russia had put her hand on Afghanistan with the view of making it her base of operations against us in India; but, notwithstanding that, Lord Lytton did everything possible to bring about a satisfactory arrangement with the Ameer without recourse to hostilities. Lord Cranbrook pointed out that we had, in the first instance, abstained from advancing on Cabul in order not to break up Afghanistan, which, however, had only of recent years become a united kingdom. After the murder of the Envoy our troops had been compelled to occupy Cabul, and General Roberts had kept up subordination and invited the sirdars to co-operate with him. Her Majesty's Government believed they could hand Afghanistan over to those who would be able to hold their own. Recurring to the details of the sudden attack on the Embassy, Lord Cranbrook said that the Envoy was sent at the request of the Ameer, and the escort fixed by the Envoy himself, who had every reason to trust the Ameer. The bravery and intelligence of Lieut. Hamilton were briefly eulogised by Lord Cranbrook, who then characterised the attack of the Duke of Argyll on Lord Lytton as unbecoming, and concluded by warmly asserting that her Majesty's Government had broken no pledges and had made no promises which they were not prepared to carry out, and that they would hold the advantages already obtained.

Lord NORTHBROOK insisted that, when Viceroy, he acted wisely in using no compulsion to make Shere Ali receive European agents, and contended that since his Viceroyalty compulsion had been used with that end. He condemned the policy of the late war, while he gave our troops, both British and native, the highest credit for the manner in which they performed their duty. He did not think the position of Persia was such as to render it desirable that we should undertake any liabilities on her account. He therefore hoped there would be no arrangement with her to occupy Herat; while at the same time we should continue in the resolution that Herat must never be occupied by Russia.

Lord HAMMOND pointed out that if Persia occupied Herat Russia would have a treaty right to establish a consulate there.—Lord STRATHNAIRN pointed out the difficulties of a military occupation of Afghanistan.—Lord NAPIER of MAGDALA expressed a hope that we should not withdraw from Afghanistan until we had a safe neighbour there.

The LORD CHANCELLOR twitted the Opposition with the "unreality" of the debate. Every one of the quotations cited by the Duke of Argyll that evening were used before their lordships during a debate in the session of 1878, when one of the largest majorities known in that House for many years decided against the views of the noble duke, which on the present occasion were brought forward for the fourth time. He held that the Government and the late Lord Lawrence were of accord as to the end to be attained with respect to Afghanistan. They differed as to the means, and he asserted with confidence that the means adopted by the Government were less dangerous than those advocated by Lord Lawrence. He regretted that the questions discussed that evening had not been brought forward on a motion which would have tested the opinion of the House.

Lord GRANVILLE upheld the position taken by the Duke of Argyll, whose speech, he said, was full of facts. He concurred with the noble duke in charging that Lord Lytton had used threats, and by them had driven the Ameer into the hands of Russia. He said her Majesty's Ministers contradicted one another every month, and he was stupid enough not to know even at that moment what their policy was. As the Government had stated that they could not produce the papers moved for by his noble friend, the noble duke was not going to press his motion. If his noble friend did he could not support him; but he thought that the Government and their supporters had not always shown themselves anxious to prevent the publication of what might create ill feeling between this country and Russia.

Lord BEACONSFIELD observed that the thing which the Duke of Argyll and those who supported him carefully did not do was, take the opinion of the House on the charges which they brought against her Majesty's Government upon a subject of the very highest importance to the Empire. He did not blame Russia for looking to Central Asia at a time when war between her and England was regarded as imminent, and when, consequently, she had to look to every means of embarrassing this country. But then it became the duty of her Majesty's Government to secure possession of the gates of our great empire of India. That object had been achieved, and he believed we should hold those gates for ever. The Government never had deviated from their policy in this matter. They had acted with consistency arising from a clear conviction of the object to be attained; and he believed that the opinion of the House now remained what an overwhelming majority declared it to be in 1878.

The motion was withdrawn.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY, FEB. 20.

INDIA STOCK.

Mr. FRESHFIELD asked the Under Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been drawn to a letter in the Times of Jan. 12 regarding powers of attorney granted by holders of India Five per Cent. Stock for the receipt of dividends thereon; and whether any steps were in contemplation to render such powers applicable to the Four per Cent. Stock offered by the Secretary of State in Council in exchange.—Mr. E. STANHOPE took the opportunity of informing the holders of the Five per Cent. Stock that this point had been considered, and that a bill was now being prepared to render their powers of attorney applicable to the Four per Cent. Stock offered in exchange, and he hoped shortly to introduce it.

THE NEW DIAMONDS, DIAMANTÉ BRILLIANTS,

have created an extraordinary sensation in Paris, and are rapidly and deservedly superseding real diamonds. Their cost is about 1-300th less. These magnificent Stones first attracted notice at the Paris Exhibition last year, where they were exposed side by side with real diamonds of great value, and they are now introduced into England for the first time. They are absolutely identical in size, brilliancy, lustre, and durability with real diamonds of the first water, and defy detection even by jewellers and experts. They are immeasurably superior to real diamonds of second-rate quality. THE MANUFACTURER GUARANTEES THE SURPRISE AND PLEASURE OF PURCHASERS. These brilliants can be worn in the strongest daylight, which is practically the real test of perfection, and the most sceptical will be utterly deceived. They can be mounted side by side with real diamonds of the first quality, and will be found undistinguishable therefrom. They are worn at the Court Balls, and upon all occasions in Paris and St. Petersburg. The prohibitive prices charged in England for real diamonds render their acquisition impossssble to the middle classes, and the imitation diamonds hitherto sold are worthless, the imposition being manifest to the most careless observer. The DIAMANTÉ BRILLIANTS can, on the contrary, be worn with absolute and entire confidence at all times and for a lifetime, and, as we have said above, defy the closest scrutiny. Purchasers invariably repeat their purchases. The investigations and labour of two generations have been expended in bringing these remarkable jewels to their present state of perfection.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.
